KENNINGTON THEATRE.

On Monday, Aug. 5, the Drama, entitled "IN HOLY RUSSIA."

Mr. H. B. Brandreth, the enterprising manager of Mr. Robert Arthur's Kennington Theatre, exercised a wise discretion in arranging for In Holy Russia as the attraction for the August holiday-week. The play is of the class which appeals with irresistible force to the varied emotions of a holiday audience, and on Monday night it held a crowded house enthralled. The story is chiefly centred in political affairs in Russia, and around the persecution of the Rubinoffs, and the ultimate punishment of their persecutors, the Natolskis, is woven a plot which contains many strong dramatic situations, full advantage of which is taken by Mr. J. Rice Cassidy's capable company. The staging is excellent, the second and third acts especially containing fine scenic effects. Chief honours are carried off by Mrs. J. Rice Cassidy as Renee Rubinoff, the heroine, who is only just saved from assassinating the Czar by the intervention of Sir Harry Beresford, the British Ambassador, who falls in love with her. Mrs. Cassidy is a powerfully dramatic actress, and scores a veritable triumph. Mr. Frank Copeland is an excellent Ambassador; and Mr. Ralph Leslie does very well as Count Gregori Petrolski, the people's friend, who is chiefly instrumental in circumventing Mme. Natolski, the latter difficult rôle being ably assumed by Miss Alice Marsden, who is an artist of considerable power and talent. Mr. Frederick Lloyd as Michael Natolski, and Miss Agnes Durham as Natalie Natolski, enact their respective parts in creditable fashion; and Mr. Carl Rovinelli gives a clever character study of the Nihilist leader, Laurice Steragoff. The comedy side of the piece is well supplied by Mr. Arthur Stratton as Colonel Richard Forrest and Mr. J. Rice Cassidy as Micky Nolan, his servant. Both are comedians of undoubted merit, and when they are about merriment reigns supreme. Mr. Robert Cockcroft makes a stately and dignified Czar; and Mr. Joe Cuthbertson is alert and resourceful as Chief of the Russian Police. Miss Florence Creagh is clever as Catska Lavotski, the police spy; and Miss Annie Dudley deserves a word of praise for her Mrs. Richard Forrest. Other characters are well taken by Mr. James Kay, Mr. Jerold E. Reed, Mr. Edwin Vernon, and Mr. Alfred Lewis.

GRAND THEATRE, ISLINGTON.

On Monday, Aug. 5, the Drama, entitled "THE BEAST AND THE BEAUTY."

This theatre has reopened its doors after the summer vacation, and the Messrs. Melville, who still continue to direct the destinies of the house, selected the above drama, which so far had not previously been seen here. Mr. Melville, like his brother, is a dramatist with a purpose, and this play of his serves to point out possible consequences of intemperance, not only in a present generation, but in a future one. He is no half-hearted workman, and so we get a succession of pictures, all of an exciting and interesting nature, that succeeds in holding the attention of the audience from start to finish. Miss Marion Denvil, who plays the beauty, invests the part with a refined style, and quite realises the character of the unsophisticated country girl. Her entrance was the signal for a demonstrative greeting, and floral expressions of regard were also handed over the footlights. Miss East Robertson as Delilah enacted the heavy rôle with conviction, her performance being altogether commendable. Miss Mattie Everett as Mimi, in a comedy rôle, had little to do, but did that little well. Mr. Ashley Page as Barrymore, the "beast," scored a distinct hit, and his reception on making his first entry proved the regard which local audiences have for him. His portrayal of the son of a degenerate father is well conceived and as cleverly depicted, and his success was never for a moment in doubt. Mr. Edward Thane as the Earl presented a character study of great merit, his acting in the earlier portion of the piece being of an especially high order. Mr. D. C. Aubrey as Denver played the heavy part in his usual accomplished manner, working hard and successfully. Mr. Johnny Chippendale as Chicken did well in the comedy rôle, making the most of his opportunities. Mr. Eric Campbell as Sampson gave one of the best performances of the evening. His stalwart physique enables him to look the fighting-man to the life, and his equally robust acting completed a valuable piece of work. Mr. John Sargent as Soans submitted a study of a surly ruffian that was well done; Mr. F. L. Lawrence as the Priest was commendably impressive; and Mr. Gerald Morgan was amusing as the Landlord. Mr. Frank Harrison was satisfactory as Mr. Sharp; and a large number of smaller parts were adequately dealt with by the remaining members of the company. A very great deal of care has been taken with the production, and the mounting is a very good example of scenic art, real birds and rabbits being utilised to assist the realism of A Woodland Glen. Mr. Gliddon's orchestra contributes agreeably to the pleasure of the evening, and Mr. Gallagher, the acting-manager, is courteous and attentive in the front of the house.

THE CROWN, PECKHAM.

On Monday, Aug. 5, the Drama, entitled "A GIRL'S CROSS ROADS."

No better Bank Holiday attraction could have been provided than the above exciting play, which on Monday last filled the Crown Theatre with a packed audience. Mr. Walter Melville's company gives an admirable interpretation of his drama. That accomplished actress, Miss Hilda Beverley, renders the part of the poor dipsomaniac, Barbara Wade, with much power and artistic skill. Her acting in the scene in Hyde Park in the third act is very fine. The actress has not a word to say, but her varying emotions are wonderfully delineated by artistic facial expression. As the old farmer, John Meadows, Mr. Charles Tranmore makes a great success, and his bluff and hearty style render the character very popular. Miss Isla Garnet Vayne is a sweet and sympathetic Constance Cornell; and Nellie Meadows is very well enacted by Miss Florence Kelsey, who is unsparing in her rendering of the villainous aspect of the character. Mr. Wilson Gunning makes the most of the rôle of the hero, Jack Livingstone; and Mr. Cyril Vernon plays well as the true-hearted Dr. Weston. Miss Fay Garnet Vayne is appropriately pert as the housemaid, Tilly Vane; and Mr. Fred Ingram causes much laughter as the clumsy Toby Turvey, who is a jack-of-all-trades. Mr. Gerald Jordan is excellent as the gentlemanly scoundrel, Cuthbert Lumley; and his accomplice in villainy, Luke Ramsden, is well interpreted by Mr. Fred Withers, who also acts as stage-manager. The scenery and effects are furnished with the care and completeness which are always to be expected from the Messrs. Melville.

ELEPHANT AND CASTLE THEATRE.

On Monday, Aug. 5, the Drama, "MAN TO MAN."

The popular stock company opened their season at the above house on Monday last, when the drama, Man to Man, was presented. The play is full of thrilling incidents from start to finish, and is well acted throughout. Mr. Wilfred Forster gives a fine and impressive impersonation of the sorely-tried hero, George Gordon; and Mr. F. W. Waller is quite at home in the character of Matthew Ellerton. The villainous Richard Ellerton finds an able representative in Mr. Ellis J. Preston; and Mr. Horace Pellock makes an excellent Rev. Philip Ormond. Messrs. Teddy Coleman and Chas. A. East, in the characters of Samuel Plumtree and Bill Burkley, supply the humorous element of the play, in which they are assisted by Miss Blanche Stanley as Miss Lavinia Dove. Miss Bernice Fielding puts just enough hatred into the character of Gipsy Mudge; and Miss Katherine Clarke is a sweet and pathetic Ethel Maythorne. Miss Irene Ross is responsible for a fine piece of acting as Ned Doyle. The drama is well staged. The general-manager, Mr. W. H. Pease, promises some strong dramatic attractions during the coming season.

DALSTON THEATRE.

On Monday, Aug. 5, the Drama, by Chas. E. Clarke, entitled "A BROKEN HEART."

The Dalston Theatre reopened on Bank Holiday, after complete renovation and redecoration, and it now takes its stand among the most handsome playhouses in suburban London. On this occasion and during the week Mr. Harry Foxwell's company appeared in the drama, entitled A Broken Heart. The production is noteworthy if only for the excellent acting, while the scenery calls for more than passing mention. The leading characters in the drama are John Barnard, a master blacksmith (Mr. Harry Cullen Ford), and Mary Barnard (Miss Lilian Herries), and both parts are played with an earnestness and intensity which secures the attention of the audience from start to finish. Mr. Barnard, it should be added, makes an ideal manly blacksmith; while Miss Herries, as the wife who endures a world of trouble and injustice, becomes a decided favourite with the audience, owing to her sympathetic acting. The villainous element is copiously supplied by Mr. Scott Leighton as Stephen Raylton and Mr. Charles Vivian as Gashgills, who is correctly described as a "social terror." Miss Maud Stuart appears in the dual rôle of Miss Grace Fanshawe (a lady of fortune) and Mrs. Kellett. An acceptable sketch of a comfortable provincial woman is provided by Miss Helen Graham as Mrs. Barnard; and Miss Florrie Sorsby as Little May is, by her pathetic rendering of the character, responsible for many a damp eye. The cast also includes Miss Nancy Mitchell, Messrs. Will Lindsay, D. Pitt, G. Addison, C. Grant, H. Tait, G. Ford, and H. Alexander. The work of decoration, which has been going on during the time that the house has been closed, and has involved the expenditure of hundreds of pounds, has resulted in a transformation. The combination of gold, white, and salmon lend to the interior a bright and cheerful appearance, while just a sufficient idea of warmth is conveyed by the crimson upholstery. Various improvements have been made in the all-important matter of lighting, and, altogether, the lessees and managers, Mr. Milton Bode and Mr. Edward Compton, can lay claim to running one of the handsomest theatres in suburban London. Mr. W. R. King is still the courteous business-manager of the house.

THE BRIXTON.

On Monday, Aug. 5, the Drama, entitled "BETWEEN TWO WOMEN."

An extension of the business of Messrs. Melville has been made this week, a lease of the Brixton Theatre having been taken by the enterprising firm, who reopened the well-appointed house on Monday with Between Two Women, a play from the pen of Mr. Frederick Melville, which has enjoyed a large measure of prosperity since its production at the Terriss Theatre in the autumn of 1902. The inauguration has been marked by closely crowded houses, whose attention has been fixed upon the thrilling incidents of the piece. The lead is taken by Mr. Ernest Owttrim, whose dramatic skill and finished elocution is brought to bear with excellent results in the part of Harry Millard. Mr. Owttrim waits his chances with artistic restraint, and does them full justice. A youthful appearance and graceful style give agreeable distinction to the Violet Thornton of Miss Louise Hampton, whose emotional acting wins widespread sympathy for the heroine. Miss Leah Marlborough, tall and slender, revels in the wickedness of Carmen de Savereaux, who, however, is brought to repentance in the last act through the interposition of her blind son, a part touchingly played by Miss Lulu Bowes, who, in the course of her performance, sings Chirgwin's popular song "The blind boy." The callous heartlessness and duplicity of James Durward are brought out with intensity by Mr. Fred Morgan, and the coarser villainy of his friend, Major Strangeways, is boldly and bluntly presented by Mr. Archibald McLean. A favourite character of the piece is the Rev. Philip Carton, played with rare force and earnestness by Mr. Douglas Vigors; and Mr. Lionel Arthur is vigorously expressive in the rôle of Earl Millard. Many diverting episodes enliven the evening, most of them being sustained by Mr. Newman Maurice, whose acrobatic antics in the draper's shop keep the house in a continuous roar of laughter. Assistance in the mirth department is derived from Miss Lucy Beaumont, who makes a vivacious Polly Popp, and the brusque Mr. Jorkins as played by Mr. N. Graham is responsible for no little merriment. As the lady customer at the stores, Miss Sybil Hare goes through her ordeal with exemplary fortitude, and makes the most of practically a "thinking" part. Mr. J. W. Walters, as Jacques Spado, and Mr. Harry Bristow, as Dick Burgess, give characteristic impersonations. The new lessees have done wisely in retaining Mr. R. W. Allum, a gentleman long popular at the theatre, whose services in a managerial capacity are of the utmost value.

COUNTY THEATRE, KINGSTON.

On Monday, August 5, the drama, entitled "THE BANK OF ENGLAND."

A typical Bank Holiday audience at the Royal County Theatre on Monday evening witnessed the first of six performances of this exciting play, which was received with every mark of approval. The leading rôle of the Sherlock-Holmes detective-wizard was portrayed by Mr. Frank Harding, an old favourite with Kingston playgoers, who met with a hearty reception; Miss Eva Bevington, another favourite locally, was cast as Aminta J. Beane, a part that she filled with marked success; a meritorious performance was also given by Miss Ivy Williams as Sylvia Barraclough; whilst valuable assistance was rendered by the Misses Madge Marley and Jessie in the parts assigned to them; Mr. Lionel D'Aragon proved a capable villain; Mr. T. P. Haynes was good as Gordon Isaacs; and the low-comedy work of Mr. Archie Selwyn, as the Hon. Bertie Burlington, created much amusement.

THE STANDARD.

On Monday, Aug. 5, the Drama, entitled "HER ROAD TO RUIN."

A capital holiday attraction is found in Mr. Frederick Melville's interesting drama, Her Road to Ruin. Messrs. Walter and Frederick Melville are two of the most successful melodrama writers of modern days, and this piece, from the pen of the latter gentleman, has shown itself to be quite up to the usual standard of excellence. The play is well staged and mounted, the acting is all that could be desired, and the production is finding immense favour during the present week. Mr. Robert Faulkner supplies a well-conceived delineation of Frank Temple, and proves himself to be possessed of more than average ability. Mr. J. Knox Orde scores a brilliant success as Tom Wells; he is manly and impressive throughout, and quickly establishes himself a firm favourite. Mr. Alex. Bradley plays the part of Phillip Hardy with vigour, and imbues the character with the due amount of villainy. He works hard and well, and his efforts help much towards the success of the piece. Mr William Lynton affords satisfaction as Mr. Derwent, a solicitor; and Mr. William Brooke is all that could be desired as Inspector Homewood, of Scotland Yard. Mr. F. C. Brooke supplies a particularly good impersonation of Dicky Gerald; and the efforts of Mr. Arthur Byron as Billy Boots are much appreciated. Mr. Thomas Henry suitably portrays Bill Grimes; and Mr. Ernest Stidwell must be complimented on his performance as Sir John Lewis. The rôle of May Willoughby is successfully undertaken by Miss Alice Bowes, to whom praise is due. Mr. Victor R. C. Moors submits a fine study of Charles Cholmondeley, a ne'er-do-well, and makes as much as possible out of the part. Mr. Dane Clarke plays with skill as the Bishop, his reading showing careful study. Lifelike portrayals of female gaol-birds are given by Miss May Mordaunt, Miss Jessie Stevens, Miss Mary Halstead, and Miss Lucy Bentley respectively; and Miss Marie Wright is in every way suited to the rôle of Jennie Crackling. Miss Nellie Bonser copes successfully with the difficulties of the part of Mary Dawson, and her work is greatly approved. Miss Eva Moss as Jess Willoughby is seen to great advantage. The play is produced under the personal supervision of the author, Mr. Frederick Melville, while Mr. H. A. Chappell still discharges his duties in front of the house with ability.

THE WEST LONDON.

On Monday, Aug. 5, the Drama, entitled "THE SILVER KING."

No more potent holiday attraction than The Silver King could have been provided by Mr. Wm. Bailey for the large number of playgoers who patronise his theatre, many regularly paying a weekly visit. Plenty there must have been in the large assemblage on Monday night who were familiar with this always popular play, but their interest in it was evidently as keen as ever, frequent outbursts of enthusiasm being evoked by the many exciting situations it contains, notably in the scene at the end of the fourth act, in Black Drake Wharf, where Denver at last learns who really was the murderer of Geoffrey Ware. Messrs. G. M. Polini and Austin Melford, who have been touring the piece now for a number of years, are again responsible for the representation—an excellent one in every respect. The part of Wilfred Denver, a character which will always be associated with the lamented Wilson Barrett, had a painstaking and quite competent representative in Mr. Fred D. Daviss, especially impressive being his acting in the scene in Nellie Denver's cottage, where he learns from his little daughter that his wife and children are almost starving. His elocution and bearing were alike excellent, and his impersonation throughout gave every satisfaction. Miss Adah Barton made a decidedly favourable impression by her pathetic portrayal of Nellie Denver, the sorrow and despair of the long-suffering and loyal wife and mother being naturally depicted, and her performance throughout being an unexaggerated yet always impressive one. The part of Captain Herbert Skinner ("the Spider"), a character on which so many modern melodramatists have fashioned their frock-coated scoundrels, had a convincing and polished representative in Mr. L. St. George Lowther, the callousness of the villain being admirably suggested in his scenes with Olive Skinner, a rôle that was most adroitly handled by Miss Elizabeth Temple. One of the most popular personages in the play is always the kind-hearted old servant of the Denvers, Daniel Jaikes, and the part was done every justice to by Mr. Edward J. George, whose impersonation throughout was a most finished and easy one. The house was frequently moved to mirth by the many quietly humorous remarks of dear old Daniel, and his scene with Tabitha Durden, a "kittenish" old dame whom he calls a "female Henry VIII." evoked loud laughter. Mr. George Belmore as the "tricky" and flash Henry Corkett submitted a smart and praiseworthy performance; Mr. Harry Bristow was a forcible representative of Cripps; Elijah Coombe was skilfully enacted by Mr. Arthur Wright; the detective, Samuel Baxter, was ably played by Mr. Byron Pedley; Miss Flossie Hale Daviss made a bright and intelligent Cissie Denver; and the numerous other parts were all in competent and careful hands.

THEATRE ROYAL, STRATFORD.

On Monday, Aug. 5, for the first time in London, the Drama, in Four Acts, by George Edwin Clive and Alex. C. Grant, entitled "THE WOMAN FROM SCOTLAND YARD."

Recently produced at Manchester, The Woman from Scotland Yard is within hail of "headquarters" this week, and the habitués of the Stratford Theatre Royal are making her acquaintance with signal warmth. For the piece is well written, there are many original and thrilling situations, and the story never lacks continuity.

Edith Mayne is a detective by heredity. Her father was killed "in harness," and, as she explains, she espouses her profession from a natural inclination. Her mission takes her to the coast of Devon to keep an eye on the arch-schemer Paul Obanoff. Paul Obanoff is no ordinary type of man. In the pay of the Russian Secret Service, he is a fluent, courtly, much-travelled adventurer, who sticks at nothing to further his own ends. He has no time for les affaires de cœur; women to him are only "useful tools." Obanoff is down to see Lady Mary Stanhope, now the wife of Sir James Stanhope, but formerly Marie le Rouge, a Continental demi-monde. Paul Obanoff wants money, and to this end Sir James is "got rid of." About this time Harry Stanhope, his son, arrives at the village. Harry is an independent, fearless, young man, and has made his own fortune in Australia. As they were not on too friendly terms, Harry is accused of his father's murder, but the female detective clears him, and sets herself the task of finding the real murderer. Possessed of Sir James Stanhope's fortune, Lady Stanhope is now a rich woman, and Obanoff requires a share of the spoils. He doesn't desire the hand of his accomplice. "A sack tied round with a piece of string" is his terse and ungallant description of a woman. And it is just as well, for Lady Stanhope has fallen desperately in love with the frank and fair Harry. Of course her affection is repulsed. Harry "has his doubts" about his stepmother; and, besides, he is smitten with the dainty detective. In this case the affection is mutual, and Edith Mayne soon gives proof of her loyalty to the man she loves. Harry has an uncle, Ivan Vassilletch, the head of a band of Polish nihilists in London. A secret meeting of much moment is arranged, and Harry, as a sort of outside member, is present. So also is Paul Obanoff, disguised as the dumb man who was to have taken important despatches to Russia. His disguise is penetrated by the band, and the traitor is condemned to be shot, it falling to the outside member's lot to carry out the sentence. Then we see the novelty of virtue aiding villainy, for Edith Mayne has somehow gained access to the room, rescues the villain at the pistol's point, and when afterwards remonstrated with exclaims to the assembly, "I have saved the man I love from murder." It was a tight corner for Obanoff, but he is not yet out of the female detective's hands. To further her plans she engages herself to Lady Stanhope as parlour-maid, and, effectively disguised, she tells Paul Obanoff she has heard that the murderer of Sir James left a blood-stained finger-print behind, much to the villain's discomfiture. It is this finger-print which is Obanoff's final undoing, for Edith manages to get another impression of his thumb on to a glass. But this is anticipating. Obanoff first gets Harry Stanhope into his power, and he is dragged to a dungeon and chained to a post like a vicious felon. Here he is visited by Lady Stanhope, who renews her unwelcome protestations; but Harry is still "not having any," even flogging from a Russian knout with eventual prospects of death being preferable. How Edith Bland appears on the scene and the two women engage in a deadly struggle in which the adventuress is worsted, and how the police appear on the scene and arrest Obanoff for murder are incidents which quickly follow, and the curtain falls on the prospective alliance of Harry and Edith.

The representation of the piece by Mr. Alex C. Grant's company is in every way creditable, and it is mounted most appropriately. Mr. Alex C. Grant makes Paul Obanoff a suave, cynical, calculating miscreant, who has all the outward appearance of a polished gentleman, and his performance is rendered notable by it being an "accent part." Mr. George Edwin Clive is a fluent and buoyant representative of Harry Stanhope, and he is seen to advantage throughout. Miss Eveleen Clyde, as Edith Mayne, the woman from Scotland Yard, would be far too charming a detective to deal with hardened ruffians, but she possesses an excellent delivery and style, and achieves much success in the part. Miss Violet Crauford very cleverly realises the part of the adventuress, Lady Stanhope, possessing a fine stage appearance, and playing with admirable restraint in this rather unthankful rôle. Mr. John L. Schofield plays with ease and dignity as Ivan Vassillitch; Mr. Frank Lester ably represents Sergius Strogoff; Mr. James Baron makes an alert Inspector Marsh; Mr. Charles Graham is Sir James Stanhope; and minor parts are represented by Mr. Arthur E. Kents, as a waiter; and Mr. John Roberts, Mr. Frank Congreaves, and Mr. Ernest Faulkener. The "comic relief" is well sustained by Mr. Walter Clarke, who is decidedly clever as the inane Algernon Fitzmaurice; Mr. Robert Cromwell, who is always amusing and entertaining as Jack Brown; and Miss Dorothy Wilkinson, who makes a very sprightly and prepossessing Mary White.

THE ACTORS' UNION.

LONDON.

Mr. H. Tripp Edgar presided at Tuesday's meeting of the Actors' Union, held at the Bedford Head, Maiden-lane. Others present were:—Messrs. Edwin J. Collins, M. Anderson, D. Gunn Murray, E. Howard Templeton, Jack Collinson, J. L. Shine, Richard Cowell, J. W. Braithwaite, Cecil G. Calvert, Robert M. Taylor, Frederick F. Loyd, C. Dashwood, Harry Paulton, jun., John M. Troughton, E. T. Rae, W. Ruddle Brown, Alfred Richards, Dan F. Roe, Frank Coston, Mrs. Eva Booth, Mrs. L. L'Estrange, Misses Lucy Sibley, May Conrade, Kitty Marion, Mary Bessle, Lena Delphine, Gladys Ffolliott, Marion Bird, Florence Creagh, G. Trewman, Adelaide Gracey, and Edith Chalmers.

The CHAIRMAN, referring to the paucity of members present, said it was a good sign, as it meant that many were fulfilling engagements. It would, too, disabuse people's minds of the idea that those who belonged to the Actors' Union were out-of-works. The Union existed for the purpose of bringing about a better and a higher tone in the drama, to open it to the respectable and the intelligent, and to close it to the ignorant and the degenerate. He cast ridicule upon the recent statements in the Referee on the subject of the Union, and also upon Mr. Cecil Raleigh's statement that he (Mr. Raleigh) was opposed to women acting on the committee. On another point, the Union had secured at their offices over fifty engagements for actor-unionists, and they were also supplying an entire company to go on tour. He (the chairman) desired to correct a mis-statement made by Mr. Raleigh, who had said that Mr. Orlando Barnett had resigned from the committee. That was quite untrue. Mr. Barnett had been invited to take a seat on the committee, but he had found that he could not undertake the duties, owing to his going on tour. It was pleasant to be able to announce that Mr. Pete Curran, M.P., who represented, as chairman, a body of 6,000,000 trade unionists, had been secured as honorary trustee of the Actors' Union. The committee had approached other members of Parliament in order that their funds might be in suitable hands.

Mr. J. L. SHINE said that in his opinion the Actors' Union must be a trade union. It should be a considerable help to the managers as well as the actors, because of its influence for good on the latter. The question of a minimum wage was receiving the very careful attention of the committee, but the problem would really have to be decided by a vote of the entire membership. He thought that engagements should be made through the Union, and actors should not be compelled to wait like suppliants outside an agent's office. He did not agree with an amalgamation with any other association that was not a trade union.

Mr. CECIL CALVERT remarked that no complaints had come from managers as to the artists who had been engaged through the Union. In regard to the amalgamation of the Union with the Actors' Association, several members of the committee of the latter body had had a pleasant conversation with the Union committee, but nothing would be done without the entire approval of the members of the Union. It was desirable that meetings should be held in every town in the provinces if they could possibly be arranged.

Mr. FRED LOYD said that he had found that the great stumbling-block in the way of getting recruits was the £2 a week minimum salary. He thought that choristers should be invited to become members and sought after.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—Decisive action, when one has grown accustomed to protracted periods of speculative theory, come as rather a shock. The A.A. has appointed a Minimum Wage Committee. This is one of the first steps the A.U. should have taken. Individual opinion fixes a minimum wage at varying amounts, and the A.A. is wise in following the precedent of most trade unions, that of inquiring into salaries and conditions as data from which to deduct the standard for a fair subsistence wage. Those who will devote a penny stamp and ten minutes' concentration on the recital in writing of their past and present theatrical triumphs, from a monetary and number-of-weeks-engagement-in-the-year point of view, in response to the A.A.'s request for information may feel virtuous over a duty performed in helping to bring this important matter to a satisfactory issue.

The response to the suggestion of forming an A.U. reform party carries conviction that there is an hitherto unsuspected number of artists capable of probing a little below the surface of economic conditions, and, as a consequence, willing to support a democratic programme. As doubtless letters to the Press are read by only a minority, I will repeat the gist of the suggestions made last week:—

"That the Association and the Union put aside all other considerations and unite on these definite objects:—

1. The accumulation of a fund to be utilised, if necessary, to enforce a minimum wage.
2. A committee of actors and actresses, with democratic views, to represent artists in licenced theatres.

"Will those who favour this suggestion let me have their names?"

Those reactionaries who uphold a system which permits bogus managers to pay artists an irregular—or at best, less than a fair subsistence—wage, on the plea that they provide employment for those who would otherwise have no work at all, must bear in mind that it is equivalent to upholding "sweated industry" in a trade.

Under a minimum wage system, managers will choose the best available value for their money, and the unemployed will then chiefly consist of the "unemployable," who at present undersell legitimate artists, and are almost as real an evil as the amateur.—Yours faithfully,

NORMAN TOWERS.

THEATRICAL GOSSIP.

The funeral of the late Mr. David Christie Murray, whose death we announced in our last issue, took place at the Hampstead Cemetery on Saturday, the interment being made in the highest part of the cemetery, close to the graves of Sir George Macfarren, Mr. Hayden Parry, and Mr. Joseph Maas. The coffin bore the inscription: "David Christie Murray. Died Aug. 1, 1907. Aged 60 years." A large gathering assembled at the graveside, among the mourners being Mr. John L. Shine. The numerous wreaths included one from Mr. George R. Sims.

Mr. Martin Harvey had a surprising experience near Cromer the other day. He is spending his holiday within hail of that favourite resort, and, accompanied by a number of friends, was motoring from Yarmouth. The party occupied two cars, and were travelling at a good pace, Mr. and Mrs. Harvey being in the second vehicle. An old dame, with her face buried in a blinker-like sunbonnet, at the first "toot," moved well out of the way, but failed to notice that a second car was coming up. In fact, Mr. Harvey's chauffeur first saw the old woman when about six or seven yards from her.

With a turn of the wheel which nearly threw the car into the air, he just managed to evade her, but the escape was so close that Mr. Harvey told the chauffeur to pull up, and got down with the object of reassuring the poor woman, who was, as she put it, "all of a trimble." Mr. Harvey soon managed to calm her, and was about to make generous amends for her fright, when he was astonished beyond measure to hear her say: "Why, it's Master Jack!" Mr. Harvey turned sharply round and looked the old lady fairly and squarely in the face, immediately afterwards ejaculating "It's Martha!" in tones of amazement. Martha was a trusted domestic who was for a long period associated with the popular actor of to-day when he was John Martin Harvey, a bright, imaginative Wyvenhoe boy. Subsequently Martha's cottage near by was the scene for upwards of an hour of much merry recollection of long gone days.

At the annual meeting of the Gaiety Theatre Company, Ltd., on Wednesday, Mr. George Edwardes, in moving the adoption of the report, said when the Spring Chicken concluded its run last year they were compelled to close the theatre, for it would have been suicidal to have produced a new piece in July or August. When they were ready to produce their new play two of their star artists were unable to appear. Delay was also caused by the breakdown of the health of Mr. Lionel Monckton. Under the head of "stage properties" they brought forward from last year £15,760, after writing off £8000 for depreciation. To this had been added during the current year the whole cost of The New Aladdin, bringing this asset up to a total of over £29,000. It was deemed wise to utilise the amount of the reserve, £12,017, which was originally set aside out of profits, and also £7240 from gross profit, thus reducing the figure to an exceedingly low one. The Girls of Gottenberg was still pursuing a successful career.

In the course of a discussion which followed, Mr. Mackenzie observed that although his income this year had been diminished by several hundred pounds, he believed that the directors had done their very best in the interest of the shareholders. It was not always possible for even the very best men to always gauge what the public exactly wanted in the matter of entertainment. The shareholders must remember they had earned about six times the amount they would have earned had their money been invested in Consols. In his opinion they had been suffering from too much prosperity, and now that they had had a set-back it would have the effect of stimulating the board. He had no reason to doubt that they would have a big dividend next year. The directors had done very well for the shareholders up to now. They were experienced men, and to make any alteration in the constitution of the board would, in his opinion, amount to a vote of want of confidence.

Miss Wynne Matthison, the charming young actress who is so rapidly attaining a position among foremost actresses, is the object of an eloquently appreciative article by Mr. Percy Burton in the Holiday Number of Cassell's Magazine. "Miss Matthison," declares Mr. Burton, "is not more attractive on the stage than she is in the sympathetic surroundings of her home life with Mr. C. Rann Kennedy, her guide, philosopher, and husband. Mr. and Mrs. Kennedy are intellectual without being pedantic. Books are their constant companions. Along the top of one well-filled bookcase runs a quotation from Æschylus (for Mr. Kennedy comes of a long line of Greek scholars), while over another is a Shakespearean inscription in the old folio spelling, 'The Mistris which I serve quickens what's dead.'"

A fund of anecdote is possessed by Miss Matthison, who thus tells of her début in The School Girl at Blackpool. "I was told that I had to sing contralto and be small, while, by nature, I possessed neither qualification. Hence the necessity for art and artfulness. I was also given the sage advice, 'Don't let anybody know you are a beginner.' I acted up to this successfully through the rehearsals, but on the opening night while I was dressing with two ladies, the call-boy came round, and taken by surprise, I inquired ingenuously, 'Oh! do they come and call us?' And the secret of my novitiate was no longer mine and the manager's."

"Touring," continues Miss Matthison, "was by no means a bed of roses. I remember when in the last-named play we were touring the 'seconds' and 'smalls,' as we aptly term them in theatrical parlance, we came to a small Lancashire town very late one Sunday night. Three other companies had arrived, and rooms were not to be found anywhere for us. We were in despair. At last my girl-friend and I met the acting-manager and another member of the company, who generously offered to give us their lodgings, such as they were. There was nothing to do but to accept, and they turned out into the street."

Miss Matthison pays an eloquent tribute to the memory of Sir Henry Irving. On her first appearance as Portia, she was naturally very nervous in following so great an artist as Miss Ellen Terry, and in her scene with Shylock at the trial she unconsciously held the deed upside down. Irving at once, with his regard for detail, observed this, and interpolated a remark into the middle of his speech, thus:—"Is it so nominated (you've got the bond upside down, my dear; the red seal comes at the bottom) in the bond?"

Irving's last night in Becket at Bradford, on Oct. 24, 1905, arouses painful memories. Miss Matthison was playing Rosamund, and she recalls how, at the termination of the scene in which he rescued her from Queen Eleanor, Irving kept on muttering "Poor soul! Poor soul! Poor soul!" long after the curtain had fallen, and in the last scene of all, when parting from him, she, in her nervousness, said, "And so farewell," instead of "And so return." "Little did I think that it would be the last word I should speak to him," said Miss Matthison, with infinite pathos.

Another surgical establishment has benefited under the will of the late Mr. J. L. Toole, at whose wish certain funds not otherwise disposed of are to be devoted to charitable institutions. Acting under their powers, therefore, the executors have allocated £200 to the City of London Truss Society.

The Secretary of the Actors' Benevolent Fund has received the sum of £1 15s. 8d. from Mr. Edward Cadman, of the Grand Theatre and Opera House, Leeds, the amount having been collected from professionals visiting the theatre.

Miss Lena Ashwell will start her enterprise at the Kingsway, as the Great Queen-street Theatre is to be called, early in October with a new play, by an anonymous writer, entitled Irene Wycherley. The piece presents a powerful study of a woman forced by the brutality of her husband to leave him, a tragic denouement being reached when the two are by accident brought together again. Miss Ashwell, it may be added, is sufficiently well equipped with new pieces to enable her to put public taste fully to the proof.

Meanwhile the Kingsway is in the hands of workmen, who have already done wonders in the little theatre, which is fast assuming a very pretty appearance. White, with gold scroll-work, is to be the prevailing colour, a contrast being effected by the carpets, hangings, and seats, which are all to be in red. The large foyer is being converted into a pleasant lounge for visitors to stalls and dress circle, the spacious entrance hall has been greatly improved, and there is every indication that the theatre will be among the cosiest and best appointed in the metropolis.

Mr. Henry Ainley will be the Orlando of Mr. Oscar Asche and Miss Lily Brayton's forthcoming revival of As You Like It at His Majesty's. Mr. Laurence Binyon's poetical play, Attila, is now in full rehearsal, the cast including, in addition to Mr. Asche and Miss Brayton, Miss Mary Rorke, Miss Irene Rooke, Mr. J. Fisher White, Mr. H. R. Hignett, Mr. Alfred Brydone, Mr. G. Kay Souper, Mr. R. Ian Penny, and Mr. Godfrey Tearle.

Miss Helena Millais, who has just concluded a highly successful engagement as Phyllis in When We Were Twenty-One and in the title-rôle of A Country Mouse, has been re-engaged by Mr. C. F. Cooke to play Constance in The Trumpet Call at the County Theatre, Kingston, on the 19th inst.

A new play entitled The Idol of Paris, by Chas. Darrell, is to be produced on Monday at the Opera House, Middlesbrough. The piece will be played by Mr. Charles Bell's company, with Miss Annie Bell in the title-rôle.

At the Marylebone County Court on Wednesday the action against Miss Kitty Malone, which was adjourned at the judge's suggestion three weeks ago, was withdrawn. A letter from the Maida-vale hairdressers who instituted the proceedings to recover payment for a "transformation," was handed to his Honour, in which apologies were offered to Miss Malone for the mistake made. It had been found that the "transformation" was for a sister, although the name of Miss Malone had been given. Mrs. Mary Malone said that her daughter Kate was at present performing in Edinburgh, but she had never had need of such a thing as a "transformation," adding: "She has plenty of hair of her own, your Honour, I can assure you."

The beauties of the Metropolis will be appreciably enhanced by the new theatre in Shaftesbury-avenue, which will be ready for opening within a week or two. It is built of white stone, and closely resembles its neighbour, the Hicks Theatre. The vestibule is in the style of the Italian Renaissance, and has a white marble staircase and elegant ormolu balustrades. The auditorium is decorated in cream heavily traced and moulded in gold, and cluster lights of beautifully-worked brass hang from the ceiling along the top of the proscenium opening. From the centre of the ceiling is suspended an immense cluster, also embellished with richly-moulded brass, and a myriad electric globes are dotted all over the biulding. There are only two tiers, and not a single pillar exists to interfere with the view. The stage opening is 30ft., the width from wall to wall being 40ft. and the depth 70ft.

The Haymarket Theatre, where My Wife is proving powerfully attractive, has lately enjoyed distinguished patronage. Recent visitors have included the Duke and Duchess of Argyll (Princess Louise), the Grand Duke Michael of Russia and the Countess Torby, Prince Francis of Teck, and Prince Mirsky.

The Muncaster Theatre, Bootle, was on Monday last opened with a stock dramatic company, under the direction of Mr. Fred. Willmot, the piece selected being London's Curse. Formerly a full night's drama was given, but it is intended to try the two houses per night system, which is now observed in four Liverpool houses previously devoted to variety.

Mr. Clive Currie will make an interesting experiment at the West London Theatre on Monday, when he will present The Taming of the Shrew. Mr. Currie will himself take the part of Petruchio, and Miss Emil Leslie that of Katharina, and the cast will also include Messrs. T. P. Haynes, F. Cremlin, Robert Atkins, W. St. A. Bently, Fred Morland, E. H. Brooke, and E. E. Hine, and Misses Lorna Lawrence, Rose Matthews, and Mary Deverell. Shakespeare's comedy will be preceded each evening by Louis N. Parker's one-act play, The Man in the Street.

Mr. Owen Dacroy, the business manager for The Dandy Doctor, was called upon, at short notice, to play the part of Brown at the King's, Glasgow, on Monday, owing to the illness of Mr. W. Rokeby. Mr. Dacroy was highly complimented on his efforts in the part in which he has appeared throughout the week.

Miss Constance Elgin has been engaged by Mr. Van Biene to play the Duchesse de Vervier in his forthcoming tour of The Broken Melody.—Mr. Philip Leslie is now playing Tommy Smith in Brewster's Millions, at the Hicks Theatre.

Mr. Charles Hermann, who originally brought Uncle Tom's Cabin from America in 1878, has been appointed by Messrs. Milton Bode and Edward Compton as business-manager of the Royal Opera House, Leicester, in succession to the late Mr. Henry Dundas. Mr. Hermann is no stranger to Leicester, as he has visited both theatres many times in a managerial capacity and with his own companies.

Puccini's opera, La Bohème, was given in English for the first time in London on Wednesday, and proved another triumph for the Moody-Manners Opera Company, which is doing such admirable work at the Lyric. New scenery and costumes were provided for the production, and the ensemble was magnificent. Mme. De Vere Sapio sang the title-rôle, and achieved a pronounced success, and Mr. Joseph O'Mara gained fresh laurels in the part of Rudolph, singing throughout with grace and impressiveness. Mr. Lewys James, as Marcel, the painter, and Miss Hilda Moody, as Musetta, were heard and seen to advantage, and Mr. William Dever and Mr. Charles Magrath again proved their sterling gifts of melody in their respective parts. Signor Sapio conducted with his usual distinction.

"The Christian," as re-written by Mr. Hall Caine, is to be produced at the Lyceum on the last day of the month. The new Christian is much simplified as a dramatic work, being now in four acts of one scene each. It also includes some new characters, in which a resemblance to a venerable ecclesiastic who has made a deep impression by his denunciation of the sins of Society and that of a well-known lady who has been active in the women's movement may be traced. The principals of the cast will be Messrs. Matheson Lang, A. B. Imeson, Eric Mayne, Frederick Ross, Walter Russell, and Frederick Moyes, and Miss Keith Lytton, Miss Valli Valli, Miss Grace Lester, and Miss Alice Crawford.

Mr. John Hart's production of As You Like It, at the Theatre Royal, Manchester, on Monday, will run for three weeks. Mr. Gerald Lawrence will be the Orlando and Miss Fay Davis the Rosalind. In the cast will also be Messrs. John Nesbitt, Francis Chamier, Charles Garth, James Hearn, Frank Western, Fred Percy, Lionel Belmore, Reginald Blott, Orlando Barnett, Harry Paulton, Stockall Ward, Duncan Garron, and L. H. Humbleton, and Miss Valerie Salberg, Miss Frances Welstead, and Miss Violet Chamier.

Mr. Frank Adair, who has carried through a most successful stock season at the Shakespeare Theatre, Clapham, was the object of a pleasing testimonial at the concluding performance, when, in the presence of an enthusiastic audience, he was presented by the members of the company with a pair of solid silver backed hair-brushes. In making the presentation Mr. Wingold Laurence, in a neat speech, testified to the esteem in which Mr. Adair was held by those under his command.

Miss Violet Ellicott, whose performance of Marion Thornton in Hardie and Von Leer's principal company of Two Little Vagabonds at the Coronet Theatre has been so favourably reviewed, was on Thursday evening the pleased recipient of a handsome diamond ring from an anonymous donor, as a token of appreciation of her acting. According to the wording of the accompanying letter, the gift appears to emanate from a visitor from the States.

Mr. Cyril Austen-Lee has been specially engaged by Mr. William Greet for the part of Marcus Superbus in his autumn tour of The Sign of the Cross.

A neat little advertising novelty is being used in connection with Lights Out on tour. Mr. Willard, Mr. Maundy-Gregory's advertising manager, takes round with him several portable electric signs, which, when placed in shop windows, illustrate the inscription of "lights out" in the most convincing manner by disappearing and reappearing ad infinitum.

Cordial congratulations are extended to Miss Nellie Clyde, who was married on Saturday to Mr. Charles Robertson Gibbon, son of the late Charles Gibbon, the novelist. The bride in private life was Miss Eleanor Amy Boughton, and is the daughter of Mr. J. W. Boughton, the popular licensee and manager of the Theatre Royal, Portsmouth.

Miss Marie Dagmar has sent Miss Bentley the following wire:—"My best thoughts are with you and for your success to-night. I am sure you will succeed."

Mme. Sarah Bernhardt is on a visit to Aix-les-Bains. According to the local papers, the famous Parisienne is contemplating the selection of a site for a villa on Roc Chère, a mountain overlooking the town of Annecy, where she intends to live in retirement after leaving the stage.

Mr. Jerrold Robertshaw is at the Kursaal, Bexhill, this week with The Stormy Petrel, which achieved such a pronounced success on its production at Glasgow, on the 25th ult. Included in the strong cast are the Misses Nina Sevening, Lillias Waldegrave, and Mr. Ivan Berlyn.

A "new dramatic variety entertainment" is the promising title given to the performance which will be presented at the Grand, Fulham, next week by Mr. C. W. Somerset and Mr. Fred Storey. The programme will consist of "a complete and sensational drama, in one act," entitled The Great Poison Case, played by Mr. Somerset and Miss Agnes Russell, a scene from The Merchant of Venice, with Mr. Storey as Shylock and Miss Edith Forde as Portia; a comic sketch, entitled The Glazier, and a scene from Rip Van Winkle, with Mr. Storey in his well-known impersonation of Rip.

A correspondent writes to call our attention to another play in which the late David Christie Murray was concerned, viz., George Garth, written by Murray in collaboration with his brother Henry and Mr. John L. Shine. It was produced at the Grand, Fulham, on July 28, 1902, with Mr. Charles Glenney in the principal part.

Mr. Clement Locknane was taken suddenly ill during rehearsal for Mr. Seymour Hicks's South American tour, and is now confined to his room. Though much improved, Mr. Locknane will unfortunately be unable to fulfil the duties of musical director. We wish him a speedy recovery.

A billiard match between members of The Prodigal Parson company and A Soldier's Honour company took place at the Criterion Hotel, Wolverhampton, on Aug. 3. In the result, The Prodigal Parson made 452 and A Soldier's Honour 311. The individual scores were:—Beckett, 150; Fulford, 63; Remonde, 151; Pringle, 110; Garrod, 151; Fulford (sen.), 138.

The men of the Channel Fleet at Liverpool have during the week been invited in large numbers to the various places of entertainment in the town. The houses thus according hospitality to our Blue-jackets included the Royal Court, the Shakespeare, the Hippodrome, the Olympia, the Lyric, the Tivoli, and the Empire.

Mr. Martin Adeson will be principal comedian with Mr. Seymour Hicks's travelling musical comedy répertoire. He returns to England in time for pantomime.

Mr. F. R. Benson has brought to a successful issue another imposing display, the final performances of the Isle of Wight pageant taking place at Carisbrooke Castle in the presence of a vast crowd. At the evening performances a large party occupied the Royal pavilion, including Princess Henry of Battenberg and her three sons, Princess Christian, Princess Victoria of Schleswig-Holstein, Princess Patricia of Connaught, Prince Arthur of Connaught, and Prince Edward of Wales. Living pictures, sustained by nearly 1500 performers, presented a brilliant spectacle with limelight effects. Mr. Benson, master of the pageant, was the recipient of hearty congratulations upon the success attained.

The English version of Madama Butterfly, for the perfect rendering of which Mr. Charles Manners has been at infinite pains, will be produced at the Lyric on Friday. The other operas presented by the Moody-Manners company next week have all been before presented this season, and will consist of Aïda on Monday, to be repeated at the Wednesday matinée, Faust on Tuesday, Tannhäuser on Wednesday, Lohengrin on Thursday, The Marriage of Figaro at the Saturday matinée, and Il Trovatore in the evening. Sixty members of the Sheffield Amateur Opera Society, it should be noted, will augment the chorus in Faust, Lohengrin, Aïda, and Tannhäuser.

The Queen was a contributor to a Shakespeare memorial which has been erected in the Knights' Hall at Kronberg Castle, Elsinore. The memorial takes the form of a statue of the poet, modelled by the Danish sculptor Hasselrüs, and was unveiled on Tuesday. The pedestal bears the following inscription, which has been approved by Queen Alexandra:—"Three hundred years after Shakespeare wrote his Hamlet, and in the year when the Danish-born Princess Alexandra was crowned Queen of Great Britain, it was resolved to erect this monument, 1602-1902."

Messrs. H. and M. Rayne, the well-known manufacturers and importers of stage requisites, have issued an eight-page illustrated price list, which is not only useful to intending customers, but is in itself a pretty and interesting pictorial publication.

Mr. Jerrard Grant Allen has made an arrangement with Mr. Maundy Gregory whereby Mr. H. A. Saintsbury will play the leading part in Mr. Allen's forthcoming tour of Miss Gladys Unger's play, The Knave of Hearts.

A fine exhibition of the art of golf was provided at the Mid-Surrey Golf Club, Richmond, on the 1st inst., when Messrs. Arthur Hatherton and Norman Salmond, the well-known actors, were opposed in a four-ball foursome by Messrs. Holland and Martin Thomas. The score was as follows:—Out: 4, 4, 4, 4, 3, 4, 4, 3, 4—34; in: 4, 3, 4, 2, 5, 4, 4, 5, 4—35. Total 69. After being 2 down at the turn, Hatherton and Salmond won by 2 holes.

Miss Laura Hansen has been kindly released by Mr. Morton Powell, with whom she has played the lead in When It Was Dark for one week, to enable her to join Miss Olga Nethersole for her forthcoming American tour. This is not by any means Miss Hansen's first visit to America, as she acted seconds to Miss Ada Rehan in Shakesperean plays some years ago throughout the States. During that period, it may be recalled, she was "lent" by the late Augustin Daly for several weeks to play Louise to Miss Nethersole's Frou-Frou.

The Liverpool Royal Court Theatre, which opened its season on Monday last, has been charmingly redecorated and relighted, while the new scheme of booking, under which the pit stalls can be secured in advance on the day of entertainment, has proved popular. Another innovation is the introduction of an immense gramaphone, which is used to while away the time before the rise of the curtain.

"The Private Secretary," under the sole direction of Mr. Eugène C. Stafford, starts its twenty-fourth year of tour at Weymouth on Sept. 12. The occasion will be marked by the engagement of Mr. David James, who will, for the first time, impersonate the Rev. Robert Spalding, a part which should fit this quaint comedian like the proverbial glove. Mr. W. Hargreaves will continue his masterly performance of the choleric Mr. Cattermole, and a particularly well-chosen company of clever artists will render support.

Mr. Richard Green and family are enjoying a holiday at Kingsgate. Besides engaging Mr. Green for the Promenade Concerts, Mr. Newman has also secured the popular vocalist for Queen's Hall on Sunday afternoon, Nov. 3.

Messrs. B. and F. Wheeler's business will be conducted until further notice by Mr. T. B. Young, who is at present on a visit to London. During Mr. Young's stay in this country letters addressed "Care of Daly's Theatre" will find him.

A great attraction will be supplied at the Kennington Theatre for the week beginning Aug. 19, when Mr. Wentworth Croke will present Hall Caine's stirring drama, The Prodigal Son, with all new scenery, dresses, and effects. No expense has been spared in securing a first-class company.

Mr. Lingford Carson's play, The Drama of Life, began its autumn tour at Mexboro' (the scene of its original production) on Monday before an audience which filled the theatre from floor to ceiling. By special request of the local management, Mr. Carson himself appeared as Harry Beech, his original part, and was supported by an excellent company, headed by Miss Kate Hallam. The dresses are exceptionally pretty, and with the new scenery and electrical effects a charming stage-picture is made. The tour is under the personal management of Mr. Edward van Biene.

Mr. Allan Wilkie has met with great success at the Theatre Royal, Bolton, this week, the efforts of the popular actor and his talented company being received with enthusiasm by crowded houses.

At the West Bromwich Police Court on the 1st inst. application was made by Mr. J. S. Sharpe, on behalf of Mr. Albert Withers, the lessee of the new Hippodrome, Carter's Green, West Bromwich, for a licence for the performance of stage plays. It was explained that the place, which had only been in existence twelve months, was a temporary building, and cost £3000, exclusive of the land. The building would provide accommodation for 1856 persons. It was well apart from other property, and in case of fire there was ample provision for exits. Mr. Graham Milward, who opposed on behalf of Messrs. Hardy and Thomas, lessees of the Theatre Royal, urged that a temporary building of wood was not likely to be so safe as a permanent one, and the Bench eventually declined to grant the application.

The King has witnessed twenty-two plays in England during the season which is now ending. They were:—His House in Order (St. James's), The Bondman (Drury Lane), The Merveilleuses (Daly's), Peter's Mother (Wyndham's), The Dairymaids (Apollo), The Man from Blankley's (Sandringham), Robin Hood (Windsor), The Morals of Marcus (Garrick), Toddles (Wyndham's), Le Voyage de M. Perrichon (New Royalty), Education de Prince (New Royalty), The Stronger Sex (Apollo), When Knights were Bold (Wyndham's), Le Maître de Forges (New Royalty), Les affaires sont les affaires (New Royalty), L'Age Difficile (New Royalty), Sixes and Sevens (Marlborough House), The Impudence of the Creature (Marlborough House), The Merry Widow (Daly's), The Corsican Brothers (Adelphi), Mrs. Ponderbury's Past (Vaudeville), and My Wife (Haymarket).

The question: Should a novelist be his own dramatist? is discussed in a talk in the Book Monthly with Mr. W. J. Locke, the author of The Morals of Marcus. "If," says Mr. Locke, "a novelist has some dramatic faculty, he is certainly the man to dramatise his own story. He knows what he wants to be at, the inside of his characters. Only, if the novelist has not the dramatic instinct, he will simply write a dramatic illustration of his book." That, as Mr. Locke points out, is obviously a different thing from a drama.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

Ellen Terry and Henry Irving.

"One very foggy night in December 1867—it was Boxing-day, I think—I acted for the first time with Henry Irving," writes Miss Ellen Terry in this week's M.A.P. "This ought to have been a great event in my life, but at the time it passed me by and left 'no wrack behind.' Until I went to the Lyceum Theatre Henry Irving was nothing to me, and I was nothing to him. I never thought he would become a great actor. He had no high opinion of my acting. He has said since that he thought me at the Queen's Theatre charming and individual as a woman, but as an actress hoydenish. I believe that he hardly spared me even so much definite thought as this."

Moral, but Varied.

"In my coming play at Drury Lane," says Mr. Cecil Raleigh in the Chronicle, "Mr. Hamilton and I have tried to deal with a great national vice from the standpoint of the reasonable citizen. Strangely enough, both Mr. Hamilton and myself, poles apart though we are in political creeds—he being a regular Cavalier at heart—agree completely in our detestation of gambling in all its forms—the turf, the card table, and, not least, the Stock Exchange. To me it seems ridiculous that the mere gambling that goes on in the Stock Exchange should be shielded by the name of finance. Why not just set out some roulette tables in St. Paul's Churchyard, and be honest about it?"

"However that may be, in The Sins of Society we shall strive to show, with the inevitability of a Greek tragedy, the downfall of a typical English society woman through gambling. She begins in a small way with a game of bridge. With ruthless certainty she falls deeper and deeper into debt, disgrace, and, finally, dishonour. Our hope is that the play may teach, like Drink, a great moral lesson. And the play as such will be made, of course, as exciting and as varied as possible, and as fine a spectacle as Drury Lane can present. But behind it all there will be the larger purpose that I have explained."

Mr. Raleigh's Career.

Mr. Raleigh, says the same article, was born in Monmouth, but his earliest memories are of Epsom. His father, who had been a doctor and a crack steeplechaser, gave up his profession for the Turf, built the Pitt Place stables, and trained horses for many famous people. Among them was the late Duke of Hamilton, who used to preserve one of the future dramatist's baby teeth as a keepsake. Of Mr. Raleigh's subsequent adventures the tale would fill volumes—how he toured in the chorus of a comic opera company, of which he was the only member who could draw his stageword; how he became acting-manager to a conjurer; how, being always fond of boxing, and something of an expert himself, he became secretary of the Pelican Club. His Socialistic proclivities, on the other hand, he dates back to his boyhood, when he appeared in some amateur theatricals in which Mr. H. M. Hyndman took part.

French Actors in Hospital.

The Comédie-Française, says our Paris correspondent, intends to produce Le Mariage d'Agnès, founded on the novel by M. Claretie, that deals with the terrible year 1870, when the House of Molière was turned into an infirmary, where those wounded during the siege of Paris were tended. The new piece has a simple and touching story. André Morère and Simone Aubry fell in love with one another, and their wedding day is fixed when the Franco-Prussian war breaks out. André enlists; he is carried, wounded to death, to the infirmary of the Comédie-Française, and, with a supreme effort, slips a ring on the finger of Simone. Monsieur Emile Bergerat, the well-known playwright, who remained in Paris during those troublous times, has just related some of his curious experiences there. The famous Comédie-Française ambulance, he says, was in the long foyer that looks out on to the Place du Palais-Royal. There were about twenty beds, placed between the busts of the departed authors who line the walls. And this gave rise to a curious incident. At that time M. Edouard Thierry was manager of the Théâtre Française. Very religious, not to say bigoted, he was afraid that the grinning head of Voltaire—the scoffer and blasphemer, as he put it—might give offence to the pious. He therefore took a huge white sheet, and with his own hands wrapped it round the celebrated work by the sculptor Houdon. Jokes of every description were levelled at him. But he weathered the chaff; and Voltaire's head remained hidden from view until the war had come to a close. It must, however, not be imagined that the German shells and the nursing of the wounded interfered with the business of the House.

Reading Under Difficulties.

The performances went on uninterruptedly, and M. Bergerat one afternoon read out to the members of the committee his new play, Le Maître d'école, whilst the French and the enemy's guns were booming in the distance. The ladies on the committee were Mmes. Favart, Madeleine Brohan, Jouassain, Emilie Dubois, Edile Riquer, and Victoria Lafontaine. They liked the play, but even if they had not, M. Bergerat was certain of their support. He had allured them, and the means he had employed were irresistible in a besieged city, when dogs were afraid to show themselves in the streets for fear of being turned into food. M. Bergerat had unearthed a beautiful Dutch cheese, and offered it to Mme. Emilie Dubois, who had pronounced it "a dream." As to Madeleine Brohan, he had presented her with a succulent quail-pie that drew tears from that lady's eyes. And as she had shared it with Mlle. Jouassin, the wily Bergerat had killed two birds with one pie. The piece was a success.

A Blunder Corrected.

My attention, says our correspondent, has been drawn to an article in a London review which contains the astounding statement that according to the new regulations no foreigners are admitted into the Conservatoire. I cannot understand how the writer could have made such a foolish mistake. The rules referring to strangers have not undergone any change. The latter are admitted as before, but their number is limited in order to prevent the native element from being crowded out. As to competitions, prizes, etc., strangers enjoy the same privileges as French pupils. Almost needless to say, the tuition is free. Foreign pupils have to produce their parents' marriage certificate, and a document showing they have been vaccinated.

The Elizabethan Theatre.

There is spade-work to be done near home, says Mr. William Archer in the Morning Leader. To give one instance out of many: The very important question of the structure and methods of working the Elizabethan Theatre would almost certainly be elucidated by a systematic search in the Record Office. Learned Germans and Americans are always writing treatises on this subject, and eagerly maintaining contradictory conjectures. The data we at present possess are quite inadequate to the solution of several problems which have more than a merely antiquarian interest; for until we thoroughly understand the theatre for which they wrote, we cannot read the Elizabethan dramatists with complete comprehension.

For Her Sake was first presented to the public at the Opera House, Cheltenham, on April 19 last. The piece is full of exciting and thrilling situations, the characters are boldly drawn, and the dialogue is always eloquent and straight to the point. For Her Sake, therefore, has all the primary requisites for success in the suburbs and the provinces.

The story deals with the loves of Prince Vladimir Walanoff, a Captain in the Russian Army, and Olga, a serf, who has been educated above her station by Vladimir's proud mother, the Princess Natacha Walanoff. The Princess is bitterly opposed to the marriage, another obstacle to which is the fact that Olga's father murdered the Prince's father, and that Vladimir has sworn to hunt down the murderer and avenge his parent. The Prince, however, is determined to marry Olga, but at his mother's demand he agrees to wait a year before wedding her. In the Prince's absence in Poland with his regiment, the Princess sells Olga to a serf, who is endeavouring to take advantage of his proprietorship, when a police spy, named Gregorvitch, who poses as an anarchist leader, appears on the scene. Gregorvitch, who was brutally flogged by Vladimir's father, wants to revenge himself on the son, and has brought a party of soldiers to surround Ivan's house and shoot down Vladimir when he arrives, he having broken out of barracks against orders on learning of the sale of his sweetheart, and thus rendered himself a deserter. Ivan, returning to the room, puts on the Prince's cloak, which the latter has left on a chair, goes out, and is shot by mistake, Vladimir escaping at the end of the act. In the third, which takes place at Gregorvitch's house in St. Petersburg, the spy informs Olga of the fact that her father was the murderer of the late Prince, and half-persuades her to relinquish her lover. But when Vladimir is captured and is about to be sent to Siberia for deserting his regiment, and Gregorvitch asks the girl to choose between living in luxury as his mistress and accompanying the Prince across the Steppes, Olga chooses Siberia, where she and Vladimir arrive in the last act, to find Gregorvitch, now Governor of the sulphur mines, ready to treat them with the greatest severity. In this last act cruelties are rife. Nicholoff, an old servant of the Princess's, is beaten and branded on the back; and Olga is tied up and is about to be knouted, when a Russian General arrives with authority from the Czar to depose the inhuman Governor, who is shot by Nicholoff as he—the spy—is attempting to escape, the Princess repenting and giving her consent to the union of Olga and her son.

For Her Sake was remarkably well acted at the Fulham Theatre on Monday by Miss Ida Molesworth and Mr. Mark Blow's company; indeed, the thoroughness and vigour of the performance would have made even a less strong and spirited piece acceptable. Particularly firm and forcible was Mr. Bernard Mervyn's Gregorvitch. Mr. Mervyn had the advantage of a deep, mellow, and sonorous voice, and he used it to marked advantage throughout. There was nothing half-hearted or wavering in the villainy of Gregorvitch. It was remorseless, thorough, and emphatic. The dominating influence of the "police spy and traitor," his devilish cunning, and his savage hatred, were depicted by Mr. Mervyn in a most impressive and effective manner, and he may certainly claim to have made himself the central figure in the production, full as it was of earnest and energetic creations. Amongst the latter, we may mention Miss Doris Gilham's Princess Natacha Walanoff. The Princess's hostility to her son's proposed marriage was represented by Miss Gilham as a "ruling passion" always fermenting in the Princess's mind, and the way in which she lashed herself into fury at the idea of her position in her household being usurped was full of fire and power. As a depiction of sustained and active animosity, Miss Gilham's rendering was highly to be commended. The rôle was not a sympathetic one, but she certainly made it immensely important, aided as she was by a good presence and some handsome costumes. Mr. Wellesley Draper as Prince Vladimir Walanoff acted with all the necessary impulsiveness and effusion, and made a gallant lover and a dashing and daring hero; and Miss Mabel Mannering played Olga with grace and tenderness, intensity and emotional power. She rose to the occasion in the more passionate passages of the part, and showed talent and originality whenever she had an opportunity. Mr. Charles E. Johnson contributed a broad and strong depiction of the sorely-tried Nicholas Nicholoff, and his acting in the last division of the piece was deeply thrilling and affecting, his representation of hopeless and desperate distress being really heart-rending. Mr. Millar Anderson supplied a quaint and comical exposition of the amorous old General Pauloff; and Mr. Albert Sinclair endowed Lieutenant Rostow with military stiffness and density. Miss Gertrude Netterville was a buxom and humorous Phyllis Gray; Mr. Fred Beck made quite a hit by his droll embodiment of Lord Chumley Hargraves, his interpolated song taking remarkably well, and his comic characterisation being keenly appreciated. The broader relief was supplied by Miss Maimie Randall as Amelia Jane and Mr. Sydney Benson as Patrick. Miss Randall's maid was extravagantly funny; and Mr. Benson's Irish character and brogue were excellent. Both artists rendered themselves great favourites. Mr. Fred Hilliard made the most of his opportunities in the brief but important part of Ivan, the evil passion of the serf being shown in the most vivid colours; and minor rôles had satisfactory representatives in Messrs. Henry Russel, T. Sharp, F. Leyland, Fred Scott, and E. Stevens. The scenery, which was carried by the company, was adequate, and the piece had evidently been well rehearsed, uproarious applause being heard at the end of each act. With so popular audiences, For Her Sake should always be effective.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

The period of Mr. Cunningham's play, Under the Stars and Stripes, which was produced at Tyldesley on Saturday last before a large audience, is that of the disruption between the Southern and Northern States on the question of the emancipation of the blacks. The story opens at the house of Rex Graham, proprietor of the Doloroso plantation, South Carolina, some little time before the declaration of war. At hand, on friendly terms, are Colonel Jules Vermond, in command of the Northern Scouts; Captain Jack Deane, attached to the same regiment; and Bertie Dimple, whose vocation is that of a war correspondent, combined with an aptitude for poetry, general literary work, and an amusing self-conceit. Sylvia Rosmer, the companion of Graham's sister, is about to leave the plantation, and seeks from Graham a written testimonial of efficiency, to enable her to enter service elsewhere. Graham writes the testimonial reluctantly, and in the writing brings home to himself the fact that he is in love with Sylvia and cannot let her go. He makes a declaration of his feelings, to which Sylvia responds as he desires. It is during the course of this love episode that the evil element makes its appearance. Colonel Vermond looks in at the door, silently and portentiously. The nature of Vermond is soon manifest. Finding himself alone with Marie, a pretty servant, he makes villainous overtures, against which, however, the girl is heroically proof. Next, on the appearance of Silas Strang, the overseer of the plantation, some ugly reminiscences of his past life are touched upon—notably the murder of Judge Rosmer, for money, many years ago, a crime in which Strang was an accomplice. Underneath the Colonel's demeanour, his object is to marry Graham's sister, Mabel, whose affections are fixed upon Captain Deane. As a means towards coercing Mabel, over whom Sylvia Rosmer is assumed to have some persuasive influence, Vermond conceives an elaborate imposition upon the latter. He tells Sylvia the story of her parents (whom she has never known), foisting himself, a confessed degenerate and a criminal, living a double life, upon her as her father. Sylvia finds it hard to believe, but will not lend herself to his scheme for gaining Mabel Graham's money by marriage. Baffled and angry, Vermond thereupon casts at her with terrible force the statement that her mother was one of his own slaves, and that therefore he can claim his daughter as an octoroon. To do so would, of course, expose himself; but the imputation of black blood in her veins, and what it all means to her, is enough for Sylvia. The scene is extraordinarily well written, and it comes in strong contrast to the love episode, which it must needs annul, until time and events clear up the fraud. On the same night, Vermond instigates a quarrel between Captain Deane and Rex Graham, and a duel with swords ends in the apparent death of the latter. Pretty mischief for getting Deane out of the way. But while Strang and Vermond are off for the Sheriff, Graham's sister contrives to place the remorseful Deane, her lover, out of danger. The action is then carried into the period of the war. Rex Graham, recovered from his wound, and having an important letter for Captain Deane, whom he has never ceased to regard as a friend, in spite of their ill-judged quarrel, makes his way disguised into an encampment of the Northern Scouts. He is discovered by Vermond, and condemned to be hanged as a spy. From this end, however, Deane saves him, and is himself condemned in his place. The episode of the soldiers ordered by Vermond to fire on Deane is highly dramatic. At the word "Fire!" down go the muskets. Vermond shoots one of the soldiers dead, and repeats his orders—"Present, Fire!" But at the word again down go the muskets. It is obviously a dogged refusal for which each man is prepared to pay the penalty. An attack of the enemy puts an end to the situation, from which Deane thus fortunately escapes. In the meantime, while the game was yet in his hands, Vermond has sent Sylvia Rosmer—whom we see now as a Red Cross nurse—to Dolorosa, with a message to Mabel Graham that she shall barter her hand in marriage for the life of her brother. Such a crisis for Mabel is now, however, divested of its pangs, and, indeed, the overthrow and exposure of Vermond are imminent. The upshot takes place at the plantation, a last dangerous act of the Colonel being defeated by a subterfuge of Bertie Dimple, whom Vermond has picked up for his purpose in the disguise of a curate. Strang, the overseer, shares the Colonel's discomfiture, and confesses the true parentage of Sylvia. After this, nevertheless, Vermond makes a desperate attempt to turn the tables. A shooting duel in the dark between Graham and the Colonel, the latter being killed, makes a weird and sensational conclusion.

The quality of the dialogue, which is a cut above that of ordinary melodrama, was well matched by the quality of the acting. Miss Stanley Burt as Sylvia Rosmer showed herself capable of great things in the way of emotional acting, her scene with Vermond in the first act being especially strong and convincing. Mr. Edward Avinall's depiction of Vermond was firm, natural, sinister without being stagey, and distinguished by a clear and vigorous enunciation; a fine, outstanding piece of work. As Captain Jack Deane, Mr. Wilson Blake also contributed a distinctly good impersonation, open, sincere, heroic, and engaging in appearance. Miss Christine Errington added an effective delineation of Mabel Graham, making the most of her emotional opportunities. Mr. Charles V. Charles as Bertie Dimple gave a clever and amusing character sketch; and was excellently supported by Miss Cherry Veheyne, a dainty little comedy actress, as Marie, the maid. As Rex Graham, Mr. Donald A. Cameron acted capably; and a characteristic impersonation of an overseer was given in good style by Mr. Sydney Milton as Silas Strang. Among the minor parts, that of Corporal O'Brien was well done by Mr. Harry Kay.

The action is interspersed with a variety of musical numbers, and a music-plot of distinct merit, by Mr. Douglas Alexander, accompanies the dramatic theme. A word of praise should be added for the war-scenery of Mr. Charles Herrald. Altogether, the play is a well-written and effective addition to current successful drama of its kind.

A COPYRIGHT performance of a new play, entitled John Bull at Market, by E. W. A. B. Stoton, took place at the East Oxford Theatre, Oxford, on Friday, Aug. 2.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

A large house gave the above new play a hearty reception on Monday. The piece, which went very well at its first performance, is evidently designed with a view to giving Mr. Chalmers Mackey plenty of opportunity to introduce an abundance of bubbling Irish humour in the part of Rory O'Donohoe. It is gathered in the first act that Stephen D'Arcy, a moneylender, while professing friendship for Captain Ashleigh of the Royal Irish, formerly loved Ashleigh's wife, and to revenge himself upon the family, is concocting a plot, with the aid of Shaun Brady, his assistant, to kidnap Rosaleen, the Captain's child. The plot is discovered by Rory O'Donohoe, who is hanging about the Captain's house, and a struggle ensues. Brady manages to get away with the child, which so affects Olive Ashleigh that she dies of shock.

The story is taken up fifteen years afterwards, when Rosaleen, grown to womanhood, is now known as Stephen D'Arcy's daughter. She is loved by one Desmond Fitzgerald, a young Irish patriot, for whom D'Arcy also professes friendship, but in the meanwhile is betraying him, and eventually gets him proscribed and outlawed, with a price upon his head. D'Arcy lays a plan for the capture of Desmond at Rory's house, but the two men who proceed to execute the warrant of arrest are tricked by Rory's wife, Rosie, and enmeshed in a fishing-net and soundly belaboured. D'Arcy turns Rory off the estate for this, but it is suddenly discovered that Grace D'Arcy is in reality Rosaleen Ashleigh, and the whole of Stephen D'Arcy's nefarious deeds are brought to light, while Desmond Fitzgerald returns to his estates, and Rory to his cottage.

The acting of the piece was excellent throughout. Mr. Chalmers Mackey, in the part of Rory, was the life and soul of the piece from beginning to end, his quaint philosophy, uttered in a delicious brogue, fitting the character to perfection, and while he was on the stage the house was kept constantly in a roar. It must be added that he was charmingly supported by Miss Nana Flensburg as Rosie. Miss Flensburg acted prettily, and while forming a foil to Mr. Mackey's humour, put a lot of personality into her own part. A word should be said for her singing of "Rory O'More," in the second act, and also for Mr. Mackey's renderings of "An Irish Relic" and "Mickey Maginn." Mrs. Chalmers Mackey doubled the parts of Olive Ashleigh, in the first act, with that of Rosaleen in the second. She had little to do in the first-named part, but was graceful and dignified as Rosaleen. Mr. St. John Stuart was good as Ashleigh; and Mr. David Macfarlane as D'Arcy made the most of his opportunities. Mr. Charles Horner played Desmond Fitzgerald in manly style, and gave a good conception of the part, also singing "The harp that once through Tara's halls" and "Sentenced to death" admirably. Miss Adele Liddon as Mrs. O'Donohoe and Mr. Henry Sainsbury as Mr. Callaghan were responsible for a delightful bit of comedy in the first act; while Mme. Constance Bellamy as Queen of the Fairies gained much acclamation for her singing of "Of the wood," in the scene at the Fairy Rath. Mr. Haughton Macaulay was good as Shaun Brady, especially in the first act; and the small parts were well filled. The staging of the play was excellent, the scenes of Captain Ashleigh's House in the first act, and the Fairy Rath in the third, being of great beauty. The costumes were also all that could be desired.

DEATH OF MISS GRACE ARMYTAGE.

We record with regret the death of Mrs. Campbell Bradley, professionally known as Grace Armytage, who passed away on Sunday last at 16, Park Mansions, St. John's Wood. The deceased artist was a daughter of the late George Armytage Cooper, and was married in 1866 to Henry C. Sanders, who was associated with the late Sims Reeves, Henry J. Leslie, and many others in the musical world of those days. On her husband's death Miss Armytage gave up management and devoted herself to light opera, playing leading parts in Les Cloches de Corneville and similar operas for some years. In 1884 she married the late Mr. Campbell Bradley, who was a well-known and respected member of the profession.

During recent years, in addition to touring with her own companies, Miss Armytage took part in a number of London productions, amongst her many rôles being those of Mrs. Fretwell in Sowing the Wind and Mrs. Cross in The Idler. In the course of a varied career Miss Armytage appeared with Mr. John Hare in The Master, with Mr. Alexander in The Wisdom of the Wise, and with Mrs. Patrick Campbell in The Whirlwind. Her last appearance was at the Vaudeville a short time back as Mrs. Bates in Mr. Louis N. Parker's one-act play Jemmy, which preceded Mr. George.

The lamented actress was a reliable and sympathetic artist, and was beloved by all with whom she came in contact. Her loss is mourned by two sons and a daughter, the last-mentioned being well known in the profession as Grace Armytage Noble. The funeral was announced to take place at Kensal Green yesterday (Friday).

DR. JOHNSON'S opinion of Garrick is on record, and what Garrick felt on first seeing Pope he has himself told us: "When I was told that Pope was in the house I instantly felt a palpitation at my heart, a tumultuous, not a disagreeable, emotion in my mind. I was then in the prime of my youth and in the zenith of my theatrical ambition. It gave me a particular pleasure that Richard was my character when Pope was to see and hear me. As I opened my part, I saw our little poetical hero dressed in black, seated in a side box near the stage, and viewing me with a serious and earnest attention. His look shot and thrilled like lightning through my frame, and I had some hesitation in proceeding, from anxiety and from joy. As Richard gradually blazed forth the house was in a roar of applause, and the conspiring hand of Pope shadowed me with laurels." Sir Joshua Reynolds when a youth saw Pope at an auction-room. He was, he told Malone, "about four feet six inches high, very hump-backed and deformed; he wore a black coat, and, according to the fashion of that time, had on a little sword. He had a large and very fine eye and a handsome nose; his mouth had those peculiar marks which are always found in the mouths of crooked persons, and the muscles which run across the cheek were so strongly marked that they seemed like small cords."

COURT THEATRE, WARRINGTON.

Mr. William Mollison struck the right key-note on Monday evening when he said that Warrington owed a debt of gratitude to Messrs. Johnson and Potter, the proprietors of the Royal Court Theatre, Warrington, for erecting such a beautiful playhouse in their midst. It is barely seven months since the Rylands-street house was burnt almost to the ground, but the order of despatch has been so cleverly administered that few were prepared for the erection of such a fine temple in their midst. There were many congratulations on Monday, and on all sides could be heard praises.

The theatre has a long frontage to Rylands-street, and here are situated all the public entrances under a verandah extending the whole length of the building. In the centre of this frontage is the grand entrance to the stalls and pit stalls, and on the left the entrances to the pit, circle, gallery, and back of pit. On the right is an early door communicating with all parts of the house. The auditorium, or public portion of the theatre, is divided on the ground floor into pit, pit stalls, and orchestra stalls. Over the pit is the lower circle tier, and on the top a large gallery specially arranged in its seating so that all occupants can have an uninterrupted view of the stage. There are also four private boxes.

Numerous exits are provided to all parts of the theatre, and as the building is isolated, there is no difficulty in the audience getting out quickly in case of emergency. In the main entrance is the box-office, and inner-vestibule doors lead to the crush room. The orchestra floor has been sunk 18in. below the level of the stalls, from which it is screened by brass rails and curtains, and the pit floor, being on the rake or incline, gives the audience an uninterrupted view of the stage. The proscenium opening dividing the stage from the auditorium is provided with a fire-resisting curtain. The stage, which is lofty and well lighted, contains the usual fly galleries and grid, approached by a spiral staircase. The stage is fitted up with all modern appliances suitable for the best productions, and it has the usual property rooms adjoining. The corner of the Rylands-street and the side street is devoted to three storeys of dressing-rooms, fitted with lavatories, dressing tables, &c., and there are the usual conveniences on each floor. These rooms are approached by a fireproof staircase leading direct to the stage and entrance. Bill-posting, storage, and other rooms are also provided, including the manager's office, which is situated adjoining the early door.

The catering for the audience is provided for by a stalls and circle refreshment-room, situated on the right of the main crush-room (but approached only by the stalls), and there is also a bar at the rear of the pit in the basement. All the public staircases are fireproof. An electric plant and gas engine are provided in a fireproof room in the basement, and the whole of the theatre, including the stage, is lighted by electricity, with a complete system of gas lighting provided for in case of emergency. In the centre of the elliptic dome of the auditorium ceiling is a sunburner which acts as an exhaust ventilator, and lights up the whole of the auditorium with gas if required. The decorative treatment of the interior has had careful consideration, and is worked out in shades of salmon pink and red, relieved with gold, while the upholstery and hangings are in deep crimson. The doors, screens, and dados of the main entrance, which are in mahogany, and the mosaic floor and tiling are in harmony with the general scheme of decoration. The decorative figure subject over the proscenium opening has been specially painted for the theatre, likewise all scenery, which is composed of some very pleasing sets. For the cold weather a system of heating by hot water is provided, and all the dressing-rooms are heated by pipes, which will also serve as drying rails.

The whole of the works have been designed and completed in just over six months.

The architect for the whole of the works is Mr. F. Bennett Smith, F.R.I.B.A., of Manchester. The acting-manager is Mr. Fred J. Reece.

Prior to the performance of Beside the Bonnie Brier Bush, by Mr. William Mollison's company, the band struck up the National Anthem, and on the popular actor making his appearance, he was most heartily received. His portrayal of Lachlan Campbell was an ideal study. He was ably assisted by Miss Evelyn McKay, as Flora Campbell; Mr. Kindale Chalmers's Tammas Mitchell was a smart study, and there was an air of refined dignity about Mr. Whitford Kane's Earl of Kilspindie; Mr. Archie W. Chappell, as Lord Hay, was well cast; and as Sandy McPherson Mr. MacLaren was excellent; Mr. W. A. Mackersy was a typical Scotch doctor; and Mr. Henry O'Dea, as the Rev. John Carmichael, looked every inch a cleric; Mr. Alec. F. Thompson, as Archibald McKittrick pleased greatly; Miss Josephine Woodward, as Margaret Howe, was duly matronly; and Miss Elsie Vron was a charming Kate Carnegie. Miss Edith Blair Staples, as Annie, and Miss E. Hermina Black, as Geordie, both did well. The staging was good, and the performance was loudly applauded.

After the fall of the curtain on the second act, Mr. Mollison congratulated the town and the proprietors on the splendid theatre. Special reference was made to the magnificent accommodation behind the curtain. Mr. Mollison concluded:—"God bless your theatre, may it prosper."

"THE CHRISTIAN."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—There appears to be some misconception as to our production of The Christian here. We should like it to be clearly understood that the control of this theatre, both as regards the general-management and the casting and production of plays, is in our hands, and will always remain so, as long as we direct the fortunes of this house. As regards The Christian, Mr. Wentworth Croke becomes associated with us by reason of his holding the rights of the play.—Yours faithfully,

ERNEST CARPENTER,
HENRY R. SMITH.

MR. LOUIS J. BEARD, the popular manager of the Grand Theatre, Luton, was given his second annual benefit on the 1st inst., and a most successful evening was secured. Amongst those who contributed to the entertainment were Mrs. Beard, who gave the mad scene from Lucia di Lammermoor, and aroused considerable enthusiasm. Mr. Farren Soutar and Mr. S. Walsh came down specially from London to support their old friend, and gave an amusing duologue, "He that Hesitates." Mr. Walsh also gave an amusing musical recitation, and Mr. Soutar a recitation, and as an encore gave another duet. Amongst the other artists who should be mentioned were Miss Lucy Lever, who gave a solo from Maritana; and Miss Scarth Dixon, a local singer, who rendered two ballads effectively. During the evening a case of pipes was handed to Mr. Beard by the staff.

THE DRAMA IN PARIS.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

PARIS, THURSDAY, AUG. 8.—Messieurs et Mesdames les choristes have formed a syndicate. The worm has turned. Nobody has heeded their complaints, and now they are trying to help themselves. They are treated with disregard, and yet they are a necessary body. What would we do without a chorus? Fancy an opera or operette without mousquetaires, sailors, or countrymen, drinking, or making love to the pretty village girls! Any work, no matter how good, would fall flat without a chorus, for the audience wants to listen to their drinking songs, and see them raise to their lips the gilt cardboard goblets that contain no nectar, not thinking that to a thirsty man this means torture. But Messieurs les choristes do not complain about that. Their grievances lie deeper. They have held meetings, and, by taking joint action, have already obtained some kind of redress. At one time, especially in the provinces, when a new piece was produced it was customary to engage a certain number of men and women to constitute the chorus, and for several weeks they had to rehearse without receiving any pay. Then, the day before the première, they were informed that, for reasons of economy, the management had decided to dispense with the greater part of the chorus. This is no longer possible, inasmuch as the managers cannot now treat with them individually, but must apply to the syndicate. There are, however, other wrongs to be set right. Thus, according to a law passed last year, every manager is bound to insure the whole of his staff against accidents, and several managers in the provinces make their staff pay for the insurance premium by compelling them to sacrifice two days' pay. Yet, by doing so, the managers infringe the law, which distinctly states that these premiums are not to be charged to the employee. But the great culprits are the theatrical agents. If what I have been told is true, some agencies certainly resort to shocking practices. Thus, for reasons on which I would rather not dwell, they sign an engagement with the wife, who is sent to one watering-place, whilst her husband is booked to another. Nothing more nor less than the white slave trade. It is just possible that there is a little exaggeration in some of these statements, but if only half their grievances are true Messieurs les choristes are justified in trying to improve their not enviable lot.

I AM sorry to have to chronicle the death of Mme. Mathilde Cochard—"la grosse Mathilde," as she was commonly called, not only by her friends, but by the public, with whom she was a great favourite. Born in 1836, she made her début in Lyons, and as she showed a great aptitude for funny rôles, she soon secured an engagement at the Palais-Royal, where she appeared in almost all the new creations. At the Variétés she played an important part in Le Premier Mari de France, and in other creations at that house. Her last appearance in public was in a revival of Mamzelle Nitouche, and for the last ten years she lived in retirement on her property in Seine-et-Oise.

WE have also to deplore the death of M. Noizeux, a splendid actor, who created the rôle of Lord Amertess in Raffles, now running at the Réjane Theatre. An attack of pleurisy carried him off at the age of thirty-four. In 1895 he was engaged at Antoine's, whence he went to the Porte-Saint-Martin, where he appeared in Cyrano de Bergerac. At the Renaissance we saw him in La Châtelaine, L'Adversaire, and Cinquebille. Mme. Réjane, who greatly appreciated M. Noizeux's talent, at once engaged him when she opened her new house. The young artist's death is deeply deplored in the theatrical world, where he had many friends.

THE Opéra-Comique will reopen on Sept. 1. M. Carré has, I am told, asked M. Xavier Leroux, the composer, to set to music a new work, called Pierre-le-Véridique, but M. Carré will first produce Le Chemineau, by the same author.

To miss securing a first prize for comedy by only one vote is ill-luck. It happened to Mlle. Simone Frevalles at last month's Conservatoire prize competition, and she was all the more disconsolate as the great success she scored with the public caused her to expect a "premier prix." To-day, however, she is happy, for she has just been engaged by M. Antoine for the Odéon.

THE ACTORS' ASSOCIATION.

The usual weekly meeting of the Council of the Association was held at 10, King-street, Covent Garden, W.C., on Tuesday, when there were present Mr. Fredk. Morland (chairman), Messrs. Cecil Brooking, C. F. Collings, H. Athol Forde, Roy Horniman, and Chas. Cruikshanks (secretary).

The minutes of July 16, 23, and 30 were read and confirmed. The Secretary stated that the hon. solicitors would not attend the meeting that day and they had nothing to report. Mr. Fred Grove was elected as a member of the Council to take the place vacated by Mr. Arthur Holmes-Gore.

The Chairman read a letter addressed by Mr. H. Beerbohm Tree to the secretary. The secretary was directed to acknowledge the receipt of the communication, and to state that it would be handed on to the "Minimum Wage" committee.

The Secretary reported that in accordance with the articles of association—seventy days having expired since they came into operation, May 27, 1907—he had removed fifteen names from the register, those still remaining on the list of unpaid subscriptions representing members abroad. The Council, having considered the question, instructed the secretary to write to certain of these late members acquainting them of the fact of their names being struck off the register and suggesting their reinstatement.

Dr. Pern, of 86, Osmaston-road, Derby, was elected as an H.M.O. to the A.A.

The Chairman read a letter from Miss Georgina Hamilton resigning her seat on the Council, and the "Social" and "Commissioners" committees. The secretary was directed to thank the lady on behalf of the Council for her services in the past, and to express their deep regret that circumstances had arisen necessitating the tendering of her resignation, which was accepted with reluctance.

One former member was reinstated. The Suggestion Book was considered and an entry made.

PRESENTATION.—At the Royal, Peterborough, on Tuesday, Mr. Charles Leverton was the recipient of a substantial cheque as a token of esteem and regard from the members of Mrs. Ann Hughes' Young Lieutenant Opera Company, for the successful reproduction of which he was responsible.

AT the Newport Lyceum this week Messrs. W. H. Hallatt and Walter Howard's company is appearing in Her Love Against the World. Mr. Howard appears as Eric, and gives a fine performance; Miss Grace Haywood is a dignified Princess Iris; and Miss Rossie St. John as Nello shows talent. Mr. Mayor Cooke as Prince Ulric is effective; the Prince of Othmar of Mr. Ronald Bayne has grace and refinement; and as Prince Maurice of Saxonia, Mr. Fred Emery is decidedly successful. Miss Evelyn Hope does well as Sheelah, and humour is supplied by Messrs. H. B. Lowe and R. Webb and Misses Hettie Ferguson and Lizzie Lennon. At the Empire, Bella and Bijou, in The Suffragette, keep the house in a roar; Geo. Reeves is a comedian of ability; and the Sisters Poole, society entertainers, deserve recognition. J. W. Hall is a quaint comedian; Marco, boy magician, does excellently; and Dun and Alden, in the comedy act, The Coastguards, convulsed the house. Stanley Britt, in illustrated songs, and the American Bioscope complete the bill.

CHARLES KEAN AT WORK.

MR. JOHN COLEMAN, in "Fifty Years of an Actor's Life," gives an interesting account of the methods of the Keans. He says:—

These distinguished people were then at their zenith. Excepting Charles Mathews and Mario, they were the least bumptious and affected people in the artistic world. In society they were affable and approachable; and in the theatre, although strict disciplinarians, they were amiable and complaisant. He would have been a bold man, however, who attempted a liberty with Charles Kean, for most assuredly the hand of iron would have been immediately felt through the glove of velvet. It was not customary then to travel, as is now the case, with an entire company; hence our labours during this engagement were absolutely Herculean.

Looking back on Kean's programme, even after all these years, its extent and variety amaze me. During the eight or nine nights of their engagement, they produced Richard, Hamlet, Macbeth, Othello, Love, Much Ado, Money, The Gamester, and The Wonder; the last two for their benefit. Of course, these works could never have been got through at all save for the fact that Mr. and Mrs. Kean did not require to rehearse their own scenes (i.e. scenes which were entirely confined to themselves), and had not the majority of the company been experienced and accomplished actors.

It was terrible drudgery, however, for every one, from the stars downwards. Our rehearsals commenced daily at ten and lasted until four, and sometimes even later. By the time we got home to "tea dinner," and had arranged our "properties," etc., it was almost time to get back again to commence the performance. It was a labour of love, however, to do whatever we could to help the Keans, not only because it was our duty, but because they made our duty delightful by their grace and charm of manner. I have met persons since, and in high places too, who rarely attended a rehearsal, or, if they did, would keep an entire body of people waiting for an hour or two, and when at length they put in an appearance, never deigned to offer an apology for their insolence. Obviously this sort of thing could only obtain through the supineness of managers or the servility of actors, who, by their sycophancy, condoned this social indignity and artistic outrage.

The Keans were, however, the first on the stage at rehearsals, and the last to leave it. As for me, I didn't want to go home, morning, noon, or night. I never left the wings for a single moment. My delight was unbounded, and my pleasure enhanced by my wonder, as I beheld each play take form and shape beneath the master-hand. The process reminded me of the story in "The Arabian Nights" where the imprisoned Genie emerges from an iron pot on the seashore, and dilates into the form and proportions of a Colossus. It seemed to my inexperienced mind simply amazing that one head could not only contain the flood of knowledge which Kean poured forth on every subject connected with the text, the costumes, and the "business, but that at every interval occasioned by the setting of a scene, etc., he could unbend and tell the most amusing stories with the greatest zest.

Both he and his wife were capital raconteurs, and we were eager and delighted listeners to their overflowing répertoire of original and amusing experiences. Their regard for each other was beautiful to witness: he was profoundly attached to her, and she idolised him.

She used to say with the most perfect naïveté, "When my Charlie was a boy, he was the ugliest lad I ever met: but I could never see his ugly face for his beautiful gig lamps of eyes." To which he responded, "And I could dever see yours, Delly, because of your beautiful dose." "And you could not see much of that, dear, for I was always falling down and breaking it and coating it with scale armour."

That nasal organ must have had an Antean quality of recuperation, inasmuch as its contact with its mother earth had apparently not reduced its somewhat exuberant dimensions by the breadth of a hair.

Although approaching maturity, Mrs. Kean was a finely-preserved and splendid woman of more than middle height. Certain natural advantages, in which she took a not altogether inexcusable pride, were very conspicuous in Rosalind, in Viola, and in Ion, in all of which parts she still presented a comely and statuesque appearance. A well-shaped head was covered with a profusion of light brown hair; delicately pencilled eyebrows surmounted large, beautiful hazel eyes; while her well-cut ruddy lips set off to advantage two rows of dazzling white teeth; and, to crown all, "her smile was sunshine and her voice was music."

As to Kean's personnel, his face was merely redeemed from being positively ugly by the splendour of his eyes. His head was large and covered with a thatch of very coarse straight black hair, which he wore very long. His brow was majestic and imposing. His mouth and chin were firm and well cut; but his nose was of so irregular an order that I really do not know how to describe it. Although his figure scarcely approached the middle height, it was so muscular, so symmetrical, and so admirably balanced that one ceased to wonder at his being captain of his crew at Eton. His neck was like a pillar of ivory, his chest was broad and expansive, his waist slender, while his legs—well, they were more elegant than sturdy, with perhaps a slight suspicion of the parallelogram inherited from his father.

Charles moved with ease, grace, and distinction, and, despite his plebian features and his long hair at all times and in all places impressed one with the idea that he was a gentleman. I was particularly struck with this distinguishing and all-pervading characteristic in his Evelyn. In parts of this character Kean succeeded, despite of nature, for he had a kind of frog-in-the-gutter voice, and usually spoke as if he had a cold in the head; besides which, he had two or three vocal eccentricities, which he could never surmount or even control. For instance, he could not pronounce the consonants "m" and "n."

In the first scene with Jarvis in The Gamester he begins by inquiring, "Well, Jarvis, what says the world of me? I'll tell thee what it says. It calls me a false friend, a faithless husband, a cruel father—in one short word, it calls me Galester!" In Shylock he was wont to say:

"You take by life
When you do take the beans whereby I live."

But his most unfortunate slip occurred in the last line of Money, where Evelyn says that, in order to enjoy the good things of life, we require "plenty of money." In this situation Kean always brought the curtain down with a roar by sarcastically remarking that the one thing necessary to complete our happiness is "plenty of putty!"

Despite these drawbacks, he was so earnest and sympathetic, so graceful, so picturesque, and, above all, so gentlemanly, that he rarely or ever failed to hold his audience. As for myself, being a youthful iconoclast, I was more impressed by his delightful personality and his remarkable skill as a stage manager than by his ability as an actor.

He opened in Cibber's adaptation of Richard III., the costumes, arms, and armour of which he brought from Drury Lane, and very authentic and splendid they were. We had only one rehearsal of this play, and from ten in the morning until six at night he never left the stage, nor did we either. Richard was said to be his "crack" part; but I had the audacity and the bad taste to think it a "penny plain and tuppence coloured" performance. Yet how admirably he commenced it! Indeed, up to the end of the second act he was natural, refined, elegant, and insinuating. After that, it was all scowl and shrug, start and strut, fret and fume. His mixture of shout and shriek of exaggerated grimace and gesture, in the "Flourish trumpets! Strike alarum drums!" speech reminded me more of Mr. Punch's rooty toot than the tone of high command of the last of the Plantagenets. Yet in the very same scene his

"Off with his head! So much for Buckingham!" was the perfection of stage trickery. Then he fought like a bull-dog and died like a Briton, and brought the curtain down with thunders of applause.

His Macbeth had splendid and picturesque moments, more especially in the last act. During the performance of this play, Rickards, who afterwards became a popular star at the minors, enacted Seyton. Being "a fellow of infinite jest," he was occupied in telling funny stories in the green-room when he ought to have been on the stage in the fourth act. There was a "dead stick," and Kean was furious. He prowled up and down the stage like a tiger, growling, "Where is the brute? Send him on, that I may kill him!"

After a prolonged delay, Mr. O. Seyton appeared.

"What's your Grace's will?" he inquired in great trepidation.

"Saw you the weird sisters?" fiercely inquired Kean.

To which Seyton ought to reply, "No, my Lord." But with a desire to make matters agreeable to the irate tragedian, he replied, "Yes, my Lord!"

Quite taken off his balance, Kean gasped, "The d——l you did! Where are they, then?"

Utterly unmanned, the wretched Seyton replied, "I'll show your Majesty if you'll deign to step round the corner!"

Of course, not another word of the scene could be heard; but when they made their exit, Kean let fly and anathematised Seyton.

That gentleman was, however, equal to the occasion.

"Although I admit that I am to blame," said he, "yet the fault was yours, sir."

"Bine, sir—bine!"

"Yes, sir. I was standing at the wing looking at the scene, when you magnetised, dazzled, and blinded me by the effulgent light of your eyes."

"Bless my soul! you don't say so?"

"Yes indeed, sir."

Kean, whose weak point was vanity, relaxed into a smile as he replied, "Well, don't do it again, dear boy, because you flummuxed me, and I can't bear to be flummuxed."

THE staff of the Palace Vaudeville Theatre, Southampton, spent a delightful day on the Thames on the 2nd inst. The party, which numbered about seventy, travelled from the Docks Station in two spacious saloons that were attached to the Waterloo express, and detrained at Surbiton, where a special tramcar was in waiting to convey them to Teddington, their headquarters for the day. A ten mile ride through a pretty district afforded a pleasant first-impression of the neighbourhood. Luncheon was served in a marquée on the lawn of the Clarence Hotel, a charming and excellently appointed hostelry, of which Mr. R. Judd Green, an old Southamptonian, is now proprietor. Boating took place under most favourable conditions. Later on a sports programme was carried out very successfully by Mr. J. E. Mortimer, the various events creating much amusement. Dinner was served at six o'clock, and at its conclusion a short toast list was negotiated. The chairman (Mr. W. Trussell), in proposing "The Macnaghten Vaudeville Circuit," expressed Mr. Macnaghten's regret that he could not be present, and added that their chief, however, wished them a most enjoyable day. But for Mr. Macnaghten, proceeded the chairman, the outing would not be possible, because he very kindly gave the hall, and at some sacrifice to himself, for a matinée on behalf of the fund. The toast was greeted with enthusiasm, the company according Mr. Macnaghten musical honours. The chairman afterwards submitted "The Staff," bearing personal testimony to its efficiency and loyalty, and to the harmony that existed between the different branches. He referred to the promotion of Mr. Bradbury (who is now manager of one of the other halls on the circuit), and Mr. Waddop (leader of the orchestra), and welcomed Mr. Miller (the new assistant-manager) and Mr. Morris (the new musical director) as members of the staff. Mr. G. Gear proposed the health of the chairman, and the reception accorded the toast was eloquent evidence of the popularity of its subject. Mr. Trussell made a brief response, and afterwards gave "The Visitors," Mr. Mortimer responding. Shortly after eight o'clock the party left Teddington, and reached home at midnight.

HERMAN MERIVALE AND THE TERRYS.

"Of all the actresses of my English day," says the late Herman Merivale, in "Bar, Stage, and Platform," "to the end Kate Terry, with Helen Faucit her forerunner, will remain my favourite and first choice. Both reached their greatest fame at twenty-three. The acquaintance thus begun in behind-the-scenes boy-and-childhood grew into a very close and loving friendship with her family, and led to my playing many parts as an amateur with her and the still younger Nelly, who by right of her adorable impulse was to grow into the first stage-favourite of the town, in the years then hidden in the folds. Her first I saw as 'Puck'—a child—rising through the stage upon a toadstool, like incarnate mischief. And I think that the feat has lent a kind of Pixie-flavour, ever since, to all the scenes of comedy that she has played. Both Kate and she commingled tears and laughter charmingly. But Nelly's gift was laughter. Kate's was tears. Infinitely funny were many of the stage adventures that we all had together. Too many for a record that must cover so much ground. But one was memorable. We played for some distress about something that was going on in Lancashire. I think it had to do with cotton and the American war. Anyhow, it was one of those charitable calls for self-sacrifice which the amateur actor always feels so acutely. Our theatre was a big theatre. For, to rise to a great occasion, our committee took Covent Garden. And our play was a small play, meant for a small stage. It was The Lighthouse, a thrilling little melodrama by Wilkie Collins. And Palgrave Simpson and I enacted the two Gurnocks, father and son. And the curtain rose on the first act, and discovered us with our two heads in our four hands, on the two opposite ends of a sea-chest, cut off from 'land' in a lighthouse, and starving by our two selves. My part was the inevitable 'young first,' for which, in days of romantic slimness, I was always cast. Therefore it was a very bad one. But through an awkward failure on the author's part, I never left the stage for a minute through the whole play. We had not had a single rehearsal in the big house, to accustom us to the size, and when the curtain rose, the public, who had not seen our charitable intentions in a proper light, filled at a liberal guess, about one-tenth of it. I gazed upon the sparsely populated district as I raised my head, and spake. If I had not in those days learned to modulate my voice, I was possessed at all events of what is called an organ. To be heard on the stage is everything. And I wish that a few more players thought so nowadays. So I projected my young chest, inflated my young lungs, and, fixing with my eye the farthest-off straggler whom I could dimly discern in the gloom (after a piece of advice once given me by Alfred Wigan) I intoned as through a fancy speaking-trumpet: 'I've had no food for many days, and I'm so weak that I can scarcely speak.' My spirit must have prevailed over my flesh: for my little all all heard me.

"Later on came my climax in that strange ordeal of discomfort. I had to open a bay-window, and the sea was to dash in. It was to be soap-suds by a new invention, with a great deal of wind. Through the bay the ocean was expected to enter. I went towards that window. The bay was still there, but the soap-suds were gone. 'Look out for the dash of the spray, Martin,' said my father Aaron. So I did; but it wasn't there. 'Much wind but no soap-suds,' thought I. I must pretend. So I retired into the bay out of sight of the audience, to come back pretending. But as I did so an ancient woman rose behind that window, with a huge wooden bowl in her hands, having entirely missed her cue. And without a moment's warning she hurled the whole contents into my face. The audience didn't see it. Nor did I. Blind, spluttering, choking, staggering, I got back to my seat just as my sweetheart Kate Terry arrived in a boat to save me. She rushed upon her Martin to enfold him in a stage embrace. All I could do was to croak out in the hoarsest tones, under what breath that dash of the spray had left me, 'For the Lord's sake don't kiss me! I am only soap.'"

MR. BANNISTER HOWARD will reopen his dramatic season at the Crystal Palace Theatre on Sept. 9 with Veronique. If the enterprise meets with the same success as it did last year Mr. Howard's efforts will be well repaid.

MR. RICHARD TERRY, organist of Westminster Cathedral, says the report that Dom Perosi, the well-known master of the Sistine Choir in Rome, will visit England this year to observe the working of the Roman Catholic Church music at Westminster Cathedral and elsewhere, is incorrect. In a letter to Mr. Terry, the famous maestro states that his visit cannot take place until next year.

IN MEMORY OF THE LATE G. W. HUNT.

"We don't want to fight,
But, by Jingo, if we do."

The above is an illustration of the monument which has been erected to the memory of Mr. G. W. Hunt. As a writer of popular songs in the early days of the music halls Mr. G. W. Hunt became famous. Mr. F. H. Pedgrift, of The Era, became treasurer of a fund for the erection of a memorial to the song writer's name. In this movement the members of Mr. Hunt's family joined, also a few of his old friends, amongst whom were Mr. Harry Rickards, Miss Fanny Leslie, Mr. Harry Randall, Mr. Felix McGlennon, and Mr. Charles Wilmott. The following words, which emanate from the Nibs, are inscribed on the obelisk:—

"IN MEMORY OF G. W. HUNT.

"He wrote many of the People's Songs, and one that during the Russo-Turkish War of 1878 so stirred public enthusiasm as to greatly strengthen the policy of the British Government of the day, and may, therefore, justly claim some influence on the disposal of power in Eastern Europe.

"Not always Kings and Cabinets
Shall guide a people's fate;
A rhyme may wreck an Empire—
A song may save a State."

BROADWAY THEATRE, S.E.

On Monday, Aug. 5, the Play in five acts, by F. C. Burnand, entitled "PROOF; OR, A CELEBRATED CASE."

After being closed for a week, this handsome theatre reopened on Monday for the autumn season, which was inaugurated by the revival of the ever-popular play, Proof, in which Mr. Louis Calvert makes a very welcome re-appearance. This sterling actor imbues everything he does with his own powerful and striking personality, and imparts a vitality to Pierre Lorance that is quite irresistible. The bursts of spontaneous applause that greeted the situations were loud and prolonged; and these were won by the really admirable acting of the chief artists, and not by sensational effects. Mr. Cecil Calvert's Chamboran was a capital performance full of dry humour, always artistic, and never exaggerated; Mr. S. A. Cookson presented a clever portrait of Lazarre; the Victo De Launay of Mr. R. Fielding was very good; Mr. H. Tripp Edgar as the Due d'Aubterre once more proved himself an able and conscientious performer. Mr. Ernest Allardyce (Captain), Mr. Sidney Hallows (Seneschal), Mr. R. Davis (Sergeant), Mr. George Kane (Corporal), and Mr. Belton (Joseph) were all good in their respective parts. As Mme. Deprets Miss Ada Mellon was admirable, her performance being one of the best efforts of the evening. Miss Maimee Murry was an impressive and dignified Duchesse d'Aubterre; Miss Beatrice De Burgh was all that could be desired as Valentine, and in the great scene with her supposed father rose to marked excellence, and was, with Lazarre, warmly recalled at the end of act. Miss May Chevalier, first as the ill-fated Madelaine and afterwards as Adrienne, made a very decided hit by her charming and sympathetic performance, the difference between mother and daughter being cleverly conveyed. The remaining female parts were in the capable hands of Miss Amy De Burgh, Miss Jessica Black, Miss Ethel Bird, and Miss Kate Ruskin. Mr. William Giffard is the popular General-Manager, and Mr. T. N. Walters the courteous Acting-Manager for Mr. Louis Calvert.

AT a certain card-party, its principal attraction was Mrs. Clive, the celebrated actress, who, having retired from the stage on a handsome competency, rented a villa on the bank of the Thames of Horace Walpole. Owing to her amazing celebrity as a comic actress, and as during her long theatrical career calumny itself had never aimed the slightest arrow at her fame, honest Kitty Clive (for so she was familiarly called) was much noticed in the neighbourhood. Yet from her eccentric disposition, strange, eccentric temper, and frank, blunt manner, Mrs. Clive did not always go off with quite so much éclat in private as in public life, particularly if she happened to be crossed by that touchstone of temper, gaming. Quadrille was proposed, and all immediately took their stations. I soon observed Mrs. Clive's countenance alternately redden and turn pale. At last her Manille went, and with it the remnants of her temper. Her face was of a universal crimson, and tears of rage seemed ready to start into her eyes. At that very moment, as Satan would have it, her opponent, a dowager, whose hoary head and eyebrows were as white as those of an Albiness, triumphantly and briskly demanded payment for the two black aces. "Two black aces!" answered the enraged loser, in a voice rendered almost unintelligible by passion; "here, take the money, though instead, I wish I could give you two black eyes, you old white cat!"

THE LAW OF COPYRIGHT
BY ALBERT A. STRONG, LL.B.
Copyright confusion is, like the poor, always with us, and as it seems likely to remain so until at least the crack of doom, it were well for all concerned, or likely to be concerned, to take immediate steps to secure a copy of Mr. Albert A. Strong's new work, entitled "The Law of Copyright." Mr. Strong is already favourably known to the profession for his text-book on "Dramatic and Musical Law," which, like his latest production, is published at "The Era" Office. "The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer" essays to make clear to the non-legal mind what is—or, in some cases, what probably is—the law as to musical and dramatic copyright. The chapters on the Berne Convention and on the Chase Act, passed by the United States Congress last March, are full of interest.—Referee.
Mr. A. A. Strong has published a book on "The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer," which should be in the hands of everyone who is obliged to know about this perplexing subject. Dramatic copyright in England is in a particularly unsatisfactory state, and it is much to be hoped that ere long some more rational method of securing protection for a play may be devised than the slovenly and sometimes costly "production for copyright purposes," which is at present required.—St. James's Gazette.

THE LAW OF COPYRIGHT FOR ACTOR AND COMPOSER,
BY
ALBERT A. STRONG, LL.B. (Lond.).

Chapter I
COPYRIGHT AS OPPOSED TO PERFORMING RIGHT.
Chapter II.
PERFORMING RIGHT.
Chapter III.
INFRINGEMENT AND REMEDIES.
Chapter IV.
MUSICAL COPYRIGHT.
Chapter V.
INTERNATIONAL AND COLONIAL COPYRIGHT.

"The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer," by Albert A. Strong, LL.B., solicitor, author of "Dramatic and Musical Law" ("The Era" office), seems to be the one compendious and indispensable authority on the subject, as vexed as the "Bermoothes" and as tortuous as a Chancery suit, that has long been wanted. It is in every essential a text book for the perplexed layman, and no solicitor or barrister worth his salt ought to think of taking or appearing in "proceedings" without consulting its pages. It must suffice, after what has been said, to state little more than that the contents include five chapters, respectively named "Copyright as Opposed to Performing Right," "Performing Right," "Infringement and Remedies," "Musical Copyright," and "International and Colonial Copyright." The work, for all its precise authority, is not dry reading. The statutes, with the elucidatory notes, necessarily impose a task on the reader which takes some tackling, but they had to be there. The cases adduced, however, are full of interest. Certain of them might fitly find a place in the romance of copyright. There was the fight of Charles Reade with George Conquest over "It's Never Too Late to Mend," for instance, and the equally interesting conflict of Mr. J. A. Cave with Chatterton over "The Wandering Jew." The latter was a famous battle. Chatterton took it to the House of Lords, and was finally beaten, to the unspeakable relief of Mr. Cave, who is never weary of relating the story. Had the result been otherwise, it would have meant his ruin. I well remember meeting him on the day of his victory and "crashing a cup with him" in honour of the same. "The Law of Copyright" is dedicated to Mr. A. W. Pinero.—Sportsman.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1907.
"The Era" Dramatic and Musical Annual for 1907 is up to its usual standard—in fact, it is, if possible, smarter than ever. There is an excellent budget of articles from the pens of Miss Ellen Terry, Miss Cicely Richards, Miss Pollie Emery, Messrs. Frank Cooper, Arthur Collins, Charles Collette, Frank Curzon, Edward German, Cliff Ryland, and many others. The illustrated obituary, the alphabetical list of plays produced in London and the provinces, and all the other valuable features of the Annual are as complete as ever, and make this handbook extremely useful not only to members of the profession, but to the infinitely wider circle interested directly or indirectly in the drama.—Whitehall Review.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1907.
"The Era" Annual deservedly ranks high as a record of the passing theatrical show. The new issue, in a comprehensive survey of the drama, mentions in proper order all the productions and revivals of the year, both at home and abroad and gives a list of the theatres and music halls of the United Kingdom, with the names of their respective managers. The lighter side of the publication, to which many well-known managers and performers contribute, is of exceptionally high literary merit.—Morning Leader, Jan. 21, '07.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1907.
Once more, stuffed with good things, "The Era" Annual appears from its office at 5, Tavistock-street. The edition for 1907 is as nicely got up as its predecessors, and, in addition to a calendar and other theatrical memoranda, contains two lists of the year's productions, one arranged under the names of the theatres and the other alphabetically. In addition there are a number of striking or humorous contributions by leading actors and actresses—Miss Ellen Terry, Mr. Frank Cooper, Mr. Frank Curzon, Mr. Arthur Collins, Mr. Charles Collette, Miss Alma Murray, and Mr. John Lawson are among those who have contributed bright experiences to this up-to-date shilling theatrical handbook.—Star, Jan. 22.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1907.
A compendium of great value to all interested, professionally or otherwise, in music and drama is "The Era" Dramatic and Musical Annual, the issue for 1907 of which has just been issued (London: 5, Tavistock-street, Strand, 1s.). Especially attractive are the stories told by some twenty artists, whose photographs and autographs are included.—Glasgow Herald, Jan. 31.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1907.
"The Era" Annual for 1907. 1s. "Era" Office, 5, Tavistock-street, Strand, W.C. Once again this useful publication comes out with its useful tabular information concerning things dramatic, such as the date of the production of new plays and important revivals produced at the London, provincial, and Paris theatres. In addition are many portraits and short stories given over the signatures of many prominent theatrical and music hall people, and a variety of other interesting matter.—Financial Times, Jan. 21, '07.

THE ERA

SATURDAY, AUGUST 10, 1907.

AN ENGLISH CONSERVATOIRE.

The summer term of the Academy of Dramatic Art has closed, and the pupils and teachers are enjoying a well-earned holiday, with the agreeable feeling of duty well performed and success attained by earnest effort. The gratitude of all connected with the profession is due to the Council of the Academy. Nothing but real devotion to the art which they love could have induced gentlemen like Sir SQUIRE BANCROFT, Mr. GEORGE ALEXANDER, Mr. FORBES-ROBERTSON, Mr. CYRIL MAUDE, Mr. ARTHUR BOURCHIER, Mr. PINERO, and Mr. J. M. BARRIE to give their time and attention to a scheme like this, so difficult to organise and to carry out. The obstacles in the way of the establishment of a dramatic school in London have always been evident to us, and we have not shrunk from stating them. Many years since, when the unfortunate experiment in Argyle-street collapsed, we pointed out that the sine quâ non for the existence of a school of acting on the lines of the Paris Conservatoire was the personal co-operation and active interest of the leading London managers. A great inducement that is held out to the pupils at the Paris school is that success in its classes entitles the pupil to an appearance at the Comédie Française. Without claiming any such right for the triumphant aspirants at the Academy of Dramatic Art, we may at least feel certain that the advent of any remarkable talent to that establishment will not pass unnoticed by our active and alert entrepreneurs. Young actors and actresses of promise are not so numerous that the managers can afford to lose any chance of discovering them; and it cannot be now said that histrionic genius is "born to blush unseen, and waste its sweetness" in private life for want of training and subsequent introduction to the "powers that be."

The work done at the School has been performed without any flourish of trumpets, and without mercenary or personal aims. When we think of the numerous claims on the time of such celebrities as Sir SQUIRE and Lady BANCROFT, Mr. JOHN HARE, Mr. GEORGE ALEXANDER, Mr. FORBES-ROBERTSON, Mr. CYRIL MAUDE, Miss WINIFRED EMERY, Mr. ARTHUR BOURCHIER, and Mr. PINERO, the deep interest taken by them in the School is proved by the fact that, from time to time, they have given "special rehearsals" to the students in the same honorary way as that in which instruction is given by Royal Academicians in the Royal Academy Schools. The amount of nervous energy expended in rehearsing a play or part of a play conscientiously is great, even with actors and actresses who know their business thoroughly. In the case of comparative novices, who have still much to learn, the task is both strenuous and fatiguing. The art of teaching acting is an extremely delicate and difficult one. To inspire the sluggish with ardour, to restrain the undisciplined energy of the excitable, and to inspire all with high aims and an ardent desire for perfection is a power not granted to all, and the fact that leading actor-managers are willing to exercise their abilities in this direction without hope of gain, and certainly without any self-advertisement or public display, shows how seriously the magnates of the dramatic world have grasped the situation and its necessities.

A point which we have always endeavoured to drive home in the past has been the absolute necessity of there being some method of selection of pupils, and some power of rejection of the obviously unprepared and unfit. The desire of many of our young men, and more especially of our young women, to "go on the stage" almost amounts to a mania. Large sums are offered as bonuses to those who will introduce individuals to the stage; but, unfortunately, the power to pay for the coveted connection is not always united with the qualities which make for dramatic achievement. About the time of the Argyle-street experiment already referred to, we obstinately insisted on this power of selection as one of the necessities of any great Dramatic School. By "entrance examinations" the Council of the Academy of Dramatic Art have detected the unfitness of a large number of candidates; as much as £500 has been refused in fees by the examiners, and fifty per cent. of the candidates have failed to pass the tests for sufficient qualification for stage work. The fact that such a large sum was rejected for sound reasons shows the uprightness of its management, and proves how pure are the methods of the Academy, and how free from the influences of favouritism or greed.

There never was a time when tuition for the stage was more necessary than at present. It is a truism that, with the decay of the stock company system, and the substitution for it of travelling companies with long runs of popular pieces, the opportunities offered to novices for practice in the rudiments of their calling have been greatly reduced. But, as Mr. EDWARD COMPTON pointed out the other day, the stock company system, whatever it was at best, was not, at worst, an unmixed blessing. Of course, all teaching is but a preparation for the practice of the art on the public stage; but it may well be doubted whether a course of private work under the guidance of such accomplished instructors and instructresses as Miss BATEMAN, Mr. HENRY NEVILLE, Mr. BEN GREET, and Mrs. S. BRERETON DOUGLASS be not a better training for the higher kind of acting than the hasty rehearsal and mindless drudgery which distinguished the second-rate stock company of the last generation.

REOPENING OF LEICESTER THEATRE ROYAL.

Messrs. Milton Bode and Edward Compton, the lessees of the Theatre Royal, Leicester, by far the oldest place of entertainment in the town, have taken the opportunity to overhaul and redecorate the building, which presented a bright appearance at its reopening on Monday. The vestibule has been completely transformed, the colours here being white and red, with fanciful figures running round the top. The crush entrance, with its magnificent large statue in white of the God of Music, is done in red, gold, and blue, and the same colour scheme is utilised in the corridors on either side. The appearance of the auditorium has been entirely changed. The pit looks extremely well in blue, white, red, and gold, the two statues in the alcoves on either side of the stage being white. The dress circle is in four colours, with the ceiling over the top in blue, picked out in two shades of red, the panelling being done in blue, and the side circles being in the same colours, with red plush panelling. The front running round the circle is handsomely done in blue, gold, light brown, and red, the proscenium having a replica of the colours found here, which make a harmonious whole. The amphitheatre and gallery have also had careful attention paid to them. The dome follows the same scheme as the other parts of the auditorium, and is embellished by figures of old masters. The stage has had a thorough overhauling, and the entire theatre has been cleaned from the grid to the floor. The improvement throughout is marked, and congratulations are due to Messrs. Bode and Compton, and their business-manager, Mr. E. R. Beaumont, who has been assiduous in his attentions.

The attraction provided for the opening night was Miss Frances Delaval's company, in the sensational melodrama, The Biggest Scamp on Earth, followed on the last three nights of the week with Her Lost Self. A capital audience assembled, and gave Miss Delaval and her excellent company a good send-off on the commencement of their tour. As Naomi Belvedere, the music hall star, Miss Frances Delaval was conspicuously successful, and in the title-rôle Mr. Frederick Scarth displayed his histrionic abilities in a manner which left nothing to be desired. Both Miss Rose Vernon Paget as Mother Hawk and Mr. A. Lubinoff as Napoleon Hawk were good. Mr. George Harvey made an excellent impression as Vivian Wakefield, as also did Miss Eleanor Glover as Irene May. Mr. Fred Gresham as Rufus Liggins, Miss Kate Gurney as Molly Sterling, and Mr. Laud Stillwell as Joe Piper, created much merriment in the comedy parts. Tiny Carrie Johnson was seen to advantage as Bobby, the disowned; and Mr. Leslie York was capital as Sir Aubrey Knight. The play is adequately staged.

Rid of the Rats.

THE late Mr. Joseph Hobson, the proprietor of the Theatre Royal, Leeds, was a very wealthy man, so much so that he lent considerable sums of money to the corporation of that city. But although rich he, like John Gilpin's wife, had a frugal mind. His theatre, like many others, was swarming with rats, and to minimise the rodentian evil the services of a rat-catcher were enlisted. This was done, and when after some days and nights some hundreds of rodents had been captured, the man applied for his money. "I hear," said careful Joseph, "that you sell these rats to dog-fanciers for rat-pit entertainments. Is that so?" "Aye, mesthur; that's quite reet," replied the man. "Well, then, it seems to me that if I pay you for catching them you're being paid twice over! They're my rats, don't you see?" Remonstrances and arguments were in vain, and were cut short by his getting in his cab and driving off, leaving the rat-catcher, with his prey, in cages, on a long barrow, in the street. But not for long did this Pied Piper of Leeds hesitate; for, walking up to Joseph's private house, with his assistant following him with the rats, he soon arrived and again demanded payment. He was threatened with the police, and was told again that "the rodents were his—Hobson's—property!" "Varra weel," said the exasperated rat-catcher, "if they're thine, thou canst hev them"; and letting them loose they promptly took refuge in the basement of the private house.

THIS same Theatre Royal, Leeds, was next door to a music hall, and both were owned and worked by this same Joseph Hobson. When he first began theatrical management he was profundly ignorant of its mysteries, and when Barry Sullivan came to play Hamlet he watched the rehearsal with great interest. At night he sat the first act out, but thought it "dullish like," and going out next door to the music hall said to James Ellis, his manager: "Jim, how mony moar turns has this Sullivan to do?" "Turns, guv'nor? You mean acts, don't you?" "Aye; same thing—same thing!" "Oh, he has four more acts to do," said Ellis. "Has he, by gum! I'm sorry to hear it. Eh-h! but it's awful slow work, this Shakespeare," said the manager. Then, as an idea struck him, "I say, Jim. Thou knows that theer play scene they rehearsed to-day? Weel, when it cooms on send 'em in a couple of 'knockabouts' and a juggler, just to wakken things oop a bit!"

EVERYTHING we hear of Foote, says Mr. Percy Fitzgerald, is in keeping. Behind him, on the Irish stage, he had left recollections of his harsh voice, his wink, and the smile that fitted "one corner of his mouth." The Irish players noted the theatrical selfishness with which he would never "give or take," never once thinking of his fellows when in the presence of the audience, but trying to engross all the applause and attention. Even in acting this spirit made him always turn his full face to the audience, and never address his brethren. There was something gratuitous even in the manner of his buffoonery, as though he would have liked to know that it went home and annoyed the object of it. One instance, not hitherto known, is very characteristic. He was very pressing with the actor Sheridan to come to his theatre and see a new piece, placed him in a conspicuous box, and in the front row. He also got Sheridan's family to attend. The actor's amazement and anger may be conceived when he found that he had been brought there to see a picture of himself, and that all the audience recognised him and his known peculiarities in Peter Primmer.

SINCE the commencement of the summer vacation the Theatre Royal, Plymouth, has changed hands, and is now under the control of the Royal and Grand Theatres, Ltd. The new syndicate have wisely retained the services of Mr. J. Langdon Lee as resident-manager.

PROFESSIONAL JEALOUSY.

The late Johnny Toole, in Mr. Joseph Hatton's reminiscences, relates that the jealousies in the profession of the stage are not more serious than the jealousies in other walks of life; but they are sometimes more inconvenient, if not more amusing.

"Years ago at Newcastle-on-Tyne, when I was on tour with Dot and other attractive plays, Irving playing John Peerybingle and Brough Tackleton, we were considerably upset one evening, after the second act of Dot, with the announcement that the lady who played Bertha, the Blind Girl, had been taken suddenly ill, and could not finish the piece. She lay in her dressing-room in a dead faint, and although at the outset of her illness she had spoken and said she could not go on again, nothing now had any effect upon her. We sent for a doctor, and in the meantime set about trying to fill her place. The part ought to have been understudied, but it was not; there was a lady in the company who was not playing that night; she happened to be in front with her husband. She was sent for. I asked her to go on for Bertha, and said I would give her the words as we went along. In the first place she said nothing would induce her to do anything for the lady who was ill; but there was nothing in the world she would not do for me.

"At the same time, she would consent to do nothing but read the part. I pointed out to her how absurd it would be for a blind girl to read a part. Irving, in a quiet way, said it would certainly be a novelty. However, she was obdurate, and Irving made the announcement to the audience that the lady who had played the blind girl had been taken suddenly ill; and, under the circumstances, Mis So-and-So had kindly consented to read the part. The audience applauded, and seemed quite satisfied. Irving came from the front of the curtain, remarking that it was, to us a classic phrase, 'a rum go'; but it was a much rummer go than any of us foresaw.

"Under treatment the fainting lady came round, and the moment she learned that her rival was going on in her place, she leaped to her feet and emphatically said, 'Never, never!'

"I was on the stage as Caleb Plummer, and of course knew nothing of this; but when the time arrived for the pathetic entrance of the girl to myself and Dot, I heard quite a disturbance at the wing; the audience heard it too.

"'You shall not go on.' 'I must.' 'You shall not, I say!' 'But I have been announced.' 'I don't care; I am better, and I am going on!'

"Then there was something like a scuffle, and the original blind girl, for whose illness we had apologised, came bounding on with a look of defiance in her very widely-opened eyes. The audience laughed heartily and applauded vociferously, and when the baggage began to speak I believe she winked at the house, as much as to say, 'They don't get over me'; and the play went on. I need not say the spirit and intention of the scene was spoiled; but the audience was very good, and, after all, it was better to play the scene anyhow than have the blind girl read it. And as I said, although 'the good Samaritan' would do anything for me, she would not for anyone in the world walk on for a part she did not know without the book, though she had seen it played scores of times."

THEATRE ROYAL, BOURNEMOUTH.

Extensive alterations and improvements have been carried out at the Theatre Royal, Bournemouth. Mr. David Allen, the proprietor, and Mr. Frederick Mouillot, the lessee, have long since recognised the desirability of extending the theatre, and, after some negotiation, the proprietor was able to acquire at considerable expense the extensive property known as Cramond Hall, immediately adjacent to the theatre on the Richmond Hill side.

Messrs. H. E. Hawker and Mitchell were consulted, and plans were prepared by which the whole of the purchased property might be utilised. These were carried out in the short space of eight weeks. The improvements behind the curtain are extensive. The whole of the old dressing-rooms have been demolished and the space thrown into the stage, which will now have a width of 45ft., and a depth of 36ft. from the electric floats to the back wall of the structure, while the height from the stage floor to the "grid" is some 50ft. The stage in its extended form will, it is estimated, take the widest scenes now carried by the largest companies. A new and commodious scene dock has been constructed on the site of the old small and inconvenient one hitherto doing duty, and several rooms of the Cramond Hall have been fitted up as comfortable dressing-rooms, with every appliance, conveniences for making-up, etc., and lit by electric light. New rows of "battens" for the electric light and for gas have been added. More seating accommodation in the pit and balcony will be provided by an alteration in the passage ways. All staircases are of steel and concrete, and practically fire-proof. In future the admission to the stalls, dress circle, and the more expensive seats in the theatre will be on the north side of the existing building, the present entrances being only used for pit and gallery, while four additional emergency exits will be provided.

In the house at the Yelverton-road end of the theatre, and between that and the Albert-road end, will be constructed a large hall or lounge, from which there will be approaches to the principal parts of the theatre. This hall will be practically 50ft. square, with a gallery all round on a level with the theatre balcony. It will be erected in the Old English style, with oak panelling, and will be sumptously furnished. It will not only serve, together with another apartment above, as a lounge and smoking-room, but will be available for meetings, afternoon teas, and conversaziones. The theatre was reopened on Bank holiday.

MRS. GARRICK died in 1822, and we find the following notice of her death in a contemporary journal: "On the 16th of October, died at her house on the Adelphi-terrace, the relict of the British Roscius, in her ninety-ninth year. Her maiden name was Violetta, and she was a native of Vienna, where she was a dancer highly admired. Mrs. Garrick was remarkably beautiful in her face and person, and till her death she retained that erect deportment which she derived from her original profession. She was married to Garrick in 1749, and survived her husband forty-three years and upwards, he having died in 1779. Mr. and Mrs. Garrick were a very happy couple, and enjoyed the highest society in the kingdom till the close of his life; and it is remarkable that, during the whole period of their marriage, whatever invitations they received, or excursions they took, they never once slept asunder. By the death of Mrs. Garrick the library of the British Museum will be further enriched by the addition of her husband's valuable collection of old English plays, besides which the celebrated statue of Shakespeare, by Roubilliac (of which the one over the fireplace in the rotunda of Drury Lane Theatre is a cast) will grace the hall of that national establishment. The chair, too, made from Shakespeare's mulberry tree will also, it is supposed, be there deposited. It is richly carved, and would, if put up to auction, fetch an enormous price, as would, doubtless, many other articles of virtù, as having once belonged to the 'best living commentator' on the works of the Bard of Avon. Among these must not be forgotten four originals by Hogarth, of the Election. Mrs. Garrick was interred in Westminster Abbey, close by the remains of her husband, on the 25th of October."

THE BRUM STAGE AND STAGERS.

In his recollections of the Birmingham theatres Mr. T. Edgar Pemberton writes: Those were busy theatrical days in Birmingham (1863), for there then also existed "The New Adelphi Theatre" in Moor-street. The only thing that I have to record in connection with this short-lived establishment is that in it, in a small character in the delectable drama of Sweeney Todd; or, The Demon Barber of Fleet Street, Mr. Kendal made what was practically his first professional appearance. Twenty years ago this now popular and most successful actor-manager took me, during one of his Birmingham engagements, to look at a dingy little house in Prince's-street, Hick's-square (hard by St. Bartholomew's Church), in which he, in the Sweeney Todd days, lodged, and he told me how he and Squire Bancroft (who was then a minor member of the stock company at the Theatre Royal) celebrated on a memorable Saturday night a rise of salary by a beefsteak supper at a modest hostelry in Bristol-street, close to which the future Captain Hawtree made his home. Nowadays, Mr. Kendal has his mansion in Portland-place and his country house at Filey, on the Yorkshire coast; and Sir Squire Bancroft divides his time between Portman-square and Switzerland.

During the year 1863 I saw Charles Kean play Hamlet at the Theatre Royal, and I believe (with shame and contrition let me confess it) that in my youthful mind I compared the impersonation unfavourably with Stoyle's rendering of Puss in Boots; and on the same boards I witnessed Robson's marvellous assumption of the character of Sampson Burr in The Porter's Knot; but the treat of the year to me was the appearance of Sothern, at Mr. Swanborough's establishment, as the then world-famous Lord Dundreary. Poor Sothern! I happen to know that he was deeply moved at the tremendous reception that awaited him in the town in which he had once—when on the very threshold of his professional career—nervously played on the stage of the Theatre Royal—for the benefit of his early friends, Mons. and Mme. Gilmer [the father and mother of Albert Gilmer, of the Palace, Stoke Newington] the part of Frank Friskley in the time-honoured farce Boots at the Swan. "What a difference between then and now!" I heard him say. "I was offered 30s. a week to stop, and often during my American troubles and trials, and before Dundreary stepped in to make things smooth for me, I have cursed myself for refusing my Birmingham certainty. Now packed houses, handsome profits—and columns in the newspapers." How much importance Sothern attached to that early Birmingham experience of his will be judged from the fact that, when he first made his appearance as Dundreary at the Haymarket, he announced himself as "formerly of the Theatre Royal, Birmingham." My next pantomime was (at the Royal) The Queen of Hearts and Her Wonderful Tarts—and a delightful one it was. Harry Beckett was the Queen, John Barton the King, and Miss Alice Dodd, Colin. Yes, it was a good old style pantomime, in which a few really good "principals" did the work, and the subordinate parts were played by competent enough people. As the Queen and Knave Harry Beckett and Brinsley Sheridan were capital, really acting their parts, and thus endowing them with an importance not often known in pantomime.

Although I have made mention of Squire Bancroft's early connection with the Theatre Royal, I cannot say that I have any vivid recollection of his acting in any particular part. In his own most interesting memoirs he has recorded how he commenced at a salary of a guinea per week, and first appeared under a big mask as a courtier in the pantomime. Very likely I saw, and was duly impressed by him in that character. Also he has told us how on Saturday nights he was called upon to play in such venerable dramas as The Bottle, The Lonely Man of the Ocean, Susan Hopley, and Thirty Years of a Gambler's Life, in which he appeared as "the perpetrator or victim of a wide range of the vilest crimes."

At about this time, and for many succeeding years, Walter Montgomery (the ill-fated Walter Montgomery, who died by his own hand two days after his marriage in 1871) was immensely popular on Birmingham boards. His was the first Claude Melnotte that I saw, and a fine, fervid piece of acting it was, instinct with conviction, and from first to last manly and picturesque.

Of the performances of Mr. T. C. King in those days I need say little, for are they not still as familiar amongst us as household words? And yet must I place on record the delight with which I witnessed his acting in Ingomar, The Stranger, and—more than all, I think—that almost forgotten play, The Brigand. Miss Cleveland, too (afterwards Mrs. Arthur Stirling), and an admirable "leading lady," is another bright recollection of that period.

Then the brothers Harry and Charles Webb. What an ample entertainment was theirs! The Courier of Lyons and The Comedy of Errors on the same evening! Dubosc and Lesurques, the two Dromios—French adapted melodrama and Shakespearean farce—in the same bill, and both admirably done. In later years Sir Henry Irving, by doubling the two parts and by admirably mounting it, in a measure idealised the first-named piece under the name of The Lyons Mail, but I still have a kindness for its rendering by the Webbs. Concerning The Comedy of Errors as handled by these clever comedians I may tell an anecdote.

The Brothers Webb were once engaged to play the two Dromios in The Comedy of Errors, when Charles, missing his train, had to telegraph to Harry (this episode, by the way, is not identified with the Birmingham Theatre, but considering the popularity that the Webbs once enoyed here, it has some local interest), to the effect that he could not appear on the stage until about the time that the curtain might be expected to fall. Now, it will be remembered that Dromio of Ephesus does not meet Dromio of Syracuse until the final scene of the play, and, grasping the situation as a true actor should, Harry Webb played the two parts all through the piece—took care that the waits between the acts were as long as the audience would allow them—and, at the end of the comedy—just at the right moment—had the satisfaction of standing face to face with quickly-dressed and hastily made-up Brother Charles. This, of course, was no very great achievement; the pith of my story lies in the fact in the next day's newspaper (I am glad it was not a Birmingham one) the local critic sneered at the preposterous notion of the brothers considering themselves like each other. "A mere tyro," he declared, "could at any moment have seen which of the two occupied the stage!"

At the Theatre Royal in 1864 I first saw Mr. J. L. Toole, who was then accompanied by that quaint actor the late Paul Bedford. Their repertory was a varied one, but the piece that is most vividly impressed upon my memory is the good old farce of The Area Belle, in which the two—the one as a stumpy blue-uniformed policeman, and the other as the tall, red-coated grenadier—used to sing their then popular and whimsically-entitled medley, "The Paul-y-Toole-y-Technic."

It was in this year, too, that Miss Bateman first appeared amongst us in her famous character of Leah. She played to packed houses, and was supported by that conscientious and deep-voiced actor Mr. T. Swinburne (who subsequently did some good work with Sir Henry Irving at the Lyceum) and Mr. Jordan.

"THE ERA" can be obtained at the principal bookstalls throughout the provinces.

EMILE AUGIER.

The older French critics, says M. Auguste Filon, in "Modern French Drama," distinguished three kinds of comedy, the comedy of character, the comedy of manners, and the comedy of intrigue, instanced as it might be in L'Avare, Les Fâcheux, and Les Fourberies de Scapin. You will find this distinction constantly made use of by Désiré Nisard in his "Histoire de la Litérature Française, which in 1860 was still the law and the prophets. Scribe had amalgamated these three forms of comedy with the bourgeois drama invented by Diderot, and made an actual reality by Sedaine. The first act was to be given up to explanation, with a final scene in which the action opened; then after oscillating between good and evil fortune, like a game of chess in which the chances are evenly balanced, the fourth act—as a rule the Acte du Bal—crowded the stage with supers and culminated in some scandal, a duel, or a similar event in prospect. The fifth act put everything straight, and ended with a proper distribution of rewards and punishments. The first act was invariably bright; during the succeeding acts the action passed from comedy to drama by imperceptible gradations, and the final note was a note of tender, or playful, serenity, a feeling of having had a lucky escape—something like the famous verdict: Not guilty, but don't do it again. It was left to psychology and social satire to clothe the bones and muscles of the play with living flesh, and to convert it into a unity. If the comedy of manners and the dramatic intrigue fell apart, the play had failed; if the two elements were perfectly fused, the play was a good one. There was no other criterion.

It would convey an incomplete idea of the somewhat trivial complexities of this method if I omitted to mention that each act had to contain at least one great scene, composed according to certain fixed rules. The play arose out of the development of one or more characters acting upon each other, the scene out of the development of a situation. The scene, like the play itself, had its working up, its catastrophe, and its conclusion; it was, as it were, a complete and separate creation within another creation, a work of art included in another work of art, just like those delicate lace-like ivory cups that Chinese sculptors carve and fit one within another in a diminishing series.

Even that is not all, for there is the parallel intrigue, which Scribe had borrowed from the Romantic drama, or, if you prefer it, the Shakesperian drama, and adapted to his own purposes. This second intrigue, sad if the first was gay, or gay if the first was sad, might recall the first by way of refutation or parody, contrast or reflection; it might transpose it into another key, or it might take a directly contrary line. The two parallel intrigues began by being perfectly distinct, and ended by converging and contributing each their share to the dénouement. If all the threads were not gathered up, the critics counted the author a novice ignorant of his trade, and sent him back to study good models.

Augier and Dumas had nothing to urge against such an arrangement. This form suited them as well as any other for conveying their ideas. Besides, they saw one thing clearly which escapes our younger writers for the stage, namely, that intrigue is not only indispensable to the spectator's amusement, but that it is of the very essence of psychological development. Characters cannot be studied in repose like insects under a microscope. They have not even arrived at self-consciousness, they might almost be said to have only a provisional, potential existence, until the moment when they come into contact and into conflict with events or with other characters. I will take a striking example. The drama of the French Revolution threw into relief thousands of existences which, without it, would have passed into nothingness and oblivion. If there had been no revolution, Collot d'Herbois would have remained a mere strolling player; Marat a veterinary surgeon; Legendre a butcher; Chabot a Capuchin friar; Hoche a sergeant of the guard; Fouché would have been whipping the little scholars of the Oratorians; Talleyrand reciting the Mass without a particle of faith in it; Robespierre and Carnot, the one a third-rate lawyer and the other an obscure captain, would have gone on exchanging trivial verses in the Academy of the Rosati; Bonaparte, put on half-pay because of his evil reputation, would have died of fever in a corner of his native island, remembered only as a troublesome neighbour, a somewhat undisciplined officer, and a rather ridiculous author. But the drama in which their lot was cast revealed to us their power for good or evil. So, too, with an imaginary drama. As long as a human being has been neither loved, betrayed, nor given cause for jealousy, as long as he has never been called to be the ruin or the salvation of other human beings, to fall or to retrieve a fall, to pardon or to take vengeance, it is useless to study him, he is nothing but a blank page.

Augier and Dumas were willing, therefore, to accept Scribe's conception of dramatic form. Superficially their plays do not differ sensibly from his, but what is primary with them was only accessory with him, and what he employed as means to an end became with them an end in itself. Scribe gave us studies of character and pictures of manners for the sake of writing plays; Augier and Dumas wrote plays for the sake of studying character and painting manners. Thence it was but a step to what we call in modern parlance the "problem play." Augier never took the step; he never ventured beyond political and social satire.

BENSLEY, the veteran actor of the eighteenth century, had been in the Army, and when he thought proper to unbend from his dignified stateliness was prone to the relation of his moving accidents by flood and field. Whenever the name of any foreign station occurred in conversation, Bensley would exclaim, "I was there in —— such a year, and served under (such a general) as lieutenant, &c., &c. C. Bannister (against whose punning propensities Bensley waged war) had noted down all these assertions for many months, and on one particular evening, after a coolness for some days between the tragedian and himself, proposed his health in the following words: "Gentlemen, I rise to drink the health of one who has sought the bubble reputation even in the cannon's mouth; who, quitting the field of fame, bespoke her trumpet to bray forth his eulogies in the path of the drama. The scenic powers of my friend Mr. Bensley you all know, you all appreciate" (loud plaudits, and Bensley, overcome by gratitude, fervently squeezing Bannister's hand); "but, gentlemen," continued the relentless humorist, "it is as a defender of his country that I rise to drink his health; he has fought, he has bled for Old England!"—(tremendous applause, and Bensley bowing his acknowledgments). "He was a captain in the — regiment at Calcutta —— in ——. He was at —— in ——. He led the forlorn hope at —— in 17.—" (Here B. enumerated all the places Bensley had ever mentioned in his moments of exhilaration, to the tragedian's dismay.) "Gentlemen," concluded Charles, "my friend's age is but forty-six; he has been twenty years on the stage. I find, therefore, by accurate calculation, that he must have carried a pair of colours when only eighteen months old—an instance of precocity, power, and courage unexampled in the history of the world." Poor Bensley took this exposé so much to heart that he never afterwards appeared in the room.

VARIETY GOSSIP.

Mr. Arthur Roberts, Miss Ruby Celeste, and a chauffeur were travelling in a motor-car through Southwold to Yarmouth last Sunday, when the car came in collision with a brake. Miss Celeste received serious injuries to her head, and was taken in an unconscious state to Southwold Hospital. Since then she has only had short periods of consciousness, but the doctors think that there is hope of her recovery. She is suffering from a fracture of the right jaw and considerable bruising of the head and face.

Mr. George Adney Payne, the eminent music-hall proprietor and manager, who died on May 15, last, aged 60, as the result of a motor-car accident, left estate now valued for probate at £48,286 gross, of which £28,827 is net personalty. Letters of administration were granted yesterday to Mr. Walter Payne, barrister-at-law, by direction of Mr. Justice Bucknill, pending litigation touching the validity of the will asserted to have been made by the deceased on May 19, 1904. The case is known as Payne and another v. Payne.

Mr. Frank Dean presided at the meeting of the debenture-stockholders of the London Coliseum (Limited), held on Wednesday on the premises in St. Martin's-Lane, and among those present were Mr. Oswald Stoll, Mr. Frank Matcham, Mr. Tom Shaw, Mr. F. W. Wyndham, Mr. C. Alias, Mr. C. H. Rundell, solicitor, and Mr. H. S. Metcalfe, one of the joint liquidators of the company.

Mr. Rundell stated that a scheme had been prepared providing for the formation of a new syndicate to purchase the theatre and surrounding properties, which was intended to have an ordinary capital of £44,000, out of which £31,000 should be paid as cash consideration for the purchase. This cash would be applied in paying the various sums which had been borrowed with the sanction of the debenture-stockholders and the other sums which ranked prior to the debenture-stock; also the interest due to the debenture-stockholders and the second mortgagees, and the costs of the debenture action. The capital left after making this payment would allow ample working capital, after providing for the expenses of floating the company.

The new company would also issue first debenture stock for amounts equivalent to those now held by the stockholders, and second debenture stock equal to the principal amount now owing to the second mortgagees, and arrangements had been made for the second mortgagees to accept the same in lieu of the second mortgage. It was intended that the theatre should be reopened on more conventional lines than formerly, and that one afternoon and one evening performance only should be given each day, at popular prices, with a change of programme every week. Experience had shown that there was every prospect of success on such lines. It would be seen that the new syndicate would have the advantage of the large sum expended on the property, and it was intended to give preferential allotment to those creditors and shareholders of the present company who were desirous of subscribing. A large number of the stockholders, representing a considerable amount, had signified their assent to the scheme.

The Chairman then moved the following resolution: "That this meeting of the holders of the first debenture stock, secured by the trust-deed dated Dec. 5, 1902, and made between London Coliseum (Limited) of the one part, and Horace Edward Moss, James William McCraith, and Ivor Vachell of the other part, hereby resolves, as an extraordinary resolution, as follows: 'The contract dated July 23, 1907, between the trustees of the said trust-deed of the one part, and Oswald Stoll, on behalf of a syndicate to be formed, of the other part, is hereby approved, and the trustees are requested to take such steps in the action re London Coliseum (Limited), Moss v. London Coliseum (Limited), as may be necessary to obtain the confirmation by the Court of such contracts, and to carry the same into effect.'" The resolution, which was seconded by Mr. F. W. Wyndham and supported by Mr. Oswald Stoll, was carried unanimously.

Mr. Fred Trussell, the manager of the London Hippodrome, in company with Mrs. Trussell, will sail on the Irma for the Arctic Circle on Tuesday, viâ the fjords of Western Norway. Mr. Trussell anticipates making a valuable addition to his store of photographs of various out-of-the-way places, and nooks, and corners of the world. Last year, it may be remembered, Mr. Trussell visited Morocco, and the photographs he took then have been used for newspaper illustrations of the places where the recent trouble has taken place.

Through the death of a relative some years ago Mr. Joseph Chamberlain became the proprietor of the Alhambra Music Hall in Brussels. This property has now been sold to Mr. Thomas Barrasford, who takes possession in October. Mr. Barrasford also owns the Alhambra in Paris, and is the managing-director of the Brighton Hippodrome.

The profits of the Palace Theatre for the financial year, ending July 26, 1907, amount to £21,352, showing an increase over the preceding year of £16,535. After writing off £4,799 for extraordinary expenditure in connection with the L.C.C. alterations, &c., the directors propose to pay a dividend of 12½ per cent., and carry forward £15,500 to next year's account.

The popular Palace Girls will return to the Palace next week after their holiday in Paris. Whilst in that gay city the girls have improved and added to their stage wardrobe a large number of new and expensive dresses. Mr. Alfred Butt journeyed specially to Cowes to superintend his bioscope operators in their efforts to secure a set of animated pictures of the Royal Naval Review. Judging from those at the current exposition, the selection was extremely judicious. The films comprise the inspection of the Home Fleet by H.M. the King, a panoramic view of Cowes Roads, the miscellaneous shipping, and the Royal yacht. Mr. Courtice Pounds, with whom is his gifted sister Louie, remains in the bill; Miss Violet Lloyd is singing "Men in America" and "My little Kate"; and Mr. Walter Kelly will next week introduce several new characters into his Southern American sketch.

Mr. Matthew Brodie will start his autumn tour with The Drummer of the 76th at the Palace, Bristol, on Monday. This sketch has proved successful everywhere, having been played four weeks in Glasgow and twice each in Manchester and Liverpool within seven months. Mr. Oswald Stoll has re-engaged Mr. Brodie for all the Moss Empires next year with a new playlet. He intends engaging another Napoleon and still running The Drummer.

Mr. Willie Frear, the originator of "Frear's Frivolities," is spending a holiday in Jersey. He has just concluded his third tour round the world. Mr. Frear has appeared before a very large number of potentates in all parts of the globe, having performed in no fewer than forty-three countries during the past sixteen years. He was decorated by the Sultan of Turkey for his performance in Yildiz Kiosque, Constantinople.

Mr. Robert Arthur has arranged with Mr. C. W. Somerset and Mr. Fred Storey to present at the Fulham Theatre next week an attractive programme in the shape of a dramatic variety entertainment, including The Great Poison Case, The Merchant of Venice, The Glazier, and Rip Van Winkle. Interludes will be supplied by Miss Enid Lawrence and Mr. A. C. Max. A matinée is announced for Wednesday.

Mr. Harry Rickards has secured the Fleury Duo, who are at present appearing at the Palace Theatre in their revue, Paris Types.

We are sorry to hear that Mr. Fontain, of Les Fontain's Marionette Palace and the Deroys (Horace and Alice), Continental comedy conjurors, is lying dangerously ill at Grimsby from the effects of a paralytic stroke, and is not expected to recover. Any financial help which friends may offer will be thankfully received by Mr. J. Carter White, of the Empire, Cleethorpes.

One of the latest additions to Blackpool's numerous palaces of pleasure bears the ornithological title of "The Canary Cage." It is owned by a well-known theatre proprietor, whose establishment is in the immediate vicinity. He is now, however, venturing into the variety world, and, by way of experiment, is this week testing the drawing powers of the latest living pictures, which have been supplied by the Chas. Urban Trading Co.

The Three Sisters Urma, triple trapeze artists, after concluding their engagements with Mr. Stoll at the Empire, Sunderland, will sail for New York, per ss. Adriatic, on the 28th inst., to commence an extended tour with the Western Vaudeville Association and Orpheum Circuit, their first appearance in America being at the Majestic Theatre, Chicago, on Sept. 9. They have been booked through Marinelli's Agency.

Mr. Sam McIntosh, who for a number of years has acted as stage-manager of the Palace Theatre, Dundee, has been appointed manager there in place of Mr. E. J. Dexter, resigned. On Saturday evening Dr. Bodie, who has been appearing during the week, appeared before the large audience which filled every part of the house, and introduced Mr. McIntosh, and took the opportunity of asking Mr. McIntosh to accept a gold ring, and a gold brooch for Mrs. McIntosh, wishing him every success in his new sphere.

We regret to learn that Alf. Robini, of Rozene and Robini, is unable to resume the Stoll tour at present, having on the 31st ult., at the Empire, Middlesbrough, sprained a muscle of his right arm. He is still under medical treatment.

Miss Lizzie Hands made her first appearance at the Empress, Hartlepool, on Monday, as a single turn, and was such a success that Mr. Harry Burns booked the lady for two return dates.

Miss Ra-Leslie will be obliged to leave town for three weeks on the 12th inst., to fulfil engagements in the provinces. Then she will return and commence rehearsals for her forthcoming production. She will play principal boy at the Princess's Theatre, Glasgow, at Christmas, being specially engaged by Mr. Richard Waldon. After that, Miss Ra-Leslie goes to Australia.

Miss Leah Adell, at the Hippodrome, Liverpool, this week, has made another big success in her vocal scena, Cinderella's Dream. The music and her novelty of quick changing is quite original. Miss Adell's voice is a pure soprano, and is heard to great advantage in this scena. This talented little lady is the daughter of Henry de Frece.

Mr. Walter Howard's concert party, the Jollity Boys, have been a great success this season at Bognor.

Les Valdos, the eccentric motor 'bus men, after concluding a three months' successful engagement in London, will open on Monday at Southport, and will tour the provinces until Christmas, when they will appear in pantomime, with Mr. John Hart, this being their fifth consecutive year with him.

The New Theatre and Hippodrome, Barry Dock, was opened on Monday with a matinée performance. A good variety programme was presented. On Friday Mr. Carlton held an "At Home" at the theatre, and a representative gathering assembled, and pronounced the place a credit to the enterprise of Messrs. Tours.

Mr. Harry Leslie, the popular lessee of the entertainments on the Pier at St. Anne's-on-Sea, had his benefit on the 9th inst. A capital programme was provided by the Cadets, assisted by a host of other artists, and was well received by the audience.

Barney Armstrong, after a most successful run in town, commences a short provincial tour on Monday, opening at the Empire, Wolverhampton, returning in November to open at three halls. He has been busy this week, working six turns nightly.

Mr. Reginald Leyland's Vaudeville Concert Party, nightly wins enthusiastic applause at the Round Gardens, Walton-on-the-Naze. Mr. H. A. Wightman, the popular piermaster at Walton, recently booked them for the Pier Pavilion there, and, owing to their success, made arrangements for their appearance at the Round Gardens also. The party consists of Miss Clarisse Heney, Miss Cora Moore, Master Reginald Leyland, Mr. Le Neve Jekyll, and Mr. Reginald Leyland.

Miss Bessie Butt was unfortunate enough to contract a rather sharp attack of influenza, which prevented her from fulfilling her engagement at the Empire, Nottingham, this week. She hopes to be well enough to open at the Tivoli on Monday. By the way, how is it that this clever little lady is still free for pantomime? Her Birmingham triumphs of last season should have been sufficient to recommend her to any manager's notice.

On Wednesday last at the Royal Hippodrome, Liverpool, an interesting presentation was made to Mr. Walter Hassan, the popular and courteous local manager, by the staff and a few friends. It took the form of a handsome marble clock, two side ornaments, and a cheque. Mrs. Hassan was presented with a beautiful dressing-case, and Miss Hilda Hassan with a case containing a silver knife, fork, and spoon.

On Monday evening, at the close of the second performance at the Empire Theatre, Glasgow, Mr. George Manners, manager of that house, presented to Mr. George Anthony—who has been second in command there for some years, and who is resigning his position with the Moss' Empires, Ltd., to undertake the management of the Grand Theatre, in Glasgow—a very handsome gold watch, with monogram outside, and the following inscription within the case:—"To George Anthony, Esq., from the entire Staff of the Empire Theatre, Glasgow, as a token of goodwill and esteem." (August 5, 1907.) In addition, a gold chain, with brooch of sapphire and pearls, was asked to be accepted by Mrs. Anthony, who, as Miss Beatie Edmunds, is well-known in the profession. As Mr. Manners explained, a purse of gold will further be presented, all the subscriptions promised not having yet been received. In a telling speech, Mr. Manners, on behalf of staff and numerous friends, wished Mr. Anthony God-speed in his new undertaking.

Mr. Oswald Stoll has issued a circular letter advocating the acceptance of a scheme for the formation of a syndicate to take over the London Coliseum, with an ordinary capital of £44,000, and first debenture stock for amounts equivalent to those now held by the stockholders, and second debenture stock equal to the principal amount now owing to the second mortgagees. It is proposed to open the theatre as early as possible on popular lines, and that there shall be one afternoon and one evening performance only. The proposed directorate includes Mr. George Dance, Alderman Carey, of the Hackney, Shepherd's Bush, and other Empires, and Mr. Stoll as managing-director.

Mr. Herbert C. Sargent, the author of Belinda and the Burglar, That Lovely Liar, and The Brute Simmons, has scored a big success at the London Pavilion with a bright and original sketch, Pyjamas, admirably played by Mr. Charles Collette and Miss Joan Derry.

That genuinely comic sketch, Man the Brute, has occupied a prominent place in the comprehensive Empire programme throughout this week, and has proved as magnetic as ever. Every taste is catered for in the present programme. The motorist can watch the actual building of a car on the Biograph, and the naval expert can enjoy the fine picture of the Dreadnought. For the cyclist there are the brilliant Barber-Ritchie Trio, and for the musician the Adelmann Trio make music out of firewood, and the Maisanos evoke it from tables and chairs.

The performances at St. George's Hall drew crowded houses on Bank Holiday, the attractive programme being heartily appreciated. Amongst the items were the sketch entitled Spectres of the Sanctum; Mr. Barclay Gammon and a piano; Joad Heteb, the Egyptian necromancer and wizard of the Sphinx; Mr. Karl Germain's conjuring, and the Biograph.

The usual monthly meeting of the Committee of the Music Hall Sick Fund will be held at the York Hotel, on Wednesday, at 2 p.m.

The Balkan Exhibition at Earl's Court attracted thousands on Bank Holiday. The music of H.M. Grenadier Guards and two other leading military combinations gave great delight. "Old Japan," in the Empress Hall, was a very popular show. The theatre in the Balkan Village, the Pygmies, the Wheel of Avernus, and Harry Loftus's band of pierrots, all had crowded audiences; and Pharos the Egyptian, the helter-skelter, the giant chute, the flying machine, and the Balkan stalactite caverns, were visited and enjoyed by hundreds.

Mr. R. G. Knowles gave his first humorous Sunday lecture in England at the Palace Pier Theatre, Brighton, last Sunday evening, and for an hour and a half kept his crowded audience delighted and amused while he gave details of his recent visit to South Africa. Instead of donning his battered hat, frock coat, and white duck trousers, he appeared in conventional evening dress, but his quaint, dry humour, native wit, spasmodic movements of the arms, and his many other eccentricities were happily not put aside. The lecture was illustrated by beautiful bioscope coloured views, and unique motion pictures replete with charming effects. His graphic descriptions of the long series of pictures thrown upon the screen, his clear enunciation and thoroughly artistic diction, and his funny stories, abounding with wholesome humour, were in the highest degree entertaining.

But while the house, during the greater part of the lecture, rippled with laughter, there were occasions when Mr. Knowles touched chords of the tenderest emotion, and compelled the silent and deeply sympathetic attention of his audience. After a preliminary picture of Mr. Knowles in his dressing-room, preparing, in response to the call-boy, for his lecture, the raconteur opened with descriptions of scenes in Ireland, including the visit of their Majesties the King and Queen to the Emerald Isle. These were followed with snapshots of English life in London, and the departure from Southampton. The eccentricities of his fellow passengers were very happily described; the beauties of Madeira were portrayed; and on the continuation of the sea voyage, the sports on board, and the concert, presided over by the embarrassed chairman, were submitted with telling effects.

It was in this scene that Mr. Knowles showed himself a master of deep, tender pathos by his recital of a poem descriptive of the funeral of a little negro child. The arrival at Cape Town, at Kimberley, and at the Matoppas, with Cecil Rhodes's tomb, were ably depicted. Then came the Zimbabwe Ruins, the only evidence of an ancient civilisation in South Africa, and a splendid series of pictures descriptive of the Victoria Falls—double the width and almost three times the height of Niagara—and the Zambezi River, which feeds the falls. Beira, with its peculiar street-car system; Johannesburg, the "Golden City"; and the "dance of the darkies," in which hundreds were engaged, brought the lecture to a close. Mr. Knowles achieved a triumphant success, and was recalled again and again on his retirement from the platform. The lecture was given under the direction of Mr. H. Bernhardt.

The Florodora Girls bottom the bill at the Royal Albert, Canning Town, and score a great success, causing boundless amusement in their novel musical comedy, entitled Two's Company, Three's None.

Mr. John Lawson reproduced The Unwritten Law on Monday, at Collins's, Islington. The sketch has an excellent cast, which includes Arthur Royston, Fred W. Paull, Cecil Du Gue, and Miss Buena Bent. Its drawing powers have not diminished, as is proved by full houses. Miss Bent now introduces a special dance in the first act. This episode will be seen at the new Hippodrome, Poplar, next week.

Mr. Henry Carlton, the popular young comedian, in his comedy successes, One Night Only, The Window-Cleaner, &c., has been booked by Mr. Tom Shaw with Mr. Oswald Stoll for dates running well into 1909.

Admiral Sir John Fisher occupied a box at the Alhambra on Thursday evening, and witnessed the magnificent series of Urban pictures of last Saturday's naval review. At the conclusion he remarked to Mr. Alfred Moul, the chairman, and Mr. George Scott, the general-manager, that they were the finest sea pictures he had ever seen.

In the Court of Bankruptcy on Tuesday the case of Herbert Clark, music hall artist and music publisher, late of Cranbourne-alley, and since of Charing Cross-road, came before the Court upon an appointment for public examination. The unsecured liabilities were returned at £880, and there appeared to be no available assets. The debtor attributed his failure to losses incurred through the music hall strike, which caused his business as a publisher to fall off, and to his inability to obtain professional engagements in America, to which country he subsequently went. It was also due to losses by betting (£300), and to heavy expenses in connection with the illness of his wife. The examination was closed.

PARIS VARIETY GOSSIP.

The Revue at the Folies Marigny closed last Wednesday night, and the programme is now composed entirely of big variety turns. Miss Saharet is here for her second month, a fact which says much for the lady's success. Mr. Horace Goldin is a new-comer to the Marigny programme, and his act is little short of marvellous. His creation of "My Lady's Boudoir" from what is apparently "thin air" is certainly a very fine illusion.

Reed Pinaud and his company are back again with a new pantomime, which deals with life in the London slums. The first scene represents a street on Saturday night and the second a doss-house. Mr. Fred Evans, in the character of a Fagin-like old clothes man, and Mr. Albert, whose funny antics do much for the success of the show, distinguish themselves in this capital company. Another member of Mr. Pinaud's company is Mr. Joe Clark, who was seen as one of the Baron's flunkies in the Paris production of Cinderella at the Porte St. Martin last year.

Other excellent shows on the Marigny bill are the Willy Brothers, the Duo Paulus, the Maxinis, and Zertho with his trained dogs.

Miss Lawler has scored another success in the new Revue at the Moulin Rouge. She makes two very good appearances, one as a Lifeguard and the second as a young Englishman in Paris, in which she and Mlle. Mistangette do a very funny and eccentric dance.

M. Flers has registered yet one more big success with his revue, Salu . . . e! at La Cigale. He is, without doubt, the leading revue-writer of the day. His Revue du Centenaire, which was the success of last season, will be revived for the opening of the Variétés in September.

Gaby Deslys has left the cast of the Revue Tu Veux Rire at the Ambassadeurs.—Mayol made his reappearance on Aug. 1.—On the new bill at the Alcazar are Kelley and Ashby, Auto and Mobile, Dranem, and Polin.

The Châtelet opened on the 9th with a revival of Les Pilules du Diable. The new production, Le Boite à Malices, will not be produced until later on in the season.

Mr. Isidore Witmark, of the house of Witmark and Sons, who was in Paris last week, had just arrived from Germany and Austria, where he had been visiting the long chain of Continental houses which are connected with the mother house in New York. "Our last, but which will in a short time be by no means the least of our many branches," he said, "is here in Paris."

Mr. Charles Best is working the Printania with his new show, Macbunker the Mountebank.

Mrs. John Lawson is playing this week at Crouch End, and the Palace, Camberwell. At the former house Sally in Our Alley is the attraction, and crowded houses have been drawn. The setting of this sketch remains on the same liberal scale. Next week Mrs. Lawson will be seen at the Empress and South London in The Devil's Sunday.

Mr. Sidney Bacon's clever and amusing sketch, The Duchess of Tooting, will return to London on Monday, opening at the Hackney Empire.

The Crown Prince of Servia paid two visits to the Balkan Exhibition at Earl's Court on Wednesday. The first visit was in the morning. At half-past eight in the evening he returned with his aide-de-camp and Mr. Gruitch, the Servian Chargé d'Affaires. The chute gave the Prince intense amusement, and he went down it twice.

Mr. Tom Fancourt and Miss Jennie Rubie are scoring a great success this week at the Queen's, Poplar, with their high-class comedy act, Nipper the Messenger Boy.

The overhauling and redecorating of the Hippodrome is about to absorb £1,500 worth of gold leaf, 24,640lb. of white lead, 18,000 yards of velvet, 3,000 square yards of carpeting. The men who are to renovate the ceiling will work on a staging slung from the roof, and as there will be no noise connected with the painting operations, it will be possible to carry these on during the performances. Travelling cradles will facilitate the work round the circles, and there will be employed about five hundred men. The whole of the interior is dusted over once a week, but this is the first time the management have had to redecorate the place. The gold paint and the draperies have lasted wonderfully well, considering the deleterious effects of smoke and fog.

The Miltons, skaters, have been engaged by Mr. Oswald Stoll for the run of The Zuyder Zee.

"First catch your funny story," Mr. R. G. Knowles writes in this week's Pearson's Weekly, "and the next chunk of advice I have to throw at the would-be story-teller is to develop his powers of observation and exercise them on the daily life of our wonderful world. Mind you, the picture will seldom be ready for exhibition. You will have to work it up, perhaps repaint it altogether. In other words, you will seldom hear a story or witness an incident that you can tell or describe right away. For one thing, success as a story-teller depends quite as much on the way you tell a story as on the story itself. You may overhear or be told a good story, but before you can use it you must adapt it to your own personality."

Miss Daisy Dormer was compelled to give up work last week by her doctor's orders, but hopes to resume business on Monday.

A calculator has been analysing the bills of thirty-six variety halls controlled by Moss's Empires, Limited, for the present week. They contain thirty-seven sketches, about the same number of bioscope turns, and 136 "specialities." The entertainments last altogether sixty-three hours (two houses a night), and 324 items are staged. Of these only 115 are "comedians, comediennes, or ballad vocalists," and they fill merely a fifth or so of the total time occupied.

Cliff Ryland deputised this week at Croydon for Miss Alice Lloyd, who was taken suddenly ill, and also worked the Duchess, Balham, the same night.

An appeal is being made on behalf of an old performer, Mrs. Maud Rankin, of 12, Albert-street-place, Albert-street, Belfast. Her arm was broken in a street accident two months ago, and being unable to work, she is now destitute. She was better known for many years as "Miss Maud Burton," a very popular vocalist in the provincial music-halls, and was the wife of the late Tom Rankin, of Finlay and Rankin, negro comedians. She came to Belfast five years ago, with a sick husband to nurse, and he became totally blind. All their hard-earned savings went long before her husband's death, which occurred last January. She had been working in a warehouse right up to the time of the accident. Any inquiries or offers of assistance may be made through Mr. and Mrs. Patrick (late of the Buffalo Music Hall), at the Central News Agency, Skipper-street, Belfast.

SONGS, WRITERS, AND SINGERS.

The latest addition to the "sixpenny pops" issued by Messrs. Francis, Day, and Hunter is Frank Leo's popular song "You—you—you," sung by Wilkie Bard with such extraordinary success just now at foremost London halls.

Amongst Francis and Day's song novelties, recently published, are "All alone in old Cologne," by Murray, Leighton, and Hilbury, sung by Miss Alexandra Dagmar, and also by Miss Betty Green, at the London Hippodrome; "Molly Molyneux," by Edward Montagu, sung by Miss Maudie Darrell, at the Vaudeville Theatre; "If the man in the moon were a coon," written and composed by Fred Fischer, and sung by G. H. Elliott at the Oxford; "My Irish Rosie," by the writers of "Bedelia" and "My Irish Molly," of which a revised English version is now ready; "I'll tell Tilly on the Telephone," sung by Miss Dora Lyric, for which a few conditional permissions will be granted; "Cheer up, Mary," the great march song of the year, sung by Miss Winifred Hare; "When you know you're not forgotten," sung by Dave Carter, the celebrated Irish tenor; "There's a black man coming down the chimney," Murphy and Lipton's latest "Bogie Man" song; and "Soon I'm leaving Dublin Town," Lawrence, Mellor, and Gifford's Great Seaside Hit.

Mark Sheridan, ever on the alert for a real pantomime stormer, has secured, and arranged to specially feature, George Lashwood's great success, "Oh! the merry widow." The writers of this winner, Mills and Scott, have in hand for the genial Mark a big comic number on the subject of "Limericks." The Star Company are now booking panto rights for "Oh! the merry widow."

Miss Dora Lyric, who has been so successful with Mills and Scott's compositions, has just secured the prior rights of a splendid march-chorus song by these writers entitled "When the lilac blooms in springtime." This promises to be another "All that glitters," and is issued by the Star Music Company.

Whit Cunliffe has at last discovered the successor to "Hello, hello, hello," and, incidentally, it is by the composer of that still raging success, who, in conjunction with Mr. A. J. Mills, has fitted Whit like a glove. The simple title of the new torture is "Oh!!! the steamer!" but there is a bunch of accent on the "OH!" The Star Company will issue this number immediately.

Charmingly rendered by that delightful artist, Miss Dora Lyric, at the Alhambra, Brighton, Bennett Scott and A. J. Mills' beautiful song of sentiment, "Somebody cares for you," literally took the house by storm, and it is now the most popular chorus in Brighton with the "man in the street." This charming song is practically ubiquitous at the seaside just now, being featured by every pierrot troupe of note throughout the country, and its publishers, the Monte Carlo Publishing Co., anticipate record sales for this song in the near future.

Although the Monte Carlo Publishing Co.'s catalogue of "Sixpenny Successes" now aggregates some eighty odd numbers, it is a noteworthy fact that No. 1 on their list, viz.: "His country, King, and girl," has recently "caught on" phenomenally in Australasia, so much so that by the last mail therefrom the Berners-street firm received a large order for copies of that tuneful and taking semi-patriotic song.

From Whitley Bay, via Mr. Medley Barrett, comes the intelligence that no less than six of the Monte Carlo Publishing Co.'s songs, viz., "Queen of old Samara," "Rosie is waiting," "Somebody cares for you," "Pyramid girl," "Come and make a fuss o' me," and "Skyland," have all caught on with no uncertain "catch." Actions speak louder than words; and the fact that Mr. Medley Barrett's information was accompanied by a very substantial order for copies of all the songs enumerated speaks volumes.

Messrs. John P. Harrington and Jas. W. Tate, after a most enjoyable stay in Brighton for the Goodwood week, where they were recipients of the hospitality of Miss Marie Lloyd, who entertained them right royally, personally conducting them in her splendid Daimler car to all the beauty-spots of special interest in that charming locality, have returned to town and the Monte Carlo Publishing Co., veritably "fit as fiddles" and eager for the fray—that is to say, the mimic warfare in which "ink-slinging" plays so prominent a part.

Messrs. John P. Harrington and Jas. W. Tate, who are fixing Miss Marie Loftus with her entire new répertoire for her impending South African engagement, have this week supplied this charming artist with four new character studies, entitled "The old maid," "The garter," "Why did the gentleman fish?" and "A spotless reputation." Miss Loftus will make a speciality, the week after next, in Dublin, of a new and delightful country girl's song, racy of the soil, entitled "Devonshire cream," by the same author and composer.

Miss Marie Lloyd, who achieved a phenomenal success at the Alhambra, Brighton, during Goodwood week, with Messrs. John P. Harrington and Jas. W. Tate's perennially fresh song, "The customs of the country" which she has this week duplicated at Southampton, will shortly produce a specially-written new character-song from the same prolific pens, entitled "It's your own look out"

The success of Mellor Lawrance and Gifford's new creation, "Soon I'm leaving Dublin town," at Sheerness-on-Sea, Dunoon, Ayr, and Prestwell, has caused many enterprising al fresco proprietors and managers to introduce the same number with considerable success. The song has a lilting chorus, and is already being talked about as the greatest song of the year in the Great Metropolis, and pantomime producers are wisely securing the song with the same promptitude as they seized the "Wooden Hut" song of the same firm.

Barney Armstrong is the happy possessor of two new songs by Glover Kind, "Something's gone wrong with my band parts," and "Why do they call me an extra turn?" Many inquiries have already been made for the former song for pantomimes, but Mr. Armstrong will not dispose of either for big towns, where he is likely to appear in the beginning of 1908. He has fully registered both numbers.

Visitors to the Crystal Palace whose ideas of amusement run in the direction of variety turns will be able to spend an agreeable hour in Mr. J. Bannister Howard's café chantant, Mr. J. E. Sharpe being the manager. Two shows are given daily, and here will be found the Four Watsons, the well-known entertainers, in their delightful vocal and instrumental speciality act, in which the mandoline, guitar, violin, concertina, harp, and banjo are brought into excellent use. Then there are Miss Joan Deering, the charming and talented vocalist, who accompanies herself on the violin; Mr. Harry Hillier, the refined vocalist, instrumentalist, and scientific paper-manipulator; Miss Blanche Marion, the gifted and dainty comedienne and dancer; and Mr. Walter Stanton, the well-known vocal comedian and mimic, whose imitations of farmyard denizens are so justly celebrated.

LONDON VARIETY THEATRES.

THE PALACE.

Rich reward is reaped at the Palace, where Mr. Alfred Butt's attractive bill is nightly drawing overwhelming audiences. The programme has an abundance of novelties, chief interest being centred in the appearance of Mr. Courtice Pounds in a "musical happening," by Keble Howard, with music composed and arranged by Herman Finck and Harold Samuel, entitled—

"CHARLES, HIS FRIEND."

Mrs. Gilliland (Lulu).....MISS LOUIE POUNDS
Barbara ..... MISS PEARL KEATS
Peter Ward ..... MR. J. COOKE BERESFORD
Charles ..... MR. COURTICE POUNDS

As a medium for the display of the versatility of the popular vocalist-comedian the operetta is alone welcome, but there are also contained in the sketch a number of smart lines that add considerably to its value, while the music with which the piece is embellished is light and graceful. A rich young widow contemplates a second marriage, but yearns for a husband with the artistic temperament, disdaining the wooing of a devoted young stockbroker, named Peter Ward. Lulu advertises accordingly, with the result that her brother, Charles, returning home from a long stay abroad finds his sister's house besieged by a crowd of singers, musicians, and other claimants for her hand. Charles learns from Peter the reason of the clamour, and determines to save his sister from the band of fortune hunters by impersonating a number of the suitors. His first essay is that of "Signor Sapolio," an Italian "primo tenore," who pleads his cause in impassioned melody. Lulu is inclined to accept him, until he demands to know the amount of her income, when the young lady grows righteously indignant and orders him out. The next visitor is a burly country bumpkin, who brings his son as a candidate, and the lad failing to sing, his father obliges with a "stave." The lady, however, thinks she would prefer a Londoner, and the yokel gives way to a French artist, who becomes so ferocious in his wooing that he has to be removed by the police. The young lady has by this time had enough of the "artistic temperament," and tells her maid to order the crowd away; but one other applicatn, a bearded Colonial, is permitted to enter, and he takes his seat at the piano and sings "I'll sing thee songs of Araby" with such artistic effect that Lulu is enraptured, until she penetrates his disguise and discovers that he is her brother. Lulu is at first indignant, but when she learns that it was her lover, Peter, who had impersonated the younger yokel, she realises that he too is an artist and accepts his suit.

The varied assortment of characters were impersonated by Mr. Pounds with irresistible humour, his travesty of a tenor being remarkably droll. His tuneful voice was best employed in "I'll sing thee songs of Araby," his tasteful rendering of Clay's charming ballad being loudly applauded. Miss Louie Pounds was a fascinating Lulu, investing her difficult character with many shades of expression; Mr. J. Cooke Beresford rendered invaluable assistance in the part of the young stockbroker, to whose share much of the laughter fell; and Miss Pearl Keats, as a vivacious maid, aided in the success which was attained.

A welcome début in vaudeville is made by Miss Violet Lloyd, who has a lilting song in "Man from America," and displays her talents as a comedienne in "My little Kate," a whimsical composition rendered with many droll affectations. Miss Denise Orme, another theatrical favourite, also graces the Palace stage, and with her songs, to which she supplies her own accompaniment, gains the warmest applause. In Braga's popular Serenata, which she plays on the violin, with her own vocal accompaniment, she is very effective, the violin rivalling the voice in purity of intonation. The Sharp Brothers, coon impersonators, are deservedly successful in some marvellously clever step-dancing; and Cyril Clensy and Frances Knapstowne give impersonations of well-known stage favourites. Mlle. De Dio repeats her wonderful serpentine dancing; Les Fleurys continue to present their Paris types to perfection; Mr. Walter Kelly again gives his engrossing and amusing study of Virginian life; and the programme, which is contributed to by Mr. Tatten Hall, comedian; Miss Jennie Johns, comedienne; and El Trio Tampico, Mexican Troubadours, is completed by the bioscope, in which pictures of the Royal Naval Review, the Motor Grand Prix at Dieppe, and the Goodwood Cup are displayed, the realistic and sensational pictures being enthusiastically applauded.

LONDON PAVILION.

A pleasant and amusing "roadside episode" is that by Mr. H. C. Sargent, entitled—

"PYJAMAS."

Digby York ..... MR. CHARLES COLLETTE
Ethel Fane ..... MISS JOAN DERRY

Pretty Miss Ethel Fane runs away from her home disguised in her brother's knickerbocker suit. The reason of her going is that she has been "condemned" by designing parents to marry someone she has never seen. She finds her way to a roadside hotel, where a gentleman takes compassion on her, and, as her clothes are wet, he lends her a pair of pyjamas while the cycling suit is being dried before the fire. But Ethel does not appear willing to appear in such a scanty habiliment in the presence of a gentleman whose sex she has usurped for the time being. She borrows his overcoat, but he demands it, as he is going out into the rain himself. She endeavours to secrete herself under the table, and, of course, it is not long before he discovers that she is not a young man but a young woman. Furthermore, he finds that he has fallen in love with her, and she with him. And when she is told that he is the very man whom her parents wish her to marry, the very man she is supposed to be running away from, she, of course, promises to go back home and to carry out the desire of her family. Mr. Charles Collette, as the man, acts in a quiet and perfectly natural manner, never for one instant carrying himself away into the heights of boisterous farce to which such a part as this lends itself. One can always rely on Mr. Collette for good sterling comedy, and this is what we get in his characterisation of Digby York. Miss Joan Derry cuts a pretty figure as the sham young gentleman, and her work shows a keen appreciation of the humours of the part.

Mr. Albert Le Fre affords abundant proof of diversified abilities in his novel mélange and song, entitled "That's what you see on the halls," for he can juggle, do acrobatics, illusions, &c., with remarkable aptitude for each science or art. Mr. and Mrs. Harold Finden make merry with their successful farce, Settled Out of Court, and Mr. Kit Keen submits a most attractive comedy and "bone soloist" turn. Mr. Tom Costello wins still further laurels with his latest chorus song, "For old lang syne"; and Tom and Marie Motrama create considerable amusement in their musical and comedy act. Mr. Louis A. Simon and Miss Grace Gardner and company appear in a laughable farce, The New Coachman, by Miss Gardner. The scene is the college room in a fashionable New York hotel. The apartment in question is being occupied by one, Jack Devoe, who has had a heavy night, and is now sleeping off the effects of strong liquor. To his room there come, in mistake, a married couple, the husband leaving his wife in charge. Jack, who has been expecting a visit from a young lady and her mother, soon commences a flirtation with the unknown visitor, and she, expecting the arrival of a new coachman, mistakes him for the jehu, he having previously hastily discarded his wine-soaked evening dress for an old suit. What follows is extremely entertaining, and eventually the husband returns to find out that they have taken the wrong rooms. Mr. Louis Simon causes great hilarity by his antics in the rôle of Jack Devoe, and really shows much agility in jumping up and down a ladder. Miss Grace Gardner, as the wife, and Mr. Charles H. Stevens, as the husband, and Miss Lena Denton, as a maid, all enter heartily into the spirit of the little piece. Mr. Hal Forde has a capital number in "That's the girlie for you," in which he is assisted by a couple of charming young ladies, one appearing as a Gibson Girl and the other as a Sandow Girl. Mr. Forde's other song, "Get another little girl instead," also finds much favour. The three Röhrs present their daring cycle act, in which they travel at an enormous speed around a circular framework. Miss Dolly Golden is seen and admired in her smart speciality dances, and Mlle. La Sallandri and Mons. Albertini demonstrate their remarkable talents in the direction of "dumb-show," acting in a pantomimic sketch, The Bohemian Girl, the dances directed by Mlle. Sandrini, première danseuse at the Grand Opéra, Paris. Miss Emilie Hayes delights everybody with her vocal efforts; and Nipper Lupino-Lane, the juvenile comedian, as usual, comes in for his share of applause. Mr. Edwin Boyde sings a most amusing parody on "In the shade of the old apple-tree," which is hugely enjoyed; and Miss May Henderson, the dusky comedy queen, is as pleasing as of yore. Mr. Harry Ford has many mirth-provoking lines in his song, "I wonder," and the ditty concerning the posting of a letter. Kartelli astonishes the audience by his sensational balancing act on the high wire; the Vernon troupe are expert xylophonists; and Dome gives us a mixture of fun and clay modelling.

NEW CROSS EMPIRE.

The holiday programme here is of the usual excellence and length. It is headed by Mr. Fred Ginnett's always popular Dick Turpin. The story is told clearly and graphically, and is followed with unflagging interest. The familiar characters are well interpreted by Mr. Fred Ginnett as Dick Turpin; Mr. George Jennings as Tom King; Mr. C. Barello as Simon Sharpscent; Mr. Alfred Burgess as Sammy; Mr. Arthur Medwin as Jerry; Mr. J. F. Ginnett as the Knight of Malta; Mr. Gubby as Luke; Mr. Bartlett as Tim; Mr. Bailey, Mr. Edwards, Mrs. Ginnett, and Mrs. Jennings. The beautiful and wonderfully-trained Black Bess is the great feature of the performance, and there were many wet eyes among the audience when the faithful companion of Dick's adventures died. The Lukushimas, Japanese entertainers, including Otara San, gave proofs of their wonderful skill, and were greeted with warm applause. Miss Beatrice Willey is a delightful artist, and an accomplished vocalist. Young, attractive, and most daintily attired, she made a very pleasing impression with her rendering of a medley on old flower songs, including "I know a bank," "The last rose of summer," "Sweet violets," and the "Dear little Shamrock." The Three Sisters Sprightly did well in their "Dutch Trio" and "Golfing." The Carina Sisters proved themselves skilful musicians by their clever performances on piano, violin, and other instruments; Messrs. O'Malley and Brown caused much merriment with their comedy sketch, entitled You're Still a Friend of Mine; Mr. Fred Kelton, a clever character comedian, sang his two songs, entitled "I did not get there in time," and "I'm not supposed to know what I'm about" in a style to win much laughter from the audience; Mr. E. J. Sheldon, the whistler-vocalist, made an excellent impression by his smart little turn; the Violas gave their interesting thought-reading entertainment, and the lady most cleverly answered the difficult questions put to her, much to the amusement and wonderment of those present; the Urban Bioscope exhibited some new and interesting pictures, those of the Channel Fleet at Cowes being particularly good. This was the closing item of a capital bill, which included some excellently-rendered music by the Empire Orchestra, so ably conducted by Mr. Louis la Rondelle. Mr. Ernest Bridgen looks well after the comfort of visitors in front of the house, and has won hosts of friends during his term of management here.

PUTNEY HIPPODROME.

Business has been quite up to the mark, the splendid programme arranged for the holiday week having drawn excellent houses. Prominent amongst this week's visitors are Mr. Harry Rickards, who, I presume, is on the lookout for talent for his numerous establishments at the Antipodes. After a spirited march by way of an introductory overture, the curtain rings up, and Minnie Mace appears in an Americanised song of a certain Mr. Dickens, a dark-complexioned individual, supposed to have a strong partiality for chickens. Miss Mace has plenty of vivacity, and finishes up her turn with a grotesque dance. Percy Farrimond is described as the original Lancashire singing collier, and he wears the typical suit, blue shirt, etc., and swings a Davy lamp in his hand. Without any hesitation he tackles the soldiers song from Faust, and brings down the house by his exceptional range of voice and clear enunciation. "By the Banks of Loch Lomond," his second selection, is exceedingly well rendered, and as liberally applauded. Mr. Victor Courteney, at the piano, shows his skill by a clever rendering of one of Tito Mattei's masterpieces, after which he gives sundry imitations, intersecting his playing with interesting and amusing dialogue, and finishes by an accompanied recitation, in which he refers to numerous plays admirably strung together. Messrs. Claff and Maguire next present a musical extravaganza, entitled The Demon and the Fairy, which serves to introduce pleasing songs and duets, and incidentally a pretty setting and effective dresses. The programme contains only one instrumental turn, but it is one of the very best, that of Elton and Edwin, banjoists. A well played march is followed by an exceedingly clever rendition of a rhapsodie by Miss Elton, after which the charming "Poet and Peasant" overture is played as a duet. The marvellous fingering of these two experts is greeted with much applause. The "gem turn," however, is that of the Harmony Four, whose capabilities are so well known as not to require particularising. Roars of laughter follow the quickly-recurring comicalities, and time after time the mirthful quartette had to bow their acknowledgments before they were allowed to depart. Mr. Tom Collins, the "swell comedian," neatly dressed in a purple suit and very shiny "tile," sings a couple of songs in his best style; and Miss Venie Clements, in a charming dress of blue, tells of certain arguments which were brought to a close, afterwards bringing her turn to an end by recounting sundry stories of children, in which her clever powers of imitation are fully displayed. Mr. H. Wallace Aston, Miss Lilian Earle, and Mr. Nevill Graham present Mr. Louis N. Parker's sketch, The Man in the Street very cleverly, Mr. Nevill Graham's portrayal of the street musician being exceptionally good. The sketch is nicely mounted. The Imperial Bioscope pictures, illustrating the faithfulness of the blind man's canine friend, are very pleasing, and conclude an exceptionally good and varied programme.

CHAT WITH FLORRY COOPER.

Miss Florry Cooper, who is now pretty well known to the frequenters of music halls by reason of her sweet singing of refined songs, can scarcely yet boast of a five years' connection with the stage. It was less than that period ago that, at a benefit given in honour of her mother, she sang her first song in public. Rather, it should be said that it was the refrain to Miss Fanny Robina's well-known ditty "Baby Boy," and Miss Cooper sang that refrain from a position of considerable eminence in the gallery. Some little time later she made her début on the stage at the Paddington Palace, Liverpool, when her enchanting rendering of "Dear little Shamrock" brought a crowded audience to her feet. About this period she also had a song concerning a bootblack, during the performance of which she appeared in the familiar red coat of the "Shine, sir?" boys. She recollects that when she got that coat Mr. Witty Watty Walton decided that it was far too clean for the character, so, in order to give a touch of realism to the sartorial portion of her make-up, he wiped the floor with the too beautiful and too respectable red coat.

Miss Cooper considers that she first began to feel thoroughly on her feet with her "production" of a song by Mr. Walter Hastings, entitled "The forger's child," which tells a somewhat pathetic story. It is this: A trusted employee has forged his master's name on a cheque, and a detective has been called to arrest him. The forger's child, however, pleads with the employer not to charge her father, and she herself will repay him when she grows up. Years after the employer becomes bankrupt, and is agreeably surprised when, in the midst of his troubles, a young lady walks into his presence and hands him a cheque for a handsome amount. This song was specially written for the gifted young artist by Mr. Hastings. Another number with which Miss Cooper won popularity was "Asleep in the deep," a baritone song.

At present Miss Cooper, who is the fortunate possessor of a most pleasing personality, is to be seen in the halls attired in rose-pink knickerbocker costume, which becomes her exceedingly well. The young lady imparts some sound advice in a few verses which tell us to "Smile, smile, smile," no matter what trouble there may be, or how sad one may really feel at heart. The song proves quite to the liking of the listeners in the auditorium. We next get a sympathetic rendering of "The stars are angel faces," written by Mr. Harrington and composed by the late George Le Brun. In this Miss Cooper tells the story of a little girl who has lost her mother, and who has been led to believe that, as the song says, "the stars are angel faces." So, naturally, the child worships the tiny twinkling constellations in the heavens, and wishes her father to point out the star which is her mother's face. Miss Cooper most feelingly renders the lines both of this and her previous number, her enunciation being particularly clear and distinct.

The subject of this sketch will shortly be heard in a new song, "In the camp fire's glow," to which the music has been composed by herself and the words contributed by Mr. J. Brownson.

HAMMERSMITH PALACE.

Mr. John C. Coe, and his able manager, Mr. Lewis Vincent, are giving their patrons an excellent holiday programme this week, and crowded houses are the result. Jack and Evelyn, in their dialogue, "Come into the Office," are proving exceedingly popular, Jack being a really clever comedian. Miss Carlotta Levey, a great favourite in Hammersmith, gains much applause with her songs, "Man and wife should always pull together" and "He was one of the boys." Haley's Juveniles, consisting of about fifteen girls and one boy, gave a particularly pretty performance embracing several songs and some very clever dancing, barefoot and otherwise. The effect of their last dance, with the aid of strips of various-coloured muslin, was most pleasing. Another good turn is the Vivianas, with The Toy Shop. Mr. Hal Forde gives two songs on the subject of "Girls," each selection having a good chorus, and going well.

Miss Rosie Archer is a capable mimic, her imitation of Marie Lloyd being very good. Miss Rosie Revell is a clever child, and sings her Dutch and coon songs well. Happy Tom Parker is a comedian of much ability, the effects gained in his songs, "She's losing them one by one" and "Stop, stop as you are," being broadly comical. For those who want boisterous fun, the turns of the Four Burnells, in the sketch, On the Links, and Johnny Alexander and company, in Our Lodger, are just the thing. Ross and Grayson also contribute largely to the amusement of the evening by their piano playing extraordinary. Mr. Harry Rogers and company give a dramatic episode, entitled Told in a Flat. Miss Julia Feaviour, comedienne, and Mr. Harry Cotton, comedian, are both good. The Edisonograph completes the programme with an excellent series of films.

"A TRAGEDY OF ERRORS."

A Comedy Sketch, in Three Scenes, by Leonard Durrell and Fred Karno, Produced at the Holborn Empire, on Monday, Aug. 5.

Henry Wrighton .....MR. ROBT. WHYTE, JUN.
Herbert Fellowes .....MR. BENSLEY EVANS
Butler .....MR. JAMES FLETCH
Waiter .....MR. HARRY LE FRE
Lucy Gray .....MISS GLADYS GRENVILLE

A Tragedy of Errors is quite an hilarious trifle. There is more of comedy than of tragedy in it, as of all Mr. Fred Karno's productions. Henry Wrighton and Lucy Gray are betrothed, but in consequence of his losses in the city and elsewhere Wrighton decides to commit suicide. He takes up a revolver, but cannot quite make up his mind as to the position he shall assume while performing the terrible deed. His sweetheart and his friend, who enter, suggest other means of dissociating oneself from this world, such, for instance, as poisoning. An apparent attempt is made in this direction, but it only ends in amusement. It should be mentioned that Wrighton has previously left—in the event of his death, of course—his worldly possessions to his sweetheart, and has absolved Fellowes from any participation in the bringing about of his death. While in an hotel in Paris he receives a telegram to the effect that all his Stock Exchange dealings have turned out splendidly, and as some of his shares have gone up by leaps and bounds he is advised to sell, which he does. He learns that Fellowes, Lucy Gray, and a butler are after him, and he proceeds to Constantinople, where he orders ten rooms at an hotel, so that he may not be annoyed by guests occupying rooms on either side of his. He tries, too, to disguise himself, but somewhat ineffectually. The various members of the pursuing party are disguised, too, in Eastern costumes. Wrighton, for some reason, has the notion that they intend to kill him, and he is extremely cautious about eating and drinking. However, after a good deal of merriment has been caused, misunderstandings are cleared up, and the lovers are united. Mr. Robert Whyte, jun., cuts an amusing figure as the nerve-stricken Wrighton; and Mr. Bensley Evans as Herbert Fellowes, Mr. James Fletch as the Butler, and Mr. Harry le Fre as the Waiter contrive to be exceedingly comical. Miss Gladys Grenville is pleasing as Lucy Gray, and acts with a good deal of natural charm.

CROUCH END HIPPODROME.

This popular variety house continues to flourish, a happy state of affairs scarcely to be wondered at when a good seat and a really good entertainment is secured by the low prices of admission. The entertainment put forward by the manager, Mr. H. de Groot, will compare very favourably with those submitted at more palatial establishments, and the holiday crowds that have besieged the doors this week have not been half-hearted in their expressions of approval of the generous scheme of amusement provided for them. Before and during the overture a series of interesting advertisement pictures are shown. The overture and accompaniments are performed with skill under the direction of Mr. J. H. Hutchison. Miss Connie Milton sets the ball rolling with her song, "Only a dream," which she renders in good style, and, as a second contribution, gives two capital impersonations, firstly of Miss Bessie Wentworth singing "Santa Claus," and secondly of Miss Vesta Victoria with "Waiting at the church," the chorus of which is lustily taken up by the audience. She is enthusiastically received. Miss Milton is as pretty as she is accomplished. The success of Vere and Royal is emphatic. They effectively burlesque the vagaries of "First and third class" in song and patter; and their concluding item of the coster boy and girl with their trap and "moke" provides plenty of legitimate fun, and evokes thunders of applause. Master C. Carr is an intelligent youngster, and is the recipient of much applause for his songs, "I wish I were you" and "Cheyenne," and he is none the less successful with a cleverly-executed dance. The Sisters Barrie, operatic vocalists, sing "Eileen Alannah" and "Life's Dream is o'er" with much success; and Mr. C. H. Charlton varies the programme with some excellent conjuring. He introduces a magic kettle, from which he supplies the audience with all the drinks one can order "over the bar," including whiskey, brandy, rum, chartreuse, port, and sherry. Mr. L. Athol, funny, yet refined, proves himself immensely popular at the Hippodrome, where his songs are received with warm favour. His first, "We all come into the world with nothing," combines fun and good sentiment; and Mr. Athol has a great success in his second song with a refrain beginning "There's the kettle a-gaily singing." Miss Queenie Essex, a great favourite here, sings about "Polly," a young lady who, if she goes to Rome, "does as Rome does," and is heard to advantage in "Dear Heart." The Ongars first render a coon song, entitled "Charity begins at home," after which they contribute a series of national dances, a feature of which is their quick-changing. They are bright and agile, and their costumes are typical of the countries represented. The little comedy drama, entitled My Landlord, presented by Lew Lake's company, provides an interlude of reckless farce that is punctuated with loud laughter; and Mrs. John Lawson and company are appearing here with considerable success in Sally in our Alley. No programme is complete nowadays without the Bioscope, and the series of animated pictures presented here is much appreciated.

THE ELLIOTTS AND SAVONAS.

TREMENDOUS SUCCESS
AT THE PALACE THEATRE, ABERDEEN.

ELLIOTTS AND SAVONAS.

It may be questioned whether a more brilliant display than that given by the Savonas in the Palace Theatre last night is to be seen at present on the variety stage. Nothing could be at the same time more elaborate and more tasteful than the spectacle presented when these famous artists, in their eighteenth century costumes, appeared amid a dazzling profusion of vari-coloured lights, and proceeded to give a series of delightful musical selections on a host of instruments, many of them of an entirely novel character. The versatility of the Savonas is perfectly marvellous, and of them it may truly be said that they touch nothing that they do not adorn. An element of refined comedy pervades the whole performance, and imparts an added attraction that was highly appreciated by the delighted audience that filled every part of the Palace last night. The Savonas were applauded to the echo, and the general verdict was that, admirable as have been their previous appearances in Aberdeen, they are now actually better than ever. The other outstanding event of this week is the wonderful performance by the Elliotts, whose cycling feats excited the highest admiration. Nothing could surpass the dexterity and agility of these acrobatic wheelmen, whose engagement thus early in the season affords a gratifying indication of the well-directed enterprise of the management. Apart from the Savonas and the Elliotts, the company is one of general excellence, and the whole entertainment is enjoyable in the extreme. It may be noted that a special performance will be given on Saturday afternoon, and young folks could not have a greater treat than is implied in a visit to the Savonas and the Elliotts.—Aberdeen Daily Journal, Aug. 6, 1907.

NEW PALACE AT CARDIFF.

UNDER the name of the Palace and Hippodrome, the building formerly known as the Grand Theatre and the King's Theatre, Cardiff, was opened on Monday as a variety hall by Mr. Frank Macnaghten, on the two-houses-a-night system. The old drama house has been entirely done away with, and its place taken by a palatial and tastefully decorated hall, the stage front and ceiling being treated in pale pink, ivory-white, and gold. Sixpenny seats, upholstered in crimson pegamoid, cover the whole ground floor from the entrance to the orchestra rails, and the whole of the pit floor is covered with cork linoleum. The circle, admission to which is 1s. 6d., has new tip-up chairs upholstered in plush. The boxes have been done away with, thus greatly extending the accommodation in this part of the building. The balcony, which slopes upward behind the circle, is, like the latter, upholstered in the most luxurious and comfortable style. The gallery affords ample accommodation, good sitting room and an uninterrupted view of the stage being ensured. The electric lighting installation is practically all new, and the preventives against fire are of the latest type.

The performances on Monday were attended by enthusiastic audiences, who marvelled at the wonderful change Mr. Macnaghten has made. Mr. John Tiller's company, in a musical burletta, entitled High Jinks, occupies a large share of the bill; the large company, including the comedian Mr. Bob Selvidge, make the turn most successful. The American singing conductor, Kurkamp, makes his first appearance in Cardiff, and, with his harpist, Chapman, proves a distinct draw. The marvellous Mexican, Maura; Les Two Cabiacs, French comedy acrobats; and Raymond's Biotableaux are the other names on the bill, the whole performance being a varied, attractive, and novel one.

During the interval Mr. Macnaghten made a neat opening speech, and introduced his manager, Mr. Arthur Burton. For the admirable arrangements made credit in a large measure is due to Mr. Sidney Arthur, the special representative of Mr. Macnaghten. Many congratulatory telegrams were received, among them being one from Miss Victoria Monks, which read as follows:—"Not because it's customary, but because I mean it, wish you every success in your new undertaking. Am sure the entire music hall profession, of whom you have always been a friend, join me in wishing you the same jolly good luck."

After the second house, a number of public men were invited by Mr. Macnaghten to supper at the Royal Hotel to celebrate the opening of the new place of amusement. Mr. Macnaghten was in the chair, and was supported by the Rev. J. Baker (Canton), Miss Victoria Monks, and several local councillors. Councillor J. Stanfield proposed "Success to the Macnaghten circuit," the chairman responding, and the toast of "The Artists" was given by the Rev. J. Baker.

REOPENING OF PAVILION, LEICESTER.

Mr. Frank Macnaghten is deserving of all praise for the artistic manner in which the redecorations and other alterations have been carried out at his Leicester house, which has become immensely popular since his advent as proprietor. The scheme of redecoration throughout the building has been completely changed. The main entrance has a striking alteration, being treated entirely in white enamel, with a large number of white electric bulbs running round the top. Within the hall the colouring is charming, shades of green, white, and gold being artistically mingled. The dome, proscenium, and front of the balcony have had particular attention. The ceiling is worked out in a very pretty style, with flowers and flying dragons, and eight handsome electroliers have also been introduced. The circle panellings and ceilings are done in green and white, relieved with gold. The seating has also been renewed. The balcony-front is delicately done in a light green, gold, and white, as is also the proscenium, a vast improvement being particularly noticeable here. The electric lighting is also a feature calling for commendation. The pillars of the boxes on either side are worked out in an attractive and pleasing style, and new curtains to match have been added. The grand saloon-bar on the floor is done entirely in white and blue, while the balcony bar is treated in white enamel. The alterations have been carried out under the personal supervision of Mr. Joe Lawrence, the courteous acting-manager. Mr. Lawrence, who is an adept as an electrician, has also introduced a new, powerful electrical installation, which also runs under the stage, and can be used when required.

The current bill is headed by Deane-Jennings's company, who are presenting with great success the exciting tabloid drama, Vengeance, the various characters in which are adequately portrayed. Another special attraction is the Four Herberts, the jolly Californian farmers, who are very good in their farm funniosities. Walter H. Pallister's bioscope pictures are extremely popular. Others who are responsible for entertaining turns are Kemp and Harris, vocal comedians; Marie Neilson, comedienne and dancer; W. B. Raby, comedian; Stuart and Stuart, comedy artists; and Marie Towers, comedienne and dancer.

ALEXANDRA PALACE.

To enumerate the attractions provided for the huge number of visitors assembled here on Monday last would be a difficult task, for, from the opening to its closing, some form of amusement was provided on every hand—bands of music everywhere, side shows to suit all tastes, fair ground, the exhilarating switchback, the amusing Geisha Boys, a good troupe of white minstrels, Captain Henry's astonishing tales of past exploits, and his present zoological collection, were items that helped to swell a gigantic programme.

In the Central Hall three variety entertainments were given. Mr. D. F. Flynn contributed well-selected numbers for his proficient cornet solos; Felix Farrell caused considerable amusement as a comedy juggler; and a mechanical donkey, manipulated by Funny Beano, added to the fun. A prettily arranged nautical ballet, Sailors Ashore, and other dances, called for favourable comment. The La Dor Troupe, lady and gentlemen acrobats, introduced their clever feats; and a young lady and youth, on the rolling globe, called the Two Clarkes, met with a good reception. The Bodey Brothers submitted a smart turn with their comedy bar speciality; Sill and Sillcott rendered admirable assistance with their comic skit, Lively Luggage, and received a perfect ovation; and the Matadores appeared in their farce, The Spanish Bull Fight.

A parachute descent in the afternoon, followed later by a balloon ascent, were under the management of M. Auguste Gaudron. A fine pyrotechnic display was given by Messrs. James Pain and Son on the lake island. The theatre is occupied this week by Mr. Chas. W. Poole's Royal Myriorama, a return visit of which was justified by the flattering results attending their last. The variety artists engaged were all extremely popular, and the animated pictures introduced with this show brought it thoroughly up to date.

Dartford Fair.

At this suburban London fixture were a great number of the amusements and entertainments we have chronicled as being at Hampstead Heath, Wormwood Scrubs, and Wanstead Flats. The principal shows were W. Biddall's royal bioscope, Biddall Bros. cinematograph theatre, Birch's two ground booths, the midget marvels, and the fat lady, and Sol Elliott's school of boxers.

Stanningley Feast.

The principal attractions here were Ben Howden and Son's superb coliseum of cinematography, with Gaumont's talking pictures; Mrs. H. Waddington's steam roundabouts, Gledstone's bazaar, Mrs. Hughes's gem swings and varieties, Mrs. Illingworth's throwing games, Vanner's coker sheet and bottle breakers, Mrs. Seed's varieties, and other amusements.

Paisley Fair.

All the best shows on the Scotch Round were found at Paisley for the Bank Holiday, which coincides this year with the fair date. The cinematograph shows were those of George Green, McIndoe's (A. Henderson, manager), W. Clark, jun., and W. Wilson. The ground booths were those of J. Howard, Styles, and Professor Wood. Motor-car sets, galloping horses, steam horses, ostriches, steam yachts, and steam swings by George Green, John Wilmot, Peter Swallow, John Wilson, J. Wingate, and Mrs. Howard. Manual swings by P. Swallow and J. Wilmot, jun. Shooting concerns by J. Day, Robert Stephenson, H. Irvine, T. Newton, J. McIndoe, W. Merrick, and coker sheets and throwing games by E. Sherran, C. H. Ross, J. Blockley, J. Blake, R. Clayton, E. Matchett, J. Hunter, E. Stephenson, J. Anderson, J. Talbot, C. H. Ross, and James Graham.

We understand that the marriage has been arranged, and will shortly take place, between Mr. Wm. Ball, son of Alf. Ball, of bioscope fame, and Mlle. Olga, the charming trapezist, who has been for some time past a member of the variety company travelling with Ball's bioscope exhibition.

Jacob Studt's Bioscope at Oxford.

The great fun fair at Oxford drew a large and orderly, well-dressed crowd on Bank Holiday, thanks to the fine weather which prevailed. The centre of attraction was Mr. Jacob Studt's new palace of varieties, where continuous performances were given throughout the day to crowded and delighted audiences. At no show can a grander array of talent be seen than upon the elegant and chastely-decorated outside verandah erected beneath the portrait of Jacob Studt. The artistic and clever troupe of lady dancers known as the Six Palace Girls are an attraction in themselves, and are the pick of the best theatres in England. With a répertoire of thirty-five distinct dances, with appropriate dresses and accessories for each, the eyes of the public are feasted with a constantly changing programme, which they are not slow to appreciate. Messrs. Florence and Tom give a clever pedestal dance and song; Mr. Ashmore is a fluent cicerone; and the genial and courteous Sidney Russell is a business-manager of the highest degree, who has Mr. Studt's best interests at heart. There were innumerable riding machines and side shows. The show was continued throughout the week.

Mr. Jacob Studt had the gratification—with the approval of the Mayor—of showing the pictures of "The Passion Play" at Oxford last Sunday evening. There was a large attendance, who witnessed each scene and tableaux in a most reverent spirit. The Rev. Thomas Horne had received an invitation to be present, but owing to prior engagements was unable to attend. The proceeds were handed to the City Police Orphanage Fund.

Studt's electric motor cars, galloping horses, and bioscope, Harry Jennings's electric roundabouts and cinématograph, Marshall Hill's switchback, hurry-scurry tower, and side shows, and Heal's switchbacks are visiting the many fêtes and galas held around Bath and surrounding district during this and next week.

Hastings Bank Holidays.

The Cricket Ground is occupied by Beach's Carnival and Old English Fair, and has attracted large numbers of the holiday folk. The orchestrion is a really musical instrument, and enhances the gaiety of the throng attracted by the clever performance of Alvante on the trapeze and slanting wire. The revolving wheel and swing boats do good business, besides which there are Edwards's shooting saloons, electric bioscope exhibition, washer throwing, cokernut shies, pipe saloons and striker, and whoa emmas.

In the Ore Valley is Hastings and Whayman's Fun Fair, in which Mr. William Bedford's remarkable freak horse, Wee Macgregor, attracts much pleased comment, from its diminutive size and excellent condition. Lorenzo, on the high mast, gives a skilful performance; the Royal Dreamland Bioscope exhibits remarkably good pictures; the electric Venetian gondolas please many, and the grounds are well lit by their own portable electric light engine.

Manchester.

White City (Old Trafford).—Managing-Director, Mr. John Calvin Brown; Assistant General-Manager, Mr. Arthur Ellis.—Enormous crowds have taken advantage of the lovely weather this week, and several novelties are added. A water gravito, called "Fun at a Riverside Inn," which is very funny, was added on Monday afternoon. The new cycle racing is a welcome addition this week. Prof. Williams and his troupe of real American niggers, Simbri the illusionist, the Zingari Pierrots, Milton's Marionettes, Hale's Tours of the World, Louis Tussaud's panopticum, and the other varieties, are well patronised. Gilleno's Circus is doing well also, with Mr. Charles Powell an excellent ringmaster, and the clowns, Little Stevo and Funny Danny, and the Spangalettis, with their troupe of performing dogs and baboon, and equestrian acts by Mr. Harry and Mr. Stephenson. Overflowing houses were all over the place on Monday.

The utmost resources were taxed on Monday, and all records were broken with regard to every form of amusement provided here. The great water chutes were continually going; the figure eight gravity railway, the dragon slide, the mystic rivers, and the many other riding devices, and the numerous games of skill were much in request, but people had to wait for their turns. The refreshment department stood the strain well, and general satisfaction reigned.

Countless thousands have during the week poured into Liverpool from all parts of the country to witness the magnificent pageant commemorative of the city's seven-hundredth birthday. Taking advantage of the occasion, Mr. John Collins had a mammoth "fun city" in Sefton Park and other centres. Bostock and Wombwell's menagerie also spread their tents about, and business everywhere was immense.

Salisbury.

The Butts.—The visit of Lord John Sanger's circus proved most successful, almost every seat in the huge tent being occupied. The long and varied programme was given in splendid style, and was received with loud applause. One of the most interesting items was that given by the troupe of elephants; a very smart turn was given by La Belle Fordants, in their musical wire act; the Mars troupe of equestrians gave an exhibition of acrobatic riding; the Airlees gave a thrilling trapeze act; in the spectacular part, Nero, some very clever turns were provided; and Cyclo proved a strong turn in his feats of strength of balancing two ponies for see-saw, and also allowing a motor car to be driven over his body, loaded with human freight.

Hanley Wakes.

A goodly crowd of high-class shows and machines were gathered together at Hanley for the Wakes. Sagar's palace of delight and variety theatre, Professor and Mme. Haydn in their mental telepathy demonstration, E. Ball's midget lady, and the boxing booths of Hughes and Cullis were amongst the shows. P. Collins's No. 2 set racing motor-cars and racing cockerels, Messrs. Dobson and Wright with shooters, novelty stalls by Messrs. Jewell, E. Humphries, Cordwell, Birch, Hughes, Dobson, and many others. Throwing games and coker sheets by Messrs. Mullett, Turner, Goodreds, Husban, and a photo booth by J. Turner. The fair was attended by immense crowds from all parts of the potteries.

Mossley Wakes.

Here were Col. Clark with coliseum; James Leo, illusionist, with the fairy head mystery in the pagoda of the willow-pattern plates; J. Hibbert and Son's machines, the gallopers and steam horses; Hurst's racing birds; Wm. Mitchell, jun.'s, motors; Harrison's helter skelter; and Hibbert's and Shuttleworth's swings; shooting ranges, bottle batteries, and varieties by Dearden, Wood, Moses, Thomas, A. Thomas, H. Thomas, R. Ingham, and others.

Tuby and Son's Coliseum.

This splendid theatre was at Silsden for a few days' season, on its way to Featherstone for the coming feast.

Alfreton Fair.

Here were Dr. Lawrence with living picture and marionette theatre, Sedgemoor's novelty booth, and Hall and Proctor with fairground varieties.

Tenby Fair.

The big show here was Haggar's bioscope. The machines were those of John Studt and Boswell. Other fairground attractions by the Boswell family and local caterers.

Kilmarnock Fair.

The shows at this important Scotch fixture were those of Messrs. G. Green, McIndoe, and Professor Moore. The machines were those of the Wilmot family, George Green, J. Howard, and Robert Stevenson. The minor novelties, shooters, throwing games, stalls, &c., were provided by Messrs. Newton, Stevenson, Merrick, Sheeran, Irvine, McPherson, Dow, Goldberg, and local traders.

Bank Holiday at Farnworth Castle.

A splendid array of talent was en évidence at this popular resort on St. Lubbock's Day. The band of the Royal Marines (Chatham) (leader Lieut. J. Wright), gave a grand selection of music. The al fresco variety stage was an immense success. The various items of a thoroughly good programme were by the Incomparable Zeens, on the flying Roman rings; Vito, equilibrist and juggler; the Euclids, double trapeze artists; the Hamilton Comedy Duo, in speciality turns; Sergt.-Major Williams's trained dogs, and Hartman's Punch and Judy show. The pyrotechnics at the end of the day were by C. J. Brock and Co., of London.

Cheetham Hill Wakes.

This excellent suburban fair in the Manchester circuit follows Gorton Brook, where many of the shows and machines from Longsight Wakes have been keeping Bank Holiday. The principal concerns on Mr. John Whiting's round are with him at Cheetham Hill, and will now continue on the Manchester round until the end of September.

THE SHOWMEN'S GUILD IN YORKSHIRE.

The organising chaplain of the Guild was at two important Yorkshire fairs on Sunday last, at Hunslet, Leeds, and at Manningham, Bradford. The Hunslet meeting was in Murphy's new show, kindly lent by the proprietor, Mr. G. C. Campbell, manager, making all forward arrangements. Owing to the shortness of the notice, only a few showmen attended, but in other respects the conference was of value and great interest. The evening meeting at Manningham Feast was in Crighton's cinématograph theatre, by kind permission of the proprietor, and was fairly well attended, and great interest displayed in the work of the Guild.

At the Hunslet meeting Mr. B. Howden, V.P., was chairman, and strongly commended the Guild to his brother travellers. At the Manningham gathering the meeting began without the formal election of a president, Mr. Goldthorpe Marshall being expected to attend and preside. This he was able to do before Mr. Horne had been long engaged with his address.

The Guild Crusade.

The organising chaplain, the Rev. T. Horne, explained the Society's important trade defence work, both amongst showmen proper and the public of the country. He strongly urged great unity and more ready financial response to the call of the Guild Executive.

The chaplain dealt with at length the present crisis at Mitcham, and the need for vigorous and constant vigilance to preserve their domestic life and the business interests from vicious or from ignorant attacks. Both addresses were listened to with the greatest possible interest and attention, and several new members were enrolled. Amongst the speakers taking part in the conferences were Messrs. Campbell, Gibson, Ruby, Westray, Corrigan, Dobson, Goldthorpe Marshall, Fawcett, Radcliffe, Lloyd, and Baines.

BRITAIN'S HISTORIC FAIRS.

By the Rev. T. Horne.

DEWSBURY FEAST.

Always on the Sunday nearest to the Festival of St. James has Dewsbury held its annual feast or fair. There is a curious archæological surmise for its occurrence at this date. The parish is not dedicated to St. James, but to All Saints (originally All Hallows); why, therefore, is the feast kept in connection with the festival of St. James? Here comes the bit of archæological lore. Dewsbury is an old Saxon Church foundation; here St. Paulinus, who spread the gospel in these wilds of Yorkshire, preached, and it is said actually made Dewsbury the centre of his missionary enterprise. With Paulinus was closely associated a local saint known as "James, the Deacon." From the point of view of the Church historian, it is of great interest that Dewsbury has through all the long ages of its past church life identified its local feast with the name of "James"—not James the Apostle, but James the Deacon of the early British Church. This local saint having no festival in the Church calendar, it was quite natural for the people to associate him with his great namesake the apostle, and to keep the feast of their local saint on the festival of his great prototype—the Sunday nearest the festival fixing the actual day of the feast—this being the invariable rule that governs all fairs with ancient church origin.

There are precious early Saxon monuments in the old church. "The Dewsbury stones" take the student back to the middle of the seventh century, and there are portions of the present fabric of the twelfth century. It is a delightful specimen of a well-restored and well and reverently kept parish church, and we felt it no small honour to be invited to preach to Dewsbury people from its historic pulpit.

Dewsbury is the centre, the heart of an enormous working population, hence its importance in the yearly round of Yorkshire fairs. It is belted by other towns like Batley, Mirfield, Thornhill, Raventhorpe, Wakefield, Horbury, Heckmondwike, and in fact you cannot travel many miles without coming into other large centres of human life and industry. From two to three hundred thousand people are within easy access of Dewsbury Feast, and they know it, for in they come in their multitude to crowd the fair ground.

The Entrance Avenue.

From the Market Square to the feast ground—a distance of a quarter of a mile—there is one long avenue of stalls, bazaars, and other feast ground novelties. Here were the industrious handsellers, penny-novelty merchants, astrologers, phrenologists, and the persuasive vendor of the almighty pill. Here were that special features of Yorkshire and Lancashire fairs—the toy and fairings bazaars. These stretched in unbroken line for five hundred feet; a sight you can only see at great centres of life like this. This fairy land of toys included the well-known bazaars of Messrs. Gladstone, Howorth, and Seed. There were also in this wonderful avenue over twelve pannum stalls, where gingerbread, brandy snap, and Barcelona nuts were purveyed, to the delight both of old and young. One hundred feet in length of pannum stalls and wagons, the concerns of Wright Bros., Holdsworth, and others. Here, too, were jewellery stalls, ice cream barrows, refreshment stalls, weighing and measurement machines, small throwing games and dart and ring boards.

The Vast Feast Ground.

Admirably set out by that clever Corporation official, Mr. J. E. Mountain, Market and Fairs' Superintendent, who has the eye of showmen for bold and broad effects, it lies four square—two lines of shows and two lines of shooters, throwing games, and stalls. In the centre of the quadrangle a score and more of machine novelties, big and little. Our first sight of the feast was from the vantage ground of the footbridge that spans the railway close by the ground. Oh, the splendour of it; the joy, the music, and the light of it! What a galaxy of whirling colour and electric lamps; and then, greatest joy of all, the intense throbbing human life of it. Verily and indeed the people at play.

The Shows—Great and Small.

Ben Howden and Son's new Cinematograph Theatre, Randall Williams' (Monte Bros.) cinematograph, Enoch Farrar's cinematograph, Relph and Pedley's cinematograph—all these with talking pictures as well as the best up-to-date films, Chipperfield's Menagerie, Professor D'Osta, from Coney Island, New York, with Madame Zelra in mental telepathy, and the Wrestling Bear, Captain Priest with performing seals, and his No. 2 show, the Armless Mexican Prodigy, W. Westray's Freak Museum, C. Relph's "Willow Plate" Exhibition of live marvels, and Hilton's model exhibition—an array of show novelties second to none in the world of fairs.

The Riding Machines and Swings.

Goldthorpe Marshall's motors, Aspland's (B. Howden and Sons) motors and juvenile set, P. Collins's ostriches (manager, Mr. Mullett), J. E. Waddington's racing birds, R. Holdsworth's Alpine glissade, Mrs. H. Waddington's switchback, G. Redfearn's flying motors, W. Shows and J. Corrigan's steam swings, R. H. Williams's tunnel railway, Leiske's Eiffel Tower overboats, Richards's big boats, and park swings by Proctor, Redfearn, and Fisher. Juvenile motor-cars, horses, and gem swings by J. Gavan A. Barker, C. Blake, J. H. Seed, jun., Johnson, Thomas, and Turner.

Shooting Ranges and Throwing Games.

The shooters were those of J. Holdsworth, J. H. Seed, A. Richards, C. Blake, G. Vanner, A. Rhodes, and E. Brannan; the variety frames, football penalties, dolly frames, coker shies, ring and dart boards, were seventy in number, and amongst the leading firms were those of Messrs. Powell, Blake, J. Rhodes, Vanner, Turner, Brannan, Gething, Fisher, Holdsworth, Doubtfire, Jameson, Marks, Jacques, W. Steward, and many others.

The New Cinematograph Theatre.

The principal attraction (and deservedly so) of the fair was the superb new show of B. Howden and Sons (G. A. Howden, acting-manager). The commodious pavilion is a marvel of comfort, as regards its seating accommodation, and a marvel of artistry as regards the rich inside decorations, the auditorium being 64ft. back and 40ft. wide. The superb organ front is the latest masterpiece from the atelier of Messrs. Gavioli et Cie, Paris, and is rich in carved work and glorious in gold bronze. The floriated carving is of the most exquisite beauty, the organ being embedded under the centre panel, and is displayed in a novel scheme of golden pipes, flanged by miniature Corinthian pillars. Above the organ is a bold emblematic design, "The Sun in Mid-day Glory," with radiant corona of golden light. Behind this is a mythological painting (in panel), "Cupid and his attendant cherubs." To the right and left of the organ centre panel are heroic figures representing "Peace" and "Prosperity," each bearing aloft a corona of electric lights. The other life-sized figures on the extreme wings of the front are vestal virgins, each bearing crowns of light, the mythological pictures in these side panels being scenes representing "The Cry of the Sirens to Ulysses." The whole scheme of decoration is most exquisite in taste, and suggestive of the highest possibilities of the artists' skill. At the extreme wings of the front are the two entrances to the theatre, golden fretwork in the dome of each entrance, and most tasteful draping of rich blue plush velvet. The front is forty feet wide, and is twenty-three feet in height. The electric light installation is of the very latest and best character. On the outside parade are eight powerful arc lamps and 50 parti-coloured lights (embodied in the decorative scheme of the artistic front). The lighting scheme inside is one of the most effective we have ever seen—cross garlands of electric lamps all meeting in the centre of the richly-decorated pavilion. One hundred and fifty separate lights are utilised in this novel scheme of interior lighting. Messrs. B. Howden and Sons are to be congratulated on their new and up-to-date enterprise, and Messrs. Gavioli et Cie and their London agents, Messrs. Chiappa and Co., must be warmly praised for the magnificent work of art they have executed to B. Howden and Sons' order. From beginning to ending the cost has exceeded five thousand pounds.

BANK HOLIDAY FAIRS IN LONDON.

An abounding capacity for play is one of the great characteristics of London. It is this joy of life that prevents the average Londoner from sinking under the heavy and constant strain of the daily work and commerce. To the student of human nature London at play answers many of the difficult problems of town life. It is quite true that you do not know your London until you have seen that wonderful comradeship of social help and enjoyment that marks the open-air amusement of the people in London Parks, its open spaces, and its breezy Heaths and Common Lands. The Parks and the open Commons are sometimes called the "Lungs of London," but they are more than "lungs," they are in a real sense the open theatre of the common life.

The Fair at Hampstead Heath.

One hundred thousand people who did not or could not go to the seaside, found full enjoyment on Hampstead Heath. In the very early morning these pilgrims of mirth began their journey to the breezy Heath Land by 'bus, tram-car, motors, the tube, or railway. Hampstead-road was thronged with sturdy pedestrians who either despised the rapid transit of car and tube, or were determined to husband the few pence at their disposal for the shows and entertainments on the Heath. It was a merry, perspiring crowd, and it did one good to see the hearty enjoyment of these pilgrims to the Fair. When the village was reached (and even before you gained the Common) there was a fair in a most suitable ground close to Hampstead Station. This fair is under the banner of Fred Gray, one of London's most enterprising showmen, and with him were associated J. Manders, and several notable caterers of minor amusements. Fred Gray exhibited three large machine novelties—the switchbacks, galloping horses, bicycle track, and provided shooting ranges, swings, and varieties. Mr. Manders's exhibits included the up-to-date coliseum of living pictures and slipping the slip tower. J. Sanders exhibited throwing games, dolly frames and stalls. Arthur Burgess joined this merry crowd after Monday's big business on the Heath with his celebrated variety amusements from Olympia.

The Great Entrance Avenue.

The Heath is traversed by an immense footway known as "The Horseshoe Walk," the centre of the horseshoe being one of the dips or valleys of the Heath. One side of the Horseshoe Walk forms the entrance avenue to Showland, the bend of the shoe being fully occupied by the crowd of novelties and entertainments at "The Vale of Health" Fairground. As you enter the immense avenue from the village road you at once perceive the careful provision of the London County Council for the possible emergencies and for the proper handling of a great crowd. Here are set out in readiness the ambulance tents, the horse ambulance, the fire preventive and rescue appliances. There are large temperance refreshment tents providing wholesome food and drink at the people's prices. After this colony of ready help and refreshment, we enter the long, long row of throwing games, cocoanut sheets, shooting galleries, bazaar and novelty stalls, juvenile roundabouts, gem swings, overboats, peep shows, variety stalls, &c., &c. The principal shows and concerns at this part of the fair were Buckley's trained animals, Wilson's fine art gallery, Swales Forrest's overboats, gem horses, and varieties. Amongst the prominent providers of minor amusements were Boldsworth Bros., Forrest Bros., the Spencer Family, S. Jones, Purchase, and T. Miller.

Harry Cox's Ground, "The Vale of Health."

This pitch is the very centre of the Fair (or, as we have termed it, the bend of the horseshoe). Mr. H. Cox provides the permanent attractions at Hampstead Heath, and these include a superb set of galloping horses, three sets of swings, and the big wheel overboats. Close to Mr. Cox's aggregation there are at Bank Holiday times splendid additional amusements—swings, throwing games, varieties, and the hundred and one attractions of a carnival fair. Amongst the principal providers of these entertainments were Cobbett, Rollings, Birch, Simpson, T. Manning, and Stepwood.

The Battery Fairground.

This excellent pitch within easy reach of Jack Straw's Castle was fully occupied by shows, machine novelties, and variety stalls. Biddall Bros.'s royal cinematograph, J. Chittock's Metropolitan cinematograph, F. Wilson's cinematograph, Sol Elliott's boxing booth, J. Wilson's gem motors and varieties, and Brown's railway track were the principal exhibits on the ground.

Over 200 separate stalls providing for the entertainment and refreshment of the people lined all the great approaches to the Fair, and although there were 100,000 people at play, the report from the L.C.C. officials, and from the police in charge of this vast crowd is that not a single case of either rowdyism or drunkenness occurred to mar the festival of London's busy workers at play on Hampstead Heath.

Wanstead Flats.

The fairground at the gate of Epping Forest is the best open-air carnival London provides. To this fair the workers of the busy East-End come out in their thousands—all sorts and conditions of people, all nations, old and young alike—to see and to join in all the Jolly Fun of the Fair.

The Entertainments Great and Small.

Wm. Alf. Ball's superb new show, the electric Gavioli organ and artistic front was the big event of the fair. Closely following Ball's show in public esteem was Thurston's coliseum of animated photography. The big concerns were Forrest's wheeling the whirl, the Japanese ships in the air, H. Forrest's amusements, Thurston and Son's motor-car set, horses, and helter skelter.

There were long avenues of throwing games, dolly frames, and other stalls and varieties.

At Wormwood Scrubs

Were Beach's steam horses, aerial flight, shooter, and varieties; Harness's big switchback; a great and varied array of fairground novelties, stalls, games, and varieties.

Indispensable! Rayne's "Pocket Date Book." Contents: Map (19in. by 10in.), showing the distance betwixt the various music halls at a glance. Will tell if one hall is within the barring radius of the other, thus saving fears, worry, and anxiety. THE FIGHT FOR MITCHAM FAIR.

As regards the legal abolition of Mitcham Charter Fair (due to commence on Monday next, Aug. 12), the position of affairs is the same as last year, and, indeed, as it has been since the time of its foundation by Royal Charter. It is a legal fair, and until the Home Secretary, in conformity with the abolition of Fairs Act, signs the order of abolition, all its rights, privileges, exemptions, and sources of revenue remain intact.

What is a Fair Franchise?

It is the right of the people of the district to have and to frequent a certain place on fixed days to enjoy and to trade at the fair. It sometimes means that the Lord of the Manor, or the town authorities, have rights of tolls and control as to the order or arrangement of the fair. Besides the people's rights, there are well-defined accustomed rights of the traders and showmen attending the fair. All these interests are reciprocal, and it is always difficult to sever them.

What Has Happened at Mitcham.

Certan interested parties (an extremely small section of Mitcham residents) took upon themselves to promote a movement to abolish the fair They sent up a petition last year to the Home Office, asking for an order of abolition. Counter petitions from Mitcham traders and from the Showmen's Guild followed, and the result was that the Home Secretary refused to abolish the fair. The position to-day is that the Home Secretary still refuses to grant an order of abolition.

What the Abolitionists Did.

They presumed to do on their own authority what the constitutional authority had refused. The Conservators of Mitcham Common, acting with the present owner's of the Lord of the Manor right to demand tollage from tenants of the Fair Green, issued a notice refusing to let tenants ground to carry on the fair, and that, we understand, is their fixed policy this year. This extremely autocratic action, if allowed to succeed, would mean the practical end of the fair, and the deprivation of both traders and frequenters of the fair of their time-honoured rights and privileges.

Shall the Will of the People Prevail?

As soon as Mitcham people realised that their ancient charter rights were being filched from them, their indignation was most warm and unmistakable. Public meeting after public meeting have been held, all unanimous in their determination to preserve their charter rights. The election of a new Parish Council this year introduced a more democratic spirit into Mitcham public life. Councillors Dant, Dale, Baker, and Dr. De Caux, with several other prominent men, saw the injustice of the abolition movement, and a People's Rights League was formed to ventilate the question. This purely spontaneous and local movement so voiced public opinion that at a properly convened Parish meeting the abolitionists were routed, and the following resolutions carried with but four dissentients:—

1. "That this meeting of electors of the parish of Mitcham, constitutionally assembled, strongly disapproves of the action of the Mitcham Parish Council in seeking to bring about the abolition of Mitcham Charter Fair, and desires to record its opinion that any attempt to abolish the fair will be contrary to the will of the people. And that it be an instruction to the Clerk of the Parish Council to forward this resolution to the Home Secretary."

2. "That this meeting desire to see the removal of the ancient Charter Fair from the Fair Green to a more suitable site on Mitcham Common if the same could be effected without prejudice to the rights granted under the Charter, and that a copy of the resolution be forwarded to the Home Secretary and the Conservators of Mitcham Common."

Speaking to the first resolution, Mr. Councillor Dant (vice-chairman of the Parish Council), in a most able defence of the fair, remarked that it had been said it was inconsistent of him as a Christian worker to advocate the retention of the fair. He didn't care a rap about that statement; he had a conscience of his own and intended to use it, and he asserted that they were not going to bring about the wholesale improvement of the people by throttling their amusements. Instead of abolishing the fair, let them mend it, let them improve it all they could, and if he succeeded in passing the resolution he had read he had another one to propose, aiming at the improvement of the fair and its removal to the Three Kings Common. For what did the common exist if not for the benefit of the people?

The Present Attitude of the Abolitionists.

In the face of the vote of the people, it is almost incredible that gentlemen holding office on a public body "to conserve and preserve the rights of the people" should set their individual will against the declared mind of their constituents. That, however, is how the matter now remains.

The owners of the Fair Franchise of the Lord of the Manor refuse to exercise their rights. The Conservators are joining with them, and overstrain their powers to deprive the people of their pleasure fair and annual holiday, and to seriously injure the business and livelihood of Metropolitan showmen and fairground traders. This gross abuse of their office can only end in the sovereign will of the people asserting itself, and driving from place and power these autocratic despoilers of the people's pleasures and open-air amusements.

The Guild's Work at Mitcham.

For over twelve months past the Executive Committee of the Showmen's Guild have strenuously laboured for a peaceful termination of the struggle for the showmen's rights at Mitcham. Writing to the Parish Council on June 29, the Guild secretary said that: "On behalf of the Showmen's Guild of Great Britain, a society which includes the principal show tenants and fairground traders frequenting Mitcham Fair, I have to add that this society is now prepared, in the interests of the tenants of the fair, to give the Parish Council, the Board of Conservators, and the present holders of the Franchise full guarantees that if the fair is continued on the suggested site (Three Kings' Common) that only such shows and amusements as shall meet with the approval of the joint authorities shall open at fair time, that the fairground itself shall be left clear from all litter, or possibly objectionable matter, and that, in every respect, good rule and order shall be maintained."

Petitioning the Conservators on the same date the Guild Executive offered to join the Conservators in a friendly conference to promote the removal and the betterment of the fair, the material clause in that petition was:—

"The expression of public opinion against the abolition of the fair, and in favour of the transfer from the congested area of the ancient Fair Green to the Three Kings' Common, is being supported by a numerously-signed petition to the Home Secretary, now in process of signature. We are, therefore, induced to ask, in the face of such a volume of public opinion, whether the time has not arrived for recognising that the abolition of the fair is not in accordance with the wishes of the people, and that the time has arrived for considering the advisability of removing the fair to the suggested site, that it may be continued under such conditions of local control as may obviate some of the objections that have led to the cry for abolition."

Here was a golden bridge for the Conservators to walk over. Here was their opportunity of putting themselves right with the people. But they refused.

The Parish Council, by its final court of appeal—a legal parish meeting—did put itself right; but not so the Conservators.

The Guild and the Franchise Owners.

Up to this day week high hopes were held that actual owners of the Lord of the Manor Tollage Rights would save the situation by recognising the just demands of the people. But no! The final word was a blank refusal; the Franchise will not exercise their franchise, and so the issue goes back again to the people whom these gentlemen are determined to deprive of their fair; the organised showmen, too, must go back to the people—only with this mighty difference, the showmen are fighting for the people and with the people.

Lord George Sanger on the Issue.

Writing on the question to the people of Mitcham, the veteran showman said: "We have already seen the many links that Mitcham possesses of the grand and glorious past in this ancient Charter Fair. That fair must be preserved, and it is to the people of Mitcham that we—the showmen of the Empire—look, not only for its maintenance, but for its continuance under such better and more modern conditions that will extend its usefulness and increase its prosperity. To the showmen, as a veteran and a father in their midst, I say that they must meet the abolitionists with a determined and stubborn resistance. Their cause is honourable and just, and I feel convinced that the general public, not only of the locality itself, will be with them, but that the sympathy of the show-loving people throughout the Empire will be extended to the movement that endeavours to preserve to people and showmen alike the old-time fair of 'Lavender Land' at Mitcham."

The Guild has offered to co-operate with the owners of the franchise, with the conservators, and with the parish and county authorities, to promote the improvement and the permanence of the People's Fair at Mitcham.

We can only add that if the abolitionists persist in their unpopular course, that sooner or later a vote of the people will relegate them to the obscurity of private life, and to the public opprobrium they so richly deserve.

HOLIDAY FAIRS IN YORKSHIRE.

Hunslet Feast, Leeds, and Manningham Feast, Bradford, always fall on the August Bank Holiday, and, therefore, may be taken as examples of the adaptation of old fair to modern needs. Hunslet, with 100,000 people to draw upon in its immediate neighbourhood, and another 200,000 within a radius of a mile, is from all points of view a splendid centre for a fair. The fairground is the spacious Hunslet Moor, one of the lungs of Leeds, in every way an ideal open space and playground for the people. Mr. William Murphy, the enterprising lessee of the ground, assisted by his most capable manager of grounds, Mr. Gledstone, arranged the fair in splendid order, the shows, machines, and other novelties being displayed to the best advantage.

Shows, Menageries, Circuses.

Texas Bill's menagerie and Cowboy ranche, with its marvels of Nature and Texan experts; Westray's museum of freaks, and Blakley's exhibition of living curios, supplied the lovers of zoology with abundance of interesting and rare animals, birds, and creeping creatures.

Wm. Murphy's New Show.

This thoroughly up-to-date cinematograph theatre, with its superbly beautiful organ front by Gavioli et Cie., of Paris and London, was the centre of attraction and the big draw of the feast, under the able management of Mr. G. C. Campbell, who has under him a most capable company. The performances proved to be just what the people delight in; the best of films, ably described and illustrated by Mr. Campbell himself. The outside parade and variety turns were immensely popular, and in every sense Mr. Murphy is to be congratulated on his latest venture in the world of shows.

Dennis's Circus of Variety.

This very popular Yorkshire show well maintained its popularity for acrobatic and equestrian turns and the ever fresh business of the sawdust arena, being met with deserved applause and most liberal patronage.

Professor D'Osta and Mme. Zelva.

These specialists in mental telepathy astounded the people of Hunslet by their expert mind transference, the Professor keeping up a running fire of questions, and Mme. Zelva reeling off the answers with equal rapidity and most marvellous accuracy. This show, both inside and out, is a model of up-to-date fitness and taking originality.

Professor Ruby's X-Rays.

La Morte, the X-rays illusion introduced by Professor Ruby, is a capital show, and draws as well as ever. Both Mme. Ruby and the Professor maintained their well-won reputation with this perfectly equipped and scientific exhibition.

Professor Gibson's Occult Mysteries.

This capable showman, assisted by his talented son, "Little Twitch," keeps well to the fore in their second sight and other mysteries of black and white magic.

The Athletes and Boxers.

"Strong Man" Weston, with his school of boxers, gave capital exhibitions of fistiana and physical culture.

Roundabouts, Swings, &c.

Chief amongst these being the lessees Mr. Wm. Murphy's grand set of motor-cars, P. Collins's giant roosters, Ben Howden and Son's racing motors, Redfearn's flying motors, Corrigan's new concern, the Alpine glissade, R. H. Williams's tunnel railway, T. Burgin's steam swings, Lieske's big wheel, Corrigan's steam swings, Dobson's flying ships, Morley's steam swings and gem horses, motors and swings by Cooper, Gledstone, Seed, Johnson, and Waugh; manual swings by Messrs. Fisher, Morley, and Dobson.

Shooting Ranges and Batteries.

These were provided by Messrs. Dobson, Seed, Richards, and Jameson.

Throwing Games and Variety Stalls.

Two sides of the immense quadrangle of the feastground were taken up by coker and Emma sheets, football penalties, dolly frames, ring and dart boards, bazaars, pannum stalls, striking machines, and other fairground varieties. The caterers and stallholders were Messrs. Ashcroft, Campbell, Marks, Hyde, Crowther, Jameson, Dobson, Corrigan and Sons, Wright, Seed, Lee, Hartley, Riley, Morley and Son, Vanner, Crowther, Veti, Fisher, Johnson, Steward Peters, Cookshow, Gallagher, Towers, Jameson, Cooper, Richards, B. Walker, Waugh, Thomas, A. Radcliffe, Jacques, T. Burgin, and others.

Manningham Feast.

This popular suburb of Bradford is not so fortunate as Hunslet in having a grand moor on which to hold its feast. It is like Hunslet in every other respect. There are vast multitudes of people to appreciate the fair, and they welcome the advent of the shows at the Feast of Manninghamtide. Every available yard of the possible ground space was fully taken up by the grand array of show and machine novelties.

Shows and Big Machines.

Chipperfield's menagerie, E. Farrar's coliseum of animated pictures, J. Crighton's living picture theatre, Goldthorpe Marshall's motor-cars, F. W. Waddington's motor-cars, racing cockerels, and steam yachts, and Amos's steam swings.

Shooting Concerns and Minor Varieties.

Winchester ranges and batteries by Messrs. Holdsworth, Thompson, and Radcliffe; juvenile sets of gem horses and swings by J. Gavan; striking machines by Messrs. Joy, Radcliffe, Thompson, and Basker; pannum stalls by Messrs. J. Holdsworth and Wright and Company; throwing games and coker sheets by Messrs. Rhodes, Turner, Fawcett, Thompson, Joy, Powell, R. Holdsworth, Jameson, Barnes, W. Holdsworth, Riley, and A. Rhodes.

PATHÉ FRÈRES.

CHAT WITH MR. C. IVATTS

Mr. Cedric Ivatts, joint-manager with Mr. Henry Courant of the London, British, and Colonial business of Messrs. Pathé Frères, the famous manufacturers of the cinematograph films and machines, is a most interesting personality and a thoroughly business man. Mr. Ivatts attends to the animated picture department and Mr. Courant to the phonographic side. The firm is undoubtedly one of the biggest in this particular line in the world, and at its head is Mr. Charles Pathé, who has been actively associated with cinematography since its creation. Mr. Pathé has himself been a showman, and, therefore, thoroughly understands their requirements and the public to which they appeal. Pathé Frères started in a very modest way, and they now employ over 3000 workmen. In their colouring department alone there are 900 girls, who are exclusively employed in colouring Pathé films. It is Mr. Ivatts' opinion that within a comparatively short time all films will be coloured, and a long-felt want will thus be filled, to the general advantage of the industry. Pathé's colouring in done mechanically, and thus the firm is able to put this, their latest development, on the market at a moderate cost. Until almost recently the colouring was done by hand, a method which proved very expensive. Pathé's magnum opus in the coloured film class is a series called The Passion Play, and forms a most beautiful subject.

The Pathé factories are situated at Joinville-sur-Seine and at Vincennes. They cover an area of over 25,000 square metres, and are practically surrounded by the river. It was found necessary to secure such a site as this, owing to the fact that the authorities had indicated that it was highly desirable that the Pathé buildings should be isolated from other houses and factories, owing to the risk of danger from fire resulting from the storage of an immense quantity of celluloid, one million feet of which, Mr. Ivatt informs us, is always kept in stock. The firm possesses three theatres. One, at Vincennes, is a miniature Crystal Palace, the roof, which is 60ft. from the ground, being of cathedral glass. On the various floors are to be found services of painters, stage-managers, decorators, costume designers and makers, &c. Another handsome huge glass edifice is the theatre at Montreuil-sous-Bois, where many of the staging effects and scenes are arranged. Five hundred horses can be accommodated on the ground floor, and there is a huge water tank, worked by hydraulic pressure, on the principle of that at the London Hippodrome.

At Belleville the cinematograph machines, &c., are manufactured, and here it may be mentioned that the Pathé projector has a world-wide reputation for steadiness. They are bringing out a new machine on the same principle as their No. 2, but more adaptable for showmen's purposes. Several improvements on previous models have been effected, and the up-to-date machine, which is to be sold at £28, will be ready in a week or so.

Mr. Ivatts travels a good deal about the fairs which are held in all parts of the United Kingdom, and he has made many friends among the showmen. He tells us that nothing gives him greater delight than to have a chat over a cup of tea in one of the caravans. Recognising what has been done in America with the five-cents cinematograph theatres, the Pathé Frères have followed on this example, and have persuaded many showmen to open places in Paris on the same principle. Mr. Ivatts considers that it is a matter of surprise that no one has yet been enterprising enough to do the same thing in our big English centres. In New York there are seventy-five of these animated picture establishments. They are open all day, and visitors can stop as long as they like for one payment. For originality of conception and daring in the carrying out of ideas for living pictures, Messrs. Pathé Frères occupy an exalted position among cinematograph merchants. The film industry has steadily improved and increased since the advent of this firm, who, by the way, were the first to reduce the price of the films to fourpence per foot. They have found that this year there has been a greater demand for cinematograph pictures than at any previous time in the history of the business, the month of July having been a record for them in this respect.

THE REV. T. HORNE will address a gathering of London showmen on the work of the Guild on the afternoon of Mitcham Fair Sunday, at five o'clock, in Ball's Show. This gathering is for show people only. Questions of great importance will be submitted to the meeting.

MR. ALF. BALL, who is under an injunction of the High Court not to draw on Mitcham Fair Green without the consent of the owners of the Franchise, will be at Mitcham this coming Fair week. He has been fortunate enough to secure an excellent site in close proximity to the Fairground—facing the main street—and will open his new and perfect show on Saturday, and continue to show for the Fair day.

WILLISSON'S CIRCUS is appearing at Pietermaritzburg, and playing to fair business; and Woolfram's Royal Bioscope and variety company are at the City Hall of the same town.

"THE SHOWMEN'S YEAR BOOK" for 1907. Edited by the Rev. T. Horne. Entirely rearranged, corrected, and enlarged; 100 pages. Price 1s. Principal contents: "British Shows and Showmen," Constitution and Rules of the Showmen's Guilds," "Lists of Fairs," "Local Feasts and Wakes," "Synopsis of By-laws," &c. Invaluable to all who follow the fair. Sold at "THE ERA" Buildings, 5, Tavistock-street, London, W.C.

CHAT WITH MR. MORRIS ABRAHAMS.

Mr. Morris Abrahams, the able assistant-manager of the Queen's Palace of Varieties, Poplar, might be said to have been born in the business. He is a son of Mr. Michael Abrahams, one of the proprietors of the Queen's, the other proprietor being Mr. Frederick Abrahams, an uncle of the subject of this sketch. Mr. Morris Abrahams has already furnished undeniable evidence of his ability to "follow in his father's footsteps," as Miss Vesta Tilley would say, and we have no doubt that in time he will become one of the most popular personalities in the music hall managerial sphere. At present he is well under thirty years of age, and as he has already done much towards winning his laurels—for he has shown great aptitude for the profession which he has adopted, is a strenuous worker and conscientious in everything that he undertakes—one need have no fear as to his future.

His duties in connection with the Queen's Palace of Varieties, Poplar, are those of assistant-manager. He attends to the financial side of what is an important business enterprise, and he spends every evening looking after the comfort of his patrons. During the absence from the hall of Mr. Jack Woolf, the general-manager, Mr. Abrahams takes full control, and he is at the establishment from the time the curtain goes up until it is dropped at the conclusion of the second house. He is on the best of terms with the visitors at the Queen's, and what perhaps speaks even better in his favour is that he is highly esteemed by the staff of the theatre. Ample proof of this came in quite an unexpected manner at the first anniversary celebration on April 16, when Mr. Morris Abrahams was presented with a gold watch, which bore an inscription as follows:—"Presented to Morris Abrahams, assistant-manager and treasurer, as a token of respect from the staff and a few friends on the first anniversary of the Queen's Palace, Poplar, April 16, 1907." At the same time, Mr. Abrahams was the recipient of a handsomely-mounted portrait of himself.

It is of interest here to mention that Messrs. Frederick and Michael Abrahams are the oldest music hall managers in London. They are the sons of Mr. Isaac Abrahams, who half a century ago was proprietor of the Polytechnic Music Hall in Manchester, and it was from that establishment that the two brothers commenced their career in the profession. Mr. Fred Abrahams served an apprenticeship in the orchestra, and, acquiring much knowledge of variety affairs, he became his father's manager in one department, while his brother Michael controlled another department. Mr. Fred Abrahams in the course of things got married, and settled down for a time in Nottingham, where he rebuilt an old music hall, re-christening it the Polytechnic. He then joined his brother Morris in the management of the old Effingham, when Mr. T. Abrahams, after parting with his brother Morris, took the Oriental. At that time Mr. Michael had the Apollo, in Hare-street, Bethnal Green. Later, Mr. Fred Abrahams came to Poplar, and took possession of a small hall known as the Oriental, which has now blossomed forth into a good-sized and responsible place of entertainment under the name of the Queen's Palace of Varieties. It is the oldest place of amusement in the neighbourhood. The Brothers Abrahams have held the place for forty years, and it is now their own freehold property, along with the surrounding land. A great number of artists who subsequently became "stars" were given a kindly help up the ladder of success at the Queen's.

PRINCE'S, POPLAR.

No change has been made at present in the name of this commodious establishment, which opened on Monday night for the season with two variety performances. At both houses crowded audiences enjoyed the excellent programme provided by the management for the delectation of their patrons. Well-rendered selections were given by a large and capital orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Macdonald, and Mr. Percy H. Gallagher brought his experience to bear in the managerial arrangements with his usual courtesy and attention, while the genial and popular manager, Mr. C. Melville Lurring, supervised the whole with his customary ability. The short play, Our Curate, with its scenes of vigour and sensation, claims undivided interest, and gives good opportunity for Mr. Fred Eustace to display his ability in the title-rôle, while the support accorded him by a numerous company was in every way sufficient. The eccentricities of Mr. Will Evans are a source of much amusement, and his song, "Down at the garden gate," causes roars of laughter. The fine voice of Miss Mary Glenn is heard to advantage in "Caller herrin'," and the animal imitations of Mr. Harold Hughman, particularly that depicting a dog fight, are exceedingly good.

Mr. Harry Anderson is always a favourite turn, and his items, "Treasure" and "My new pal," are well received. The Two Bees gain applause for their topical allusions in "The man in the moon"; and Messrs. Hall and Earle provide a clever interlude with their acrobatic feats, while their "business" is very droll. Miss Jessie Merrilees charmingly sings, "A man, a maid, a moon" and "Take a sail in my boat"; and Mr. Leo Fell finds considerable favour for his marvellous imitations of various musical instruments, including the xylophone and bamboo bells. An improvement is now seen in the front of the house staff, who present a very smart appearance in their new uniforms of blue and black with gold trimmings.

FRANK E. FILLIS'S gigantic circus and menagerie is playing to record business at Beaconsfield. His star attraction is La Belle Nila, in statuary poses in a lion's den.

PROVINCIAL MANAGERS.

MR. SAMUEL LLOYD, PAVILION, GLASGOW.

The height of success to which this popular hall has attained in Glasgow has had the effect of bringing the name of Mr. Lloyd, the energetic general-manager, prominently before the public. Mr. Lloyd is at all times a busy man, but he spared our representative an hour to give, in tabloid form, the essential details of his managerial career. A native of Birmingham, he first dabbled in things theatrical about twenty-five years ago, beginning as an amateur, and finally adopting professional management as his métier in 1888. In 1890 he started that famous combination Mme. Lloyd's Choir, with his wife as principal vocalist, and as conductor Mr. Howard W. Galpin, who is now at the Pavilion in a similar capacity. At this time Mr. Lloyd had on the road seven variety companies, and a special summer tour of "flying matinées" with a recital party headed by Mr. Arthur Roberts. Mme. Lloyd's choir was from the first a great success, and the prosperity enjoyed by the combination in England suggested an invasion of Scotland. Accordingly the company, thirty strong, reached Carlisle on their first northern tour. The stationmaster at the Citadel Station, when he heard their outlined route, gave them absolutely no encouragement, and hoped they had enough money to take them home again, as they would never draw it in Scotland. He proved, to some extent, a good prophet, for although the choir were successful in some of the towns visited, the tour resulted in a loss of some hundreds of pounds. Nothing daunted, Mr. Lloyd, two years later, again decided to try his luck in Scotland. On this occasion almost the entire choir protested, but the manager remained firm, and the second Scotch tour was started. It proved a success from the first, and Mr. Lloyd not only recouped all his previous loss, but finished £300 to the good. It was on this tour he had the good fortune to meet Mr. Walter Freer (now manager of the extensive series of Corporation Saturday Recitals in that city), and it was this gentleman who induced Mr. Lloyd to venture into Glasgow and the larger Scotch towns. This proved the forerunner of many pleasant engagements in the North, and they recall with pride the fact that Lloyd's Choir holds the record for the largest drawings at a Glasgow Corporation recital. In these days Mr. Lloyd was proprietor of the Theatre Royal, Eastbourne, and had his home in that popular resort for years.

In 1905 Mr. Lloyd was engaged to boom a special production of Romeo and Juliet at the Grand, Glasgow (previously given at the Queen's, Manchester). In the midst of his duties Mr. Lloyd was asked by the directors of the Glasgow Pavilion to take over the control of this variety house. He accepted the commission, and in a few weeks Mr. Lloyd soon demonstrated that the star of the Pavilion was in the ascendant. Much-needed reforms were instituted. The leading artists in the profession were in succession seen at the Pavilion, and the result was the development of a strong clientele, who, by their steady support, show their appreciation of these improvements. The financial aspect of the case is to be noted in the steadily-increasing dividends and in the value of the shares. Before Mr. Lloyd took over the management pessimistic shareholders were offering their £1 shares at half-a-crown; these are now quoted on 'Change at 31s. 6d., and not easily got even at that. One decided factor in Mr. Lloyd's success is the thorough grip of details which is manifest in all his dealings, and another is the working of the staff. Absolute fidelity to all orders is demanded, and the slightest breach of faith or appearance of incivility entails dismissal. The result is seen in the efficiency of all the employees, and yet this firm control does not detract one iota from the good feeling existing on both sides, as witness their many harmonious meetings at suppers, dances, picnics, and kindred functions; while the presentation to Mr. Lloyd at Christmas of a beautiful diamond ring, subscribed by the staff, was evidence of the admiration felt by the Pavilion employees for the manager who has raised this hall into the front rank of Glasgow places of amusement.

PAEGEL'S CIRCUS is drawing crowded houses at the Bluff, Durban, and its patrons have every reason to be pleased with the varied and edifying amusement Herr Paegel provides. The Flying Eugenes give a thrilling aerial performance; Mr. E. Shand submits a clever exhibition of equipoise on frail structure; and Miss Alice Montgomery creates roars of laughter with her baby elephant Mary. Mme. Paegel's troupe of wild animals holds premier place in the programme; Len Pedro, screen and barrel spinner, is exceedingly clever; and Miss Montgomery is the personification of grace on horseback. Herr Paegel continues his tremendous feats of strength; the Three Pedroes give a striking and novel gymnastic display; Mr. A. Cooke and Miss Ada Montgomery present a double act of daring horsemanship; Prince, the Blondin tiger, continues his tight-rope walk; and Coco and Chico and Carl North, in their clown interludes, keep the audience in roars of laughter.

FILM GOSSIP.

Charles Urban Trading Co., Ltd.

THIS week the Urban Company is to be congratulated upon one of its greatest achievements—indeed, one of the greatest achievements in cinematography. We refer to the magnificent series of pictures of the Review by the King of the Home Fleet last Saturday.

THE pictures show the whole of the ships of the Fleet, manned and flag-bedecked, waiting for the supreme moment to herald the arrival of His Majesty. We witness a superb panorama of the huge armada in the Solent, and we are given views of the Admirals and staff, officers and crews, the passing of the Royal yacht, and the saluting operations. The deck of the Dreadnought presents an animated spectacle as the King and Queen and the Prince and Princess of Wales pass along the gangway, and the officers are presented to His Majesty. Other scenes como quickly before us—the Dreadnought steaming fifteen knots, the preparations for firing the big guns, the guns' crews entering the barbette, range-finding, record-breaking for rapidity of fire, and for hitting power, collecting the targets and hoisting them on the deck of the Dreadnought for exhibition to the Fleet, and a portrait of the King congratulating Admiral of the Fleet Sir John Fisher on the achievement of the ship, the guns, and the men.

THE LADY GODIVA PAGEANT AT COVENTRY.—The Urban Company secured advantageous positions along the line of route of the Lady Godiva pageant at Coventry on Wednesday, and the results of the operators' work were much admired at the Alhambra on Thursday evening. One begins to wonder where the ingenuity and enterprise of the Urban Company will not lead them.

"URBAN Bioscopes and Animated Picture Accessories." This is the title of a handsomely got-up little booklet, which contains illustrations and prices of Urban Bioscope cameras, special lenses, film perforators, printing machines, developing frames and troughs, film-winders, lanterns, arc-lamps, electric switches, projectors, and, in fact, the most complete outfit anyone showing animated pictures, either publicly or privately, could desire. There are sixty-eight pages of what may be termed photographic educational matter, and no manager or showman should be without it.

Pathé Frères.

"PROLIFIC in ideas and energetic in the carrying out of them" might appropriately enough be the motto of the Pathé Company. This week there are seven new films to speak about. Perhaps the most amusing is "The Rival Sisters." Two women, one young and pretty and the other of a doubtful age and doubtful appearance, fall in love with the same man. The parents in France practically arrange the marriage of their children, and the parents of the girl decide that the young man must wed the elder daughter. He, of course, is very much disinclined to do anything of the sort, as he is genuinely in love with the younger girl. He leaves a note outside her window, saying that he will have a motor ready at a certain time, and will take her away with him. The elder sister gets the note, and, attiring herself in motor garb and hiding her features behind veils, she allows herself to be lovingly carried off. He gives her all the kind attention that a lover should, but is very much disgusted when, at a restaurant, she removes her veil and discloses her identity. Furiously he drives her back home and claims the real sweetheart.

TRAVELLING IN SWITZERLAND brings before us many beautiful and picturesque scenes of the land of the snow-clad Alps, and the series is not only extremely attractive and interesting, but also has its instructive side. "The Children's Reformatory" is another Pathé success. It throws a sidelight on the life history of a boy who loves his mother, steals a loaf of bread, is sent to a reformatory, is badly treated there, escapes, and is finally taken charge of by a kind-hearted old gentleman, who finds the lad a home in his own house and educates him. The dissolving portrait of the boy's mother set in the general scheme of pictures is realistically ghostly.

MESSRS. PATHE are also to be congratulated on a clever trick film, "The Cigar Box," which shows a handsomely-chased gilt receptacle for cigars, the lid of which disappears mysteriously, and then fall back the hexagonal sides of the box. Five cigars are seen, and these are suddenly transformed into girls who dance bewitchingly before us. The box opens and shuts, reopens and shuts again, with similar results, the figures being most artistically and beautifully coloured. "The Robber Robbed" shows how a thief entered a gentleman's rooms, undressed himself with a view to putting on better clothes which he saw lying about, placed his watch on the table during these preparations, hid himself under a mattress on hearing someone enter, and had the great discomfiture to find, when the visitor had departed, that he was also of the light-fingered class, and had removed the clothes and watch of burglar No. 1. How the latter is arrested and dragged through the streets in a sack forms an intensely laughable picture. Other capital Pathé productions are "The Half-Caste's Revenge," a tragic story, and "The Lost Umbrella," a comic item.

Vitagraph Company.

THIS firm promise some good things for next week, and among their forthcoming works will be an exceptionally fine production which has been obtained with great difficulty.

THE Liverpool Empire on Wednesday night showed an excellent film of the grand pageant which has for several days taken place in the city, commemorative of the granting of the Charter in 1207.

Walturdaw Company.

COVENTRY PAGEANT AND NAVAL REVIEW.—This firm has been fortunate in securing a particularly good series of photographs of the Coventry Pageant, with some close pictures of La Milo as Lady Godiva. We saw this film yesterday, and can commend it to the notice of our readers. Messrs. Walturdaw were also represented at the Naval Review, and on Monday at the Palace exhibited photographic panoramas of the Fleet, with large views of the individual ships of the larger size. The pictures of the Dreadnought are really admirable, as they show every part of the huge vessel that could be seen from a launch which made a détour round the sides of the man-o'-war.

THE Walturdaw Company are now pretty well "at home" in their additional premises, and we are informed that it is their intention to take pictures of every event of topical interest.

AMUSEMENTS IN SOUTH AFRICA.

CAPE TOWN, July 3.—Opera House.—Lessees, Messrs. B. and F. Wheeler; Sub-Lessees and Manager, B. and F. Wheeler, Ltd.; Business-Manager, Mr. A. Wyburd.—On Monday Mrs. Brown Potter's company presented Camille here. As Camille Mrs. Potter gave another striking proof of her talent; Mr. C. A. Daly was very satisfactory as M. Duval; Mr. Herbert Maule and Mr. Harold Carfax were admirable as Gaston Kieux and Comte de Varville; and Miss Louie Emery was efficient as Mme. Prudence; Miss Price Owen made a dainty and discreet Nanie. The remainder of the cast was carefully selected. The dressing and mounting were excellent. On Independence Night, July 4, Mrs. Brown Potter presented Charlotte Corday, by command and in the presence of His Excellency the Governor and suite, the American Consul, Mr. Lay, and staff.

CAPE TOWN, July 10. — Opera House (Sole Lessees, Messrs. B. and F. Wheeler; Sub-Lessees and Manager, B. and F. Wheeler, Ltd.; Business-Manager, Mr. A. Wyburd). — Mrs. Brown-Potter and her company produced Sheridan's School for Scandal on Monday. The change from tragedy to comedy well illustrates the versatile nature of Mrs. Potter's genius, and as Lady Teazle she scored a triumph. The Charles Surface of Mr. Esme Percy was most convincing; Mr. J. J. Daly made a very capable Sir Peter Teazle; Mr. Charles Doran was admirable as the smooth-tongued Joseph Surface; Mr. A. G. Poulton as Sir Oliver Surface took the part to the life; and Mr. Herbert Maule as Sir Benjamin Backbite, Mr. F. Trumper as Sir Harry Bumper, and Mr. C. T. Doe as Crabtree were all good. Miss Louie Emery as Lady Sneerwell and Miss Price Owen as Mrs. Candour were admirable.

Tivoli Theatre of Varieties (Lessees, The Empire Theatre, S.A., Ltd.; Manager, Mr. Albert Hyman).—The leading feature of the bill this week is the much-discussed statuary artist Miss Irma Lorraine, in a series of artistic reproductions of the world's most famous masterpieces. Another prominent item in the evening's entertainment is the extraordinary clever turn of the Cole De Losse Duo, who give an exhibition of daring and interesting humorous slack-wire feats. Miss Dolly Harmer sings a number of songs with a catchy chorus, and was deservedly encored. Mr. Marriott Edgar, the man in red, is an old favourite here, and his various songs were received with applause. Miss Millie Williams, a chic comedienne, sings several songs in a pleasing manner, and does some dainty dancing. Miss Selma Braatz, the clever lady juggler, continues to delight; and Les Romanis again create hearty applause with their novel musical act. Miss Violet Grazia sings several new and pleasing ballads; and the Tivoliscope, with new pictures, concludes a programme of all-round excellence.

JOHANNESBURG, July 10. — His Majesty's Theatre (Lessees, Messrs. B. and F. Wheeler; Sub-Lessees and Manager, B. and F. Wheeler, Ltd.; Business-Manager, Mr. P. F. Thompson).—On Monday, July 8, the Wood-Williamson Dramatic Company presented The Silver King to a large and enthusiastic audience. Mr. Alfred Woods gave a powerful representation of Wilfred Denver, his acting being very realistic. Miss Maud Williamson as Nelly Denver gave an admirable representation of the part. Mr. Julius Royston as Daniel Jaikes, the faithful old retainer, supplied one of the most convincing pieces of acting in the play. Mr. Horace Hunter was excellent as Spider, the gentleman villain; Mr. Hilton Warde was a capital Corkett; Mr. George Thorne was sufficiently suave as Eliah Coombe; and Mr. George Capper and Mr. J. C. Morris were excellent as the Detective and Geoffrey Ware. A word of praise is due to the clever acting of Miss Kate Nathan and Master Pitt as Wilfred Denver's children.

Empire Palace (Proprietor, The Empire Theatre, S.A., Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Edgar Hyman).—The new company which was introduced to the large audience at the above handsome and commodious theatre of varieties on the 9th inst. included Fred Niblo, described simply as a humorist, who kept the house in a roar of laughter; another notable turn was Grey and McCarty, comedy acrobats, who give a decidedly new and quaint exhibition of knockabout dancing; Miss Josephine Cohan, a dainty American comedienne, contributes pretty songs and dances; Billy Hobbs, coon artist and dancer, furnished an excellent entertainment; Miss Billy Millard, a dashing soubrette, sang several songs with ability; La Sylphe created roars of applause with her bewildering and beautiful dances; Holden Mannikins, in an entirely new show, earned a hearty reception; Newhouse and Ward, comedians and cyclists, introduced a good deal of new and humorous business; the Jagos contributed an eccentric sketch; and the Bioscope concluded the evening's entertainment.

DURBAN, July 10.—Theatre Royal (Sole Lessees and Managers, Messrs. B. and F. Wheeler).—Messrs. Wheeler's new musical comedy company produced on Monday, for the first time in Durban, the Oriental opera The Blue Moon, and the large audience testified ample appreciation. Messrs. Wheeler's artists are new to Durban, but they display considerable ability. The Oma of Miss Mamie Brickwell was excellent, both histrionically and vocally; Miss Lottie Sargent made a vivacious and dainty Millicent Lerony; and Miss Mabel Medrow was an imposing and fascinating Lady Brabashan. Mr. Tim Ryley gave an eminently clever portrayal of the genial and humorously brusque Major Vivian Callabone; Mr. Frank Greene made a handsome and dashing Captain Jack Ormsby, his excellent baritone being heard to distinct advantage; Mr. Alfred Leslie as Bobby Scott filled his part admirably, and was ably supported by Miss Alice Pollard as Evelyn Ormsby. An intensely humorous Private Charles Taylor was Mr. Edward D'Arcy; and the stolidity of Mooray was well brought out by Mr. Arthur Laceby, who adds greatly to the success achieved.

I regret to record the death of Mme. Victor, who passed away at Bloemfontein on the 9th inst. She was well known to the public as Mme. Rezzini, slack wire performer, from Cook, Fillis, and Texas Jack's circus.

Mr. Leonard Rayne's new London dramatic company opens by arrangement with Messrs. B. and F. Wheeler at His Majesty's Theatre, Johannesburg, on the 22nd inst., with Hall Caine's Bondman.

Indispensable! Rayne's "Pocket Date Book." Contents: Map (19in. by 10in.), showing the distance betwixt the various music halls at a glance. Will tell if one hall is within the barring radius of the other, thus saving fears, worry, and anxiety. All about artists' luggage, list of clubs, information about stamping contracts, foreign money table, London music halls and theatres, their telephone numbers, list of brougham proprietors, list and address of photographers, size of theatrical printing paper, names and addresses of theatrical railway managers, &c. Price 1s., post free. The proceeds from the sale will be divided equally amongst the two great charities of the dramatic and musical professions, the Actors' Benevolent Fund and the Music Hall Benevolent Fund. One of the most wonderful effects of imagination ever evolved. The central figure is of course Prince Rimanez, and in the hands of Mr. Edward Neville all the varying shades of sarcasm, bitterness, evil, and, at times, tenderness, of this weird yet exquisitely fascinating character are wonderfully and most effectively portrayed. The scene with the Prince at the organ was very fine, and the audience would willingly have had more of this. . . . Lady Sybil Elton, so held in the thrall of Lucifer, was exceedingly well rendered by Miss Rosie Neville.—Glasgow Times, Aug. 6.

PLAYERS OF THE PERIOD.

FIFTY YEARS OF THE DRAMA.

Kind expressions from Authors and Managers.

SIR SQUIRE BANCROFT.
"I congratulate you on your 'Fifty Years of the Drama': the list must prove both interesting and useful to lovers of and workers for the stage."

MR. GEORGE EDWARDES.
"I think the new feature of The Era is most interesting and useful. A list of plays produced from 1850 to 1900 will certainly be of great service to a very large number of your readers."

MR. EDWARD TERRY.
"An admirable idea, and will prove a most valuable record."

MR. FRANK CURZON.
"Your list, I think, will be most useful for reference."

MRS. W. K. CLIFFORD.
"I think the list will be immensely useful."

MR. SYDNEY GRUNDY.
"Your list will be exceedingly useful. But, of course, there is no reason why old titles should not be used again. Indeed, some day we shall have to go back to them. Some of our modern titles, when they are not mere proper names with an adjective attached, display the desperation of the dramatist in too ludicrous a light. Such a title as 'The Importance of Being Earnest' amounts to a misdemeanour."

MR. ARTHUR W. PINERO.
"The list of plays produced during the last half-century is a most valuable record. The thanks of those interested in the theatre are due to The Era for this and many other enterprises."

MR. ALFRED SUTRO.
"The list you are compiling will be of very great benefit, and I am looking forward to the time when it shall be complete, and obtainable in pamphlet form."

MR. ARTHUR BOURCHIER.
"Mr. Arthur Bourchier thinks the list very useful indeed."

MR. JUSTIN HUNTLY McCARTHY.
"I have watched with the greatest interest the progress of your alphabetical list of the plays published during the last half of the nineteenth century. It is a most useful undertaking, and when it appears in volume form it must prove of great value to all who are concerned with the drama."

MR. ISRAEL ZANGWILL.
"The list of plays will be very interesting and useful when published in complete form. The etiquette of the profession apparently still allows of novelists' titles being used by playwrights. Thus, The Master, which will appear in your list as a play by somebody else, is the name of a book of mine; while the new play, Noah's Ark, has the same title as a shorter story of mine."

MR. ARTHUR LAW.
"The publication in The Era of a list of plays produced during the fifty years, 1850-1900, is an excellent idea, and will be most useful to authors who may be in doubt as to their right to a certain title. When it is issued in book form I shall be very glad to possess a copy."

MR. TOM GALLON.
"Your idea seems to me to be a most excellent one. Quite apart from the fact that there is always a difficulty in knowing what titles have been used, there very often arises the question of when and where a play was actually produced—a question difficult to be answered. Actors and authors should alike be grateful to The Era."

MR. HAROLD MONTAGUE.
"I think the idea of printing a list of plays produced during the last fifty years an excellent one. It should be of great value to authors."

MR. ARTHUR SHIRLEY.
"The list of produced plays was not merely a happy thought, for the same idea has probably occurred to many, though until The Era carried it out no one took the pains to collect and publish such a truly valuable record.
"Managers, dramatists, as well as would-be authors, will henceforward have a long list of titles to refer to, and there will be neither reason nor excuse for encroaching on pre-existing copyright in play titles. What a lot of trouble it should save us all!"

MR. WALTER MELVILLE.
"I think it shows great enterprise on the part of your journal, and likely to prove most useful and at the same time interesting to the general profession."

MR. ARTHUR MORRISON.
"The list you are publishing will be a most valuable work of reference to everybody taking an interest in the stage, and I have no doubt that when it is published as a book you will find its success warrant you in issuing fresh editions from time to time, with the information brought to date in each case."

MR. J. J. DILLEY.
"The idea is an excellent one, and there can be no question at all of the usefulness of such a summary."

MR. COSMO HAMILTON.
"I think that your new feature is an excellent and most useful one. A list of plays produced during fifty years is interesting not only to the playgoer, but essentially so to the manager and the playwright. They will only have to consult it to be sure that a title has not been used before."

MR. CHARLES H. E. BROOKFIELD.
"My attention has been called to your list of plays produced between 1850-1900. I have no doubt it will prove interesting and useful to many."

MR. F. FRANKFORT MOORE.
"The list of plays produced during the past fifty years, now appearing in The Era, will, I am certain, prove, when completed, extremely valuable to everyone associated with the drama in England. I am convinced—and I have had a considerable amount of experience in this direction—that it will be especially valued by all writers upon stage matters. The advantage of being able to refer at a moment's notice to the criticisms upon the production of various plays in various newspapers must be apparent to everyone. If such a list had been in existence some years ago I would have been saved a vast amount of worry and vexation of spirit. The Era has once again proved itself appreciative of the conditions under which the best interests of the drama in England are maintained."

MR. LOUIS N. PARKER.
"I think your list of plays, produced between 1850 and 1900, will, like the other contents of your paper, be invaluable."

RE APPLICATIONS FOR ENGAGEMENTS

All applications by either Artists or their Agents must be made to the Head Office.

Lowest terms must be stated, and distinction made between salaries required for larger and smaller towns.

Vacant dates should be stated. If a list of existing bookings be sent, it will render selection easier.

Artists employing Agents should accredit one only at one time, as the friction arising when several Agents are employed at the same time, all expecting the one booking to go through each of them, often renders it expedient to avoid that booking altogether rather than give undeserved offence to several Agents.

New Acts seeking Engagements, or turns not rebooked (possibly because they have played a series of dates without introducing new business), will facilitate matters by having their acts seen by our District Managers. Their Districts and Postal Addresses are as follow:—

EDINBURGH, GLASGOW, NEWCASTLE, AND DISTRICT.
MR. S. GETHING,
Empire Theatre, Glasgow.

LEEDS, SHEFFIELD, HULL, BRADFORD, AND DISTRICT.
MR. T. GERALD MORTON,

BIRMINGHAM, NOTTINGHAM, LEICESTER, AND DISTRICT.

Empire Theatre, Nottingham.

LIVERPOOL, MANCHESTER, AND DISTRICT.
MR. ALBERT BULMER,

LONDON DISTRICT.
MR. WILLIAM COLLINS,
The Empire, Shepherd's Bush, W.

N.B.—Mr. OSWALD STOLL or Mr. FRANK ALLEN can be seen by appointment on all matters arising out of the above, and for the discussion of entirely new Numbers.

All Artists or Agents who communicate with our District Representatives must have made definite applications, in accordance with above directions, to the Head Office, at the same time, or just previously.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1907.
To anyone connected with the stage, from the call-boy to the "star," and from the electrician to the manager, the "Era Annual" makes an appeal which it is very hard to resist. The number of stories and anecdotes contributed by well-known members of the theatrical profession are always bright, breezy, and fresh, and, as usual, the photographs are excellently reproduced. The calendar is arranged so as to give an interesting theatrical event, with the year of occurrence, for every day in the year. The tables of plays produced at the various London and provincial theatres provide an interesting story of successes and failures, and in every respect the Annual for 1907 is well up to the usual standard. It is published at one shilling by "The Era," at 5, Tavistock-street, London.—Dublin Express, Jan. 26.

THE LAW OF COPYRIGHT FOR ACTOR AND COMPOSER,
BY
ALBERT A. STRONG, LL.B. (Lond.).

Mr. A. A. Strong has published a book on "The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer," which should be in the hands of everyone who is obliged to know about this perplexing subject. Dramatic copyright in England is in a particularly unsatisfactory state, and it is much to be hoped that ere long some more rational method of securing protection for a play may be devised than the slovenly and sometimes costly "production for copyright purposes," which is at present required.—St. James's Gazette.

THIS WEEK'S NOVELTIES.

THE LOST UMBRELLA. Code Word CONCERT.

Tipkins starts off with his umbrella up. A sudden wind rises, dashes it out of his hand, and away it flies, Tipkins after it—up trees, on walls, and in all manner of ways does he try to lay hold of his umbrella. The wind drops; he gets his umbrella in his hand, when it rises again, and up they go together, to say nothing of sundry hangers-on. Screamingly funny.

297ft. The Subject, £4 19s.

A HALF-CASTE'S REVENGE. Code Word, COLZA.

Thrilling, daring, fascinating. A half-caste's love for a farm girl, and hate for his master, leads him to be whipped by his master. This causes him to seek him out and fatally wound him, but not before his master has fired on him. All the farm hands, finding their master's horse returning without him, track him and find him very much hurt. They then give chase and frighten the poor half-caste terribly. He is eventually killed by a mine exploding and part of it falling on him. Do not miss this film; it is A 1.

362ft. The Subject, £6 0s. 8d.

A ROBBER ROBBED. Code Word, COLOMBE.

An amusing story of one robber entering a house, gathering all valuables carefully up together. Aroused by another, he hides. The first takes possession of the goods, and succeeds in getting off, while the poor original thief is seized and marched off.

398ft. The Subject, £6 12s.

THE CIGAR BOX. Code Word, BURETTE.

Very pretty girls, each more beautiful than the last, step out of a cigar box one by one and dance and move about most gracefully.

A CHILDREN'S REFORMATORY. Code Word,

Pathetic scenes of a little boy, having lost his mother, obliged to go to a reformatory. Descriptive scenes of the lives these poor mites spend. Very interesting.

757ft. The Subject, £12 12s. Colouring, £1 12s.

A TRIP TO SWITZERLAND. Code Word, CHOC.

Glorious route, starting from St. Gervais, through snow-covered scenery, snow-tipped heights, cascades, chalets, and mountains everywhere. There is a big snowstorm, a snow battle, horse sleighs, tobogganists, etc., the most celebrated mountain peaks, the Midi, and the famous Mont Blanc. Simply delightful from beginning to end.

740ft. The Subject, £12 6s. 8d.

RIVAL SISTERS. Code Word, COING.

The elder sister, plain and uninteresting, is jealous of her young sister, who is in love with a gallant young man. The father insists upon the young man marrying the elder. This the lover will not have at any price, so decides to run away with his love in a motor. Unfortunately, he gets the elder one in the car. Exciting episodes take place, but all arranges itself very nicely indeed, as you will see by purchasing this splendid film.

495ft. The Subject, £8 5s.

FOUR PENCE per foot nett.

A HOT WEATHER "COMIC."

FATHER'S QUIET SUNDAY.

COPYRIGHT 1907 BY THE VITAGRAPH COMPANY OF AMERICA.

Father is tired out—had a hard week—decides to rest all day Sunday—lies down—boys out in back yard get up a tin pan parade—the hired girl chops wood and a piece flies through the window—Pa's daughters enjoy themselves—one plays the piano and sings—the other plays the phonograph and it sings—then father sings—every time he gets quiet something disturbs him. Finally, just when he is on the verge of collapse, four of his boon companions arrive and start up a poker game in the next room—this is too much for father—he forgets all about wanting to sleep and gets into the game without delay. A FIRST-CLASS COMEDY FILM.

POOR OLD ENGLISH DRAMA!

A vigorous attack on the English drama is made in the current number of the North American Review by Mr. Henry A. Beers, Professor of English Literature at Yale University. In the course of his diatribe Mr. Beers declares that "about 2,400 plays were put on at London theatres between 1830 and 1900, and it would be hard to pick out a dozen of them which have become a part of English literature." Next to the French theatre, he goes on to say, "the most abundant feeder of our modern stage has been contemporary fiction. Nowadays every successful novel is immediately dramatised. This has been the case more or less for three-quarters of a century. The Waverley Novels were dramatised in their time, and Dickens' stories in theirs. The dramatised novel seldom means a good play, this is to say permanently good, though it may act fairly well for a season. One does not care to read the stage version of 'Vanity Fair,' known as Becky Sharp, no more than one would care to read The School for Scandal diluted into a novel. The dramatist conceives and moulds his theme otherwise than the novelist. 'Play-writing,' says Walter Scott, 'is the art of forming situations.'

"The poverty of the English stage during these late centuries in work of real substance and value is the more striking because there has been no dearth of genius in other departments. There have been great English poets, novelists, humorists, essayists, critics, historians. France has never lacked dramatists. Talent always, and genius not unfrequently, have been in the service of the French theatres. In Germany the case has been the same, and this is because both the Germans and the French have taken the theatre seriously. Their actors have been carefully trained, and their audiences intelligently critical; their playhouses in part maintained by the Government subventions as institutions importantly related to the national life.

"It is not that English men of letters have been unwilling to contribute to the stage. On the contrary, they have shown an eager, although mostly ineffectual, ambition for dramatic honours. In the eighteenth century it was wellnigh the rule that a successful writer should try his hand at a play. Addison did so, and Steele, Pope, Gay, Fielding, Johnson, Goldsmith, Smollett, Thomson, Mason, Mallet, Chatterton, and many others who had no natural turn for it, and would not think of such a thing now. In the nineteenth century the tradition had lost much of its force; still, we find Scott, Coleridge, Byron, Shelley, Tennyson, Thackeray, Browning, Matthew Arnold, Swinburne, all using the dramatic form, and some of them attempting the stage. Charles Lamb, one of the most ardent of playgoers and best of dramatic critics, was greatly chagrined by the failure of his farce, Mrs. H——. Dickens was a good actor in private theatricals, and was intensely concerned with the theatre and the theatrical fortunes of his own dramatised novels. So was Charles Reade, who collaborated with Tom Taylor in a number of plays, and whose theatre-piece, Masks and Faces, was the original of his novelette, "Peg Woffington"—vice versa the usual case. More recently we have seen Stevenson and Henley collaborating in three plays, Deacon Brodie and Beau Austin, performed at London and Montreal in 1884-87, and Admiral Guinea, shown at the Haymarket in 1890; the first and third, low-life melodrama and broad comedy, of some vigour but no great importance; the second, an unusually good eighteenth-century society play. Most certainly these experiments do not rank with Stevenson's romances or Henley's poems. Another curious illustration of the attraction of the dramatic form for the literary mind is Thomas Hardy's The Dynasts (1904), a drama of the Napoleonic wars, projected in nineteen acts, with choruses of spirits and personified abstractions; a sort of reversion to the class of morality and chronicle play exemplified in Bale's King John. Mr. Hardy is perhaps the foremost living English novelist, but The Dynasts is a dramatic monster, and, happily, a torso."

Mr. Beers divulges what he considers is the secret of stage success. It lies, he thinks, "in simplicity and directness of construction, unrelaxing tension, quick movement, and an instinctive seizure of the essentially dramatic crises in the action. In a word, the thing has 'go'; lacking which, no cleverness of dialogue, no epigrammatic sharpness of wit or delicate play of humour can save a comedy; and no beauty of style, no depth or reach of thought, a tragedy. Hence it is pertinent to remark how many popular playwrights have been actors or in close practical relations with the theatre. In the seventeenth century this was a matter of course. Shakespeare was an actor, and Molière and Jonson and Marlow and Greene and Otway, and countless others. Cibber was an actor and stage-manager. Sheridan and both Colmans were managers. Garrick and Foote wrote plays as well as acted them. Knowles, Boucicault, Robertson, Pinero, and Stephen Phillips have all been actors. Conceded that this professional point of view has been rightly emphasised, yet before the acted drama can rank as literature, or even hope to hold possession of the stage itself for more than a season, it must stand a further test. It must read well too. If it is no more than an after-dinner amusement, without intellectual meaning or vital relation to life; if it has neither strength nor truth nor beauty as a criticism of life, or an imaginative representation of life, what interest can it have for serious people? Let us stay at home and read our Thackeray."

MR. EDMUND TEARLE and a talented company are at the Lyceum Theatre, Stafford, for six nights, presenting The Three Musketeers, Othello, Ingomar, Julius Cæsar, and Hamlet. Mr. Tearle, who had a flattering reception, performs the principal parts of each drama, and is ably supported by Miss Kate Clinton. The company includes Mr. V. Crabtree, Mr. E. Gragan, Mr. W. J. Meller, and Miss Esther Tearle.

PROVINCIAL THEATRICALS.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENTS.)

ABERDEEN.—His Majesty's Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr. Robert Arthur; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Adair Nelson.—The Drama of Life is played this week by a powerful all-round company. Mr. Algernon J. Hicks ably takes the hero part of Harry Beech; Mr. Edmund Hamilton makes a first-rate villain as Walter Beech; and Miss Kate Hallam plays artistically the difficult part of Sylvia Beech. Miss Amy Ross-Clyde achieves success by her portraiture of Betty Black; Miss Marie Ramus gives a clever presentation of Lady Lane Wilde; Mr. J. B. Dawson is exceedingly amusing as the amateur detective; and Miss Cissie Carter personates Master Robert Beech charmingly. All the other parts are well filled.

Palace Theatre.—Lessees, The United Company Theatres, Ltd.—Manager, Mr. Walter Gilbert.—The most interesting engagement this week is that of Miss Dot Stephens, a lady possessed of a very fine voice, which she uses to the best advantage. This clever and winsome young actress also accompanies herself on the piano, and her efforts are rewarded deservedly with the unstinted applause of the audiences. The Maritana Operatic company on Monday gave a most enjoyable rendering of the piece from which they take their name. The principals, who all have an enthusiastic reception, are Miss Evelyn De Lara (soprano), Mr. Albert Chapman (baritone), Miss Elsie Weston (contralto), and Mr. Frank Pemberton, the director of the company (tenor). In every respect the opera was delightfully presented. Among the other clever turns are those of Mersano, with his marvellously smart coin and card tricks; Griff, assisted by George, in an amusing "hoop" act; Chameleon, a bewilderingly clever quick-change artist; and Mr. R. A. Speedwell, a really gifted lightning portrait painter and a remarkably fine colourist. The Bioscope series, A Struggle for Life, proves highly interesting. The company all round is the strongest that has appeared at this theatre for a very long time.

Beach Pavilion.—Proprietor, Mr. David Thomson.—Mr. Thomson varies his programme most agreeably from week to week by an almost entire change of business and the engagement of other artists. Among the newcomers this week are the famous violinist, Scott-Skinner, who is rapturously applauded, and Mr. George Park, a local baritone vocalist of note. As usual, Miss Minnie Osborne and Mr. Oswald Gray have to respond to numerous encores; while Mr. Thomson and Mr. Jack Belton are equally successful in supplying the humorous element. The chorus contributes some excellent work, particularly at the opening with "Coonville's cullud band."

ABERTILLERY.—Theatre Metropole.—Lessees, Messrs. Carlton and Duckworth; Resident-Manager, Mr. Geo. W. Ventom.—Messrs. Pitt and Halling's company is here this week in a splendid representation of £1000 Reward. Mr. Cartage Caldcleugh is very good as Ivan Bardoff; and the comedy element is ably sustained by Mr. E. Hall Elden as Bertie Scribbles, Mr. E. Kendrick as Peter Popples, and Miss Ada Mackay as Katerina Kloss. Miss Cissie Bellamy plays the part of Roma Pauloff with commendable ability; and as Lota Kalnovky Miss Trixie Leighton is all that could be desired. Good houses have been the rule during the week.

COVENTRY.—THE OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietor, Mr. W. Bennett.—At the World's Mercy, a comedy drama, is one of those pieces which always commands a good house, and this week is no exception. Miss C. DEWSBURY.—Theatre Royal.—Lessees, The Northern Theatres Co., Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. J. H. Asquith.—Mr. Walter Howard's drama, Her Love Against the World, is presented here. The manly attributes of the hero, Eric, Earl of Strathmere, are finely limned by Mr. Walter Howard, whose physique and personality command admiration. He bears the brunt of the battle, and carries his audience in the hollow of his hand; Miss Grace Heywood bestows dignity and stateliness of action and mien in her rôle of the much-harassed Iris, Princess of Idalia, and her voice has a sympathetic inflection in complete harmony with the lines she speaks so well; Mr. Mayor-Cooke illuminates his part of Ulric, Prince of Ravensburg, conveying certain lights and shades of character; not less forcefully depicted is the character of Prince Othmar by Mr. Ronald Baynes. Miss Rosie St. John requires a special word of praise for her acting as the gentle, delicate, yet lion-hearted Nello, distinguishing for herself the infinite earnestness and consideration minutely visible in her exposition; Miss Evelyn Hope, as a female Machiavel behind the scenes, in the rôle of Shulah acquitted herself with convincing ease and effectiveness. The humorous antidote provided by the joint exertions of Miss Lizzie Lennon and Miss Hettie Ferguson as Katinka and Gretchen, and of Messrs. H. B. Lewis and J. Fulton Millar (Heinrich and Fritz Pimpernickle) caused no lack of laughter, much of which was loud and long. The topsy-turviness and labyrinthian tangle of the love affairs of the quartette is a facetious idea drolly worked out. The characterisation of the irascible, nevertheless leonine old veteran, General Gessler, as represented by Mr. Richard Webb, was as effective as it was conceived.

G. Mason; and Mr. E. Mr. Dickie Clare takes the triple parts of Silas Slim, the detective, the "darling" judge, and the French waiter. He is quite at home in each part, and as the judge especially creates roars of laughter. Mr. T. W. Benson makes a first-class barrister as Peter Pettitoe. LONDON & SUBURBAN THEATRES.

KING'S THEATRE, HAMMERSMITH.

On Monday, Aug. 12, the Drama, by Frederick Melville, entitled
"HER ROAD TO RUIN."

The average playgoer can invariably depend upon it that in a Melville play he gets plenty for his money. The plays are thoroughly effective, if at times improbable; the characters are always broadly drawn, and are either thoroughly good or ADD thoroughly bad; the sensational incidents cleverly worked up; and of comic relief there is an abundance. Given all these characteristics, it is no wonder that of all dramas now on the road the Melville répertoire is the most attractive and, what is more important, the most profitable. The aspect of the capacious King's Theatre bore good proof on Monday evening, the more popular parts of the house being packed. Her Road to Ruin was excellently received, the curtain calls being very numerous. Mr. Robert interprets the part of Frank Temple in manly fashion, and distinctly scores in his utterances and views on Christianity; as Tom Wells, the struggling journalist, Mr. J. Knox Orde is admirable; and Mr. Wm. Lynton is an efficient Mr. Derwent, the solicitor. The out-and-out rascality of Philip Hardy is rendered by Mr. Alex Bradley with complete success, his bearing in the most compromising of situations being delightfully cool; Mr. Wm. Brooke is a capable Inspector Homewood; Bill Grimes is well played by Mr. Thomas Henry; the Bishop is undertaken by Mr. Dane Clarke with exceedingly good effect; as Dickey Gerald, Mr. F. C. Brooke provides excellent fun, which is universally appreciated; Mr. Victor R. C. Moors' services are of real use as Charles Cholmondeley; Jess Willoughby gives Miss Eva Moss splendid opportunities for some impassioned acting, and she does not fail to take advantage of them, the result being complete success for her. A very dainty impersonation of May Willoughby is given by Miss Alice Bowes, who gains deserved approval; Miss Nellie Bonser as Mary Dawson, the girl from Lancashire, acts with power and expression, and earns great praise; a Hammersmith favourite is Miss Marie Wright, and it is needless to say that in her hands Jennie Crackling becomes one of the hits of the piece. The new scenery by Mr. H. K. Brown was much admired. The orchestra at the King's is noted for its efficiency, and the present week's programme of music, consisting of selections from The Mikado, The Merry Widow, Coon-town Chimes, The Catch of the Season, and The Prince of Pilsen, is well played under the direction of Mr. Harry Richardson. We are pleased to see that affairs in front of the house are still looked after by Mr. Frank Carlyon, Mr. Mulholland's energetic and capable manager.

THE MARLBOROUGH.

On Monday, Aug. 12, the Musical Comedy,
"THE WHITE CHRYSANTHEMUM."

Although a great number of people are in the habit, and have been for some time, of stigmatising the taste for musical comedy as merely a passing dramatic fashion, the fashion is taking a considerable time to pass away, and is proved by the continued support of pieces which are no longer novelties. A case in point is the most successful return visit of Mr. Chas. Macdona's company in The White Chrysanthemum. It goes without saying that Mr. Macdona's company is excellent, the scenery artistic, the dresses strikingly handsome, and that the piece goes with a swing from start to finish. Miss Muriel George vocally and artistically is a conspicuous success. Her graceful bearing also makes her Sybil Cunningham a very charming little lady. Her greatest vocal success is "The butterfly and the flower." Miss Dorothy Sephton gives evidence of having had much experience by the way she plays Betty Kenyon, her numbers being tunefully and artistically rendered; Miss Rosa Sullivan's sprightly comedy methods and good stage presence suit well the rôle of Cornelia Vanderdecken; Mr. John T. MacCullum, as the stern father Admiral Armitage, gives a capital presentation; and Mr. Melville Florance, as Lieut. Reginald Armitage, his son, is a distinct success. He has a voice of excellent quality which he uses to the best advantage, his enunciation being very clear. Mr. Victor Kerr causes no end of laughter as his droll companion, Chippie, and is encored several times for his quaint rendering of "I wonder"; Mr. Jamie Dallas affords an example of perfect comedy as Private Perks; and from Mr. James Graydon, as the Chinese cook, Sin Chow, comes dry humour, quaintly given.

THE CAMDEN.

"IN HOLY (!) RUSSIA."

Mr. J. Rice Cassidy and company are appearing here this week in a stirring play of Russian life of to-day, entitled "In Holy (!) Russia. It deals with Nihilism, and there is a very interesting, and at times exciting, story unfolded, which is followed with breathless interest. Mrs. J. Rice Cassidy, a most accomplished actress, who fills the rôle of Rénee Rubinoff, draws a most interesting picture of the falsely-accused girl, who escapes from Siberia, and it is chiefly around Rénee's exploits that the story revolves. As the faithful and quick-witted Irish servant Mickey, Mr. J. Rice Cassidy finds ample scope for his talents, and causes endless laughter by his witty remarks and genial manner. Colonel Forrest, better known as Uncle Dick, the old English warrior, who finds himself so suddenly burdened with a wife, is capitally played by Mr. Arthur Stratton, whose breezy way is exactly fitted to the part. Mr. Frank Copeland is good as Sir Harry Beresford, and Mr. J. Cuthbertson gives a striking picture of the Chief of Police. Mr. Ralph Leslie presents a fine delineation of the Count Petroski, and Steragoff is played in an earnest and forceful manner by Mr. Carl Rovinelli. Miss Florence Creagh deserves special mention for her clever assumption of the character of Catska Lavotski, a spy in the pay of the police. The treacherous Michael Natolski is well portrayed by Mr. Frederick Lloyd, and various minor characters are in each case suitably filled. The play is mounted in the best fashion and with great care, and the scenery includes several very fine sets. Mr. J. Rice Cassidy has the whole production under his personal supervision.

CORONET THEATRE.

"THE FATAL WEDDING."

Mr. Bert Coote has presented The Fatal Wedding, by Theo. Kremer, for many years now, but, thanks to its many-sided nature and the excellence of the comic relief which brightens its melodramatic misery, it is likely to have many another anniversary. The variety business in Act III. is still going very strong, and considerable entertainment is derived from the following programme:—"Bridget" is sung by Hetty Kelly and chorus; Tom Grice, the youngest champion Lancashire clog dancer; "Apples," sung by Marie Wilson and chorus; Dot Jeffries, the well-known music-hall child artist, with "The Angel of My Dreams"; "Killarney," Miss Dorothy Pain; and "The Cake Walk in the Sky." Miss Marie Wilson also essays the rôle of Jessie, "the little mother," and gives a delightfully ingenuous and natural exposition of character. The part of the wealthy and weak-minded clubman, Mr. Howard Wilson, is capitally rendered by Mr. Cecil A. Melton. Mr. Henry W. Hatchman does well in the part of the insipid scoundrel, Robert Curtis, man about town and coiner. Mr. Charles Locke is exceedingly droll as Toto, the extraordinary French butler. Mr. Cyril Melton is distinctly good as the janitor of the tenement flats in New York; and Mr. Frank Ashley brings out the points well in the part of the tender-hearted "street god" O'Reilly, who must surely be a Scotsman! The part of the adventuress, Cora Williams, is painted in lurid tints and in most uncompromising fashion by Miss Gertrude Harrison. The part of the big-hearted, impudent cook, Bridget, is most laughably depicted by Miss Ethel Sarjeant; and the comic "business" between Bridget and Toto is very excellent fooling. Stedman's choir take part in the church scene in Act V. Mr. Percy Williams is business manager, Mr. Ernest Grant acting manager, and Mr. Cyril Melton is stage manager.

DALSTON THEATRE.

On Monday, Aug. 12, the Farcical Musical Comedy, entitled
"THE SANDOW GIRL."

Mr. Herbert Darnley's company are appearing at the Dalston Theatre in his farcical musical comedy, the music of which is composed by Mr. Dudley Powell, and entitled The Sandow Girl. The scenery does Mr. Francis H. Bull infinite credit. Miss Victoria Charlton appears as the Sandow Girl, and sings one or two duets with Mr. J. C. Graves (who plays Col. Klarter), and these vocal efforts take remarkably well. Mr. Graves's impersonation of the Colonel has distinctive merits, his eccentricities producing considerable laughter. Mr. Joseph Montague, as Higgins, a broker's man, is a source of considerable amusement, and his rendering of the songs, "It's the walking that does the trick" and "A little bit of resin for the bow," take very well. In this song Mr. Montague has a snack or two at the North London Railway. Mr. Frank Leanad, who plays Captain Karl, sings, in splendid style, "As long as a man's a man," and Miss Hilda Blanch, who plays Katarina, sings, "Just a word of kindness" in a way that secures her an encore. The piece is performed with all due regard to "go" and effect, and it forms one of those hilarious entertainments that are just the thing for the present spell of hot weather.

THE STANDARD.

"THE GIRL WHO LOST HER CHARACTER."

Mr. Walter Melville's play, The Girl Who Lost Her Character, is proving an attraction at the Standard this week. The drama is produced by Mr. Douglas Bruce's company, and the interpretation is worthy of warm praise. The scenic effects are good, and quite up to what might be expected in any of the pieces associated with Mr. Melville, whilst the staging leaves nothing to be desired. Mr. Charles Whitlock supplies a very effective portrayal of the Rev. Robert Everton, and discharges his duties with marked ability. As Jack England, the soldier hero, Mr. C. W. Standing is well to the fore. He plays with manly bearing and vigour throughout, and is a conspicuous success in the part. Humour of a broad character is supplied by Mr. Geo. H. Asquin as Dick Punch, every opportunity for fun being taken full advantage of. Mr. John Wilson is well placed as George Purvis; and Mr. Monson Thorpe is a very satisfactory Detective Weathersby. Mr. Frank Adair as Captain Geoffrey Caversham cleverly depicts the callous nature of the character, and plays throughout with his customary skill. Mr. Geo. Mitchell enacts with power and ability the part of James Sutton, a repentant forger. Miss Lydia Mannington ably portrays Marian Franklyn, a "London mystery"; and Miss Daisy Meynard is exceptionally well suited to the rôle of Isabella Jones. Miss Joan Ellis plays with charm as Rose Seymour, her performance showing decided ability. Much praise is due to Miss Ethel Bracewell for her powerful delineation of the title-rôle, Molly Vernon, her reading of an arduous part leaving nothing to be desired. The minor characters are adequately supported by other members of the company.

BROADWAY THEATRE, S.E.

On Monday, Aug. 12, the Drama, in Four Acts, by Frank Lindo, entitled
"HOME, SWEET HOME."

Messrs. Travis Green and Arthur Hinton's company are appearing here this week in Home, Sweet Home, and give an excellent interpretation of this interesting play. Mr. Arthur Hinton presents an excellent portrait of Stephen Armitage, the fisherman hero of the pretty story. Mr. Frank Hudspeth brings his ripe experience to bear on the character of David Armitage, and the result is a mellow and cheery performance. Mr. Arthur Lowey depicts the pride and sorrow of the Duke of Ancaster admirably. Mr. Victor Millard exactly realises the part of Hon. Percy Ashfield. Mr. Travis Green gives a clever and convincing representation of Lucas Lyle. Mr. W. Levarno as Solomon Keary, and Mr. John Campling as Dick Redmayne, do all that is possible with their respective parts. Mr. Henry Millow is good as Dr. Granby. Miss Constance Cluer plays Sal characteristically. Miss Lydia Audre is a stately and impressive Lady Summerton. Miss Maudie Merrick plays Sybil Fay in a bright and pleasing manner. Little Dolly Turner is a natural and pretty representative of Little Dora. Miss Leila Zillwood presents Joan as a gentle, sympathetic heroine, who soon becomes popular with the audience. The scenery is realistic, and the performance is carefully stage-managed. During the evening the excellent orchestra, directed so well by Mr. Herbert Sprake, plays some bright and catchy music, including a selection from Amasis.

THE CROWN, PECKHAM.

"THE SILVER KING."

Melodrama of the strongest type has for a long time ruled supreme at the Crown, and this week we have a choice dish in Mr. H. A. Jones' Silver King, which is considered by general opinion to be one of the best pieces of its kind ever written. The play has visited the Crown before, but its reception is as hearty as ever. Messrs. G. M. Polini and Austin Melford's company presents the play to the very best advantage. Mr. Fred D. Daviss gives a capital impersonation of Wilfred Denver, being especially fine in the wharf scene at the end of the fourth act. Miss Adah Barton gains the whole-hearted sympathy of the house for her pathetic delineation of the sorely-tried Nellie Denver. Mr. L. St. George Lowther makes a polished and duly cynical villain as Captain Herbert Skinner, alias the Spider; and the faithful Daniel Jaikes, a character rich both in humour and pathos, becomes a very convincing character portrait in the experienced hands of Mr. Edward J. George. That dreadful old reprobate, Elijah Coombe, is presented to the life by Mr. Arthur Wright, who stage manages the production; and the part of the more robust villain Cripps is well delineated by Mr. Frank Kingsley. Mr. Walter Anderson causes much amusement as the tipsy passenger; and Miss Flossie Hale Daviss displays marked ability as little Cissie Denver. Mr. George Belmore is excellent as Corket; and the detective, Sam Baxter, is smartly played by Mr. Byron Pedley. Miss Elizabeth Temple makes a good deal out of the rôle of Olive Skinner; and Mr. Edward Ouston, as Geoffrey Ware, well avails himself of his one chance in the first act. The other numerous characters are well played. The scenery and effects are quite adequate.

COUNTY THEATRE, KINGSTON.

On Monday, Aug. 12, the Musical Comedy, in Two Acts, by Fred Bowyer and W. E. Sprange, Music by John Cook, entitled
"THE NEW BARMAID."

Mr. Peter Davey, the managing-director of the Royal County Theatre, made a happy choice when he selected The New Barmaid for the bill of fare at the riverside theatre this week. It was not the first visit of the play, but the audience at Kingston gave it as hearty a welcome as when they first saw it. It was presented by Miss Violet Osmund's company, which included that popular comedian, Mr. Alexander Loftus. Miss Osmund plays the part of Dora Heathur, in which she proves herself an artist of considerable ability. Mr. Loftus appears as Bertie White, and sustains with much success the lion's share of the humour of the play. Mr. James Grant appears as William White, and contributes substantially to the low-comedy business. Mr. Charles Adeson makes a capable Mons. Bonsor; Miss Clara Beck is a charming Ethel Joy; and Mr. James Hawkins acquits himself well as Captain Lovebury. Other members of the company who deserve more than passing notice are Miss Grafton as Brenda Louth, Miss Mabel Harrison as Lady Moulton, and Mr. Frank Collins as Colonel Claymore. The Sisters Dorothy and Lily English dance themselves into the favour of the audience. The play is produced under the direction of Mr. Loftus, and Mr. E. W. Vaughan proved himself a capable chef d'orchestre.

KENNINGTON THEATRE.

"THE STILL ALARM."

Messrs. Glenville and Osmond's company are appearing at Kennington this week in Mr. Joseph Arthur's stirring play above named, in which the two beautiful trained horses "Pegasus" and "Bucephalus," and the greyhound "Laddie" are introduced. The scenery and effects, too, are particularly realistic, especially the set depicting The Central Fire Station, New York. Mr. Mathew H. Glenville, as the hero Jack Manley, earns the repeated plaudits of the audience, his manliness in face of adversity, coupled with his bravery as a fireman, appealing powerfully to all present. Side by side with Mr. Glenville's careful character study must be placed Mr. George Arthur's impersonation of the villain, John Bird, the repeated hissing from the gallery furnishing a testimony of his able management of a difficult part. Willie Manley, undertaken by Mr. Tom Beasley, arouses the merriment of the audience, particularly in his scenes with Carrie Wilber, his sweetheart. Mr. Fred Osmond, as the reprobate Doc Wilber, gives a careful sketch of the part; Mr. Lewis Gordon deserves much praise for his able interpretation of the rôle of Franklyn Fordham; Miss Frances Waring, as Elinor Fordham, plays effectively on the feelings of the house; Miss Jean Beresford, as Carrie Wilber, an "exponent of music-hall art," highly amused all present by her nonchalant way of dealing with her lover, Will Manley; Miss Mabel Veriton, in her character of Mrs. Manley, won high enconiums; Mr. Sutton Pateman gives a really clever impersonation of the part of Joe Jones, the typical New York Fireman, and succeeds in keeping the house vastly amused; Mr. Ernest Hamilton is seen to great advantage as Jenkins, his conception of the rôle being particularly fine, as are also those of Mr. Henry Smith and Mr. George Owens, as Hal Sleeper and Charlie White; Mr. Frank Wilson, as the Messenger Boy, is praiseworthy; and Messrs. Edwards, Tudnor, Johnson, Francis, and Varney all proved able firemen. The Central Brigade Quartette are in perfect form in their well harmonised part-songs.

ELEPHANT AND CASTLE THEATRE.

On Monday, Aug. 12, the Drama,
by Dion Boucicault, entitled
"THE STREETS OF LONDON."

A strong attraction is provided here this week in the above-named drama. As Gideon Hardman, the scheming banker, Mr. Ellis J. Preston plays with determination, taking full advantage of the many strong situations offered by this fine character; Mr. E. J. Waller, in the small but important character of Captain Fairweather, gives a typical representation of a bluff, kind-hearted old sea captain; Mr. Chas. A. East, as Badger, acts in his usual brilliant manner, quickly finding much favour; Mr. Edgar Coyne is easy as Paul Fairweather; and Mr. Teddy Coleman is responsible for an amusing character study of Mr. Puffy. Miss Blanche Stanley, as Mrs. Puffy, plays in a sympathetic manner; and Miss Katherine Clarke is a natural Lucy Fairweather. In the difficult character of Alida Hardman Miss Mildred Cottell is seen to advantage. Other minor characters are in safe hands. The drama is well staged, the fire scene in Act IV. being particularly realistic. Mr. W. H. Pease, the popular manager, is always busy looking after the comfort of his numerous patrons.

THE GRAND, FULHAM.

The programme arranged for the benefit of the patrons of the Grand Theatre, Fulham, this week includes both drama and comedy. The first item is called The Great Poison Case, and consists of a strange incident in the life of Barbara Merrick, a hospital nurse, who has been accused of poisoning her benefactor. The part of the heroine is ably taken by Miss Agnes Russell. Dr. Floyd (the real culprit) is played by Mr. C. W. Somerset, who shows great skill in dealing with a difficult character. The principal scene is that of the trial of the nurse, and in it Mr. Wetherall, as Philip Ashton, counsel for the defence, and Mr. Carr, for the Crown, are both seen to advantage. The other important characters are those of Chief Justice Barrington, played by Mr. A. P. Lewis; Tom Amos, a constable, acted by Mr. H. Newman; and Sara Crewton, a wardress, for whom Miss F. Nelson is responsible. The audience is afterwards delighted with a production of The Merchant of Venice, in which Mr. Fred Storey, as Shylock, is seen to great advantage. Messrs. A. M. Stapley and Keith Frazer also do well as Antonio and Bassanio respectively. The ladies' parts are carefully taken by Miss Lilian Holmes and Miss Geraldine Somerset. Following this item is the French farce, The Glazier, which causes endless amusement. The programme concludes with Rip Van Winkle, in which Mr. Fred Storey repeats his clever assumption of Rip. Able support is given by Miss L. Holmes as Gretchen, Mr. A. M. Stapley as Derrick Van Beekman, and Mr. M. A. Wetherall as Cockles. The part of Meenie, Rip's daughter, is impersonated first by little Miss N. Thornton and then by Miss A. Russell. The rôle of Heindrick Vedder also requires two players, and is taken by Master Reg Connor and Mr. Keith Frazer respectively. Between the items the audience are entertained by songs excellently rendered by Miss Lawrence and Mr. Max.

GRAND THEATRE, ISLINGTON.

On Monday, Aug. 12, the Drama, in Four Acts, by Frederick Melville, entitled "BETWEEN TWO WOMEN."

This week another of the many dramas by the Messrs. Melville occupies the boards. Between Two Women has long been very popular in the provinces, and it is not necessary to say anything in detail about it now. A very strong company has been engaged for the production. Mr. Chris Walker was dignified as the Earl of Millard, and acted with great power in the last scene of the third act. Mr. Ernest Owttrim as the Earl's son was excellent in a somewhat unconvincing part, and acted with sincerity. Mr. Fred Morgan as Durwood played the heavy lead in the conventional style, and is to be commended. Mr. Douglas Vigors as Carton acted a heroic part with just the right touch, and made a good impression. Spado found a capable portrayer in Mr. T. W. Walters, who displayed force; Mr. Herbert Goddard as Strangeways successfully presented the rôle of the unscrupulous officer; Mr. N. Graham as Jorkins did well in a small part; Mr. Harry Bristowe as Burgess portrayed an intense rôle very skilfully; and a feature of great interest in the performance was the appearance of Mr. Newman Maurice in the comedy rôle. Mr. Maurice, who was until recently the acting-manager here, received a great welcome on making his first appearance. He displayed his well-known gifts as a comedian to great advantage, working hard, and with the greatest success. Miss Lucy Beaumont as Polly proved an admirable ally in the comedy business, acting with spirit and go. Miss Lulu Bowes as the Blind Boy was quite excellent, giving a character study of great merit. Miss Louise Hampton as Violet is entitled to much praise for an artistic performance of much value to the production. Miss Leah Marlborough as Carmen depicted the rôle with effect and skill. Miss Sybil Hare, as the lady customer, did everything possible with her small part.

THE BRIXTON.

"THE BEAST AND THE BEAUTY."

The series of Melvillian melodrama is being maintained at the Brixton Theatre, which is this week devoted to The Beast and the Beauty, one of Mr. Frederick Melville's best efforts. Its drawing powers have been reflected at Brixton in large audiences, who have given proof of their appreciation in continuous cheers, frequently interspersed by laughter. The company engaged in the interpretation of the drama is admirably suited to the work. First honours fall to the long-popular Mr. Ashley Page, whose robust impersonation of Jack Barrymore, the Beast, is marked by many artistic shades of expression. The value of a long experience is seen in his reading of the part throughout, and in more than one scene he is responsible for a vigorous outburst that arouses enthusiastic cheers. The rôle of Violet, the "Beauty," is sustained by Miss Marion Denvil, who shared with Mr. Page many of the triumphs achieved in the more recent "stock" days at the Pavilion, Mile End. Girlish grace and dramatic skill are combined in Miss Denvil's performance, which awakens admiration throughout the house. Miss East-Robertson, another artist of wide experience, renders the rôle of Delilah Vane as malignant as needs be, and great is the resentment which she arouses among the virtuous playgoers. Mr. J. C. Aubrey gives many artistic touches to the villainy of Lord X, in whom the spirit of evil seems inborn, and revels in the ruin of which he is the author. A sound and experienced performer is found in Mr. John Sargent, who clothes the ruffianly Dick Soans with a comicality that gains a good many laughs. Similar results are obtained by the eccentricities of Mr. Johnny Chippendale as Tom Chicken, and the merriment aroused during the attempt by these two worthies to burgle a house is loud and incessant. Mr. Eric Campbell's stalwart physique is admirably adapted to the part of Ned Samson, the fighting man. The exigencies of the part require that the actor shall take hold of a couple of policemen and swing them round and round—a feat that is easily performed by the actor—who nevertheless gives proof of his emotional ability in the powerful scene with his false wife. Mr. Edward Thane realises the description of the Earl of Loman as the "prehistoric father," his lank and gaunt figure and eccentricities of speech and manner making his performance very striking. Miss Mattie Everett displays agreeable vivacity in the part of Mimi; Miss Maggie Lindsay is a typical French housemaid; Mr. F. L. Lawrence makes a stately and benign priest; the drolleries of a village landlord are well portrayed by Mr. Gerald Morgan; Mr. Frank Harrison ably enacts Mr. Sharp, the solicitor; Mr. Ernest Williams does well as a referee; and the realism of the ring is further sustained by Messrs. Bill Ruggles, T. Franks, Jem Dorsett, Will Costa, and Will Howard. Mr. Ben Brown is timekeeper, and Messrs James Peerless and W. Tempest officiate as judges.

THE WEST LONDON.

On Monday, Aug. 12, Shakespeare's Comedy,
"TAMING OF THE SHREW."

Shakespeare in Marylebone is something of a novelty, but the great artistic success scored by Mr. Clive Currie and his capable company should encourage Mr. William Bailey to foster his patrons' interest in the higher forms of dramatic art which is represented by the Taming of the Shrew. The warmest praise is to be given to Mr. Currie for his delightful impersonation of Petruchio. He spoke his lines with cheery abandon, yet with such convincing force that he had the house with him from start to finish. Miss Emil Leslie sustained Katharina with energy and skill. All her lines were excellently delivered, and her conception of the character was wellnigh perfect. Able assistance in the success of the performance was given by Mr. T. P. Haynes, who, with conspicuous ability, brought his ripe experience to bear on the part of Grumio; Mr. F. Cremlin was most effective as Baptista; Mr. Robert Atkins was agreeably free and easy as Lucentio; Mr. E. H. Brooke did ample justice to the rôle of Biondello; and Mr. W. St. A. Bentley, who appeared by kind permission of Mr. James Welch, enacted Hortensio with graceful gestures and pleasing affability. Miss Lorna Lawrence impersonated Bianca with coquettish artlessness; and other parts well played were Gremio, by Mr. Fred Morland; Tranio, by Mr. Esmond Egerton Hine; the Tailor, by Mr. Charles Bruce; the Widow, by Miss Rose Matthews; and the Servants, by Miss Rita Sponti and Miss Florence Barnett. The play was mounted and staged in faultless style, and the elocution of the respective members of this talented company was much above the average. The comedy was preceded each evening by Mr. Louis N. Parker's one act play, The Man in the Street, in which good work was done by Miss Rita Sponti as Minnie Adare; Mr. Esmond Egerton Hines as Philip Adare; and Mr. Robert Atkins as Jabez Glover.

THE MODERN PAGEANT.

There were Mr. Sneers long before Sheridan chose that particular name for the acidulated "critic" in his famous burlesque, and there are Sneers of the present day who will even speak disrespectfully of the National Anthem, the modern music hall, the "thin red line," the Labour Member, or other cherished "institutions." A writer in London Opinion has fallen foul of modern pageantry, with its open-air realisations of ancient history, organised by Mr. Louis N. Parker and others. But from the point of view of the theatrical manager these pageants should foster a taste for the drama, and the genuine nature of their attractiveness cannot be "railed off" by such lines as the following:—

O beadle, don your Sunday clothes,
Ye workhouse kids, your "bags,"
The Sunday school, its choicest hose—
Our village deck with flags:
Invite the old folk out to tea
(For cost, don't care a dump!);
It is the glad centenary
Of our old parish pump!

Then let the vicar play the fool,
The parish clerk the clown,
Let ladies ride in garments cool,
As in the larger town:
In this soft age of pure delight,
When strange things come to pass,
'Tis good to let the yokel write
Himself down just an ass.

So tramp along the village street,
With brassly blatant bands,
And revel in your own conceit
And cheer, and clap your hands.
The pageant is the modern way
To teach men what is what,
And tinselled Vanity's display
Condones its Tommy Rot!

THE King and Queen, together with Princess Victoria, visited the Playhouse on Monday, and witnessed the performance of The Earl of Pawtucket.

HIS MAJESTY'S THEATRE, BARROW.

REOPENED WITH "WHEN KNIGHTS WERE BOLD."

His Majesty's Theatre, on the Strand, was reopened on Bank Holiday, Aug. 5, and there was a well-filled house when the orchestra struck up the National Anthem, which was followed by an outburst of applause. It is three months since this home of amusement was closed for alterations. When one entered the theatre last night the thoughts of an entirely new theatre must have at once come into the mind. The interior has been so beautifully transformed that the theatre looks quite new, and hardly a memory of the late house remains. It is indeed marvellous what has been done in the time. To see the house as it stood before, and to take stock of the place now, one cannot really comprehend where all the space has been found. But the fact remains that a delightful transformation has taken place, and the theatre is indeed splendid. The whole of the interior of the theatre was first taken out, half the roof raised, and the floor dropped. The work of the steel construction was then commenced. Respecting the auditorium, a new gallery and circle, with boxes, take the place of the old. They are constructed on the most modern principles—the cantilever system—and the absence of pillars will be conspicuous to those who remember the theatre in its old form. Some have vivid recollections of those pillars. Tip-up seats are provided in the stalls and circle, and everyone in the circle—despite the latest fashion in ladies' hats—can view the stage well, the seats are so well arranged. The acoustic properties of the theatre are admirable, and all persons can hear in every part of the house. It is surprisingly interesting to find that there is not a "blind" seat in the house. The decorations have been carried out in a free Rénaissance style. The general scheme of colour is cerise, cream, and gold. The theatre has been reinstalled with electric light—the Tantalam system. The house has been reseated throughout with upholstered seating, and is covered with velvet, the colour of which sets the keynote to the whole of the decorations. The draperies of the stage and boxes are of richly-embroidered plush, which have been specially made to harmonise with the general colour scheme. The general effect is pleasing, and can be described as a very pretty theatre. The Barrow coat-of-arms occupies a prominent position over the stage. It will be at once noticed that a new curtain has been provided, which must have cost about £100. The work has been carried out by Messrs. Darlaston and Edwards, of Birmingham, and Messrs. England and Co., of St. Anne's, under the direction of the architect, Mr. Albert Winstanley, of St. Anne's, and Manchester. Mr. and Mrs. Calvert Routledge are to be heartily congratulated on the success achieved. Mr. Routledge addressed the audience last night, and had a hearty reception. For the satisfaction of the most nervous people, he stated that if one thousand people sat on each single seat in the circle, the balcony would still be quite safe.

"WHEN KNIGHTS WERE BOLD."

The attraction provided for the opening was the great comedy success from Wyndham's Theatre, London, When Knights Were Bold. Last night's performance was splendid, and the audience were kept in continual laughter all the evening. The farce is well written, and gives an abundance of scope. Of course, as in a majority of plays of modern times, much depends upon one person. In this instance the chief character is Sir Guy de Vere, Bart., a young baronet of ultra-modern ideas, who is in love with his cousin Rowena, a romantic young lady, who is always talking of "the good old days," when Sir Guy, trying to cure a cold with hot whiskey-and-water, falls asleep in the knights' room of Beechwood Towers, and is transported to "ye good old times." In immaculate evening dress, surrounded by friends, retainers, and fair maids, all passed backwards 710 years, and move in the garb and speak the speech of A.D. 1196. The fun increases at this point. The ludicrous situations and possibilities arising from such complications can be better imagined than described, but the climax is reached when Sir Guy is challenged by Sir Brian Ballymote to mortal combat for the hand of the fair Rowena. The little hero, donned in a suit of armour, opposing a veritable giant (in comparison), similarly clad, is very funny; but the absurdity is increased when the little man discards his armour and sword, and resorts to fisticuffs to vanquish his foe in armour. He triumphs, and thus ends the second act. The third act sees an awakening, but in order to cure his ladylove of her ridiculous ideas of "the days of old," he keeps up the character of a knight of old, as experienced in his dream, and thus brings about a happy termination to his love suit. In the part of Sir Guy we have the personality of Mr. Nelson Keys. He is a born comedian, and is the life and soul of the piece from beginning to end. Mr. Keys is continually on the stage, and one hardly realises the work he puts into the part. He simply revels in the extraordinary situations that abound. His success is due to his unflagging efforts. Miss Emelie Polini gives a sweet rendering of Lady Rowena, and her capital study of the good-old-time, romantic-struck lady calls for special mention. Miss Polini is certainly a talented actress. The remainder of the cast are also very good indeed. Mr. Charles Ommanney's Sir Brian, Mr. W. Lockhart's Dr. Peter Pottlebury, Mr. Augustus Synod's Isaacson, Mr. Thomas Pauncefort's Hon. Charles Widdicombe, and Mr. Talbot Homewood's Wittle are all very excellent impersonations. Then the other ladies are remarkably clever, Miss Marjorie Chard being a fascinating Miss Isaacson. The play is presented by a strong company, and is splendidly mounted; while the special music by Bucalossi is played by a capital orchestra, under the direction of Mr. F. J. Brockett. The duologue, The Miller, is given as a curtain-raiser each evening by Miss Eva Leonard Boyne and Mr. J. R. Gillespie. It was announced by Mr. Routledge that the next London attraction would be The Truth, with Miss Decima Moore in the cast.—Barrow News.

ACTORS' APATHY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—A special meeting of the Actors' Union was arranged to take place in Manchester on the 6th inst., "for all professionals, whether members of the Union or not." It was called for two p.m.—a generally convenient time—yet, notwithstanding the fact that notices were posted up on nearly all the Manchester theatre call-boards and other professional rendezvous, and a further postcard reminder sent out on the Monday night, only four members turned up! It was raining the early part of the day, but was quite fine two hours preceding the time advertised. Making allowance for rehearsals and unforeseen events keeping many away, there are still scores of people "out" in Manchester who could have attended.

Professor Huxley has said (I quote from memory), "In the game of Life the player on the other side is hidden from us, but we know to our cost that he is always just and never overlooks a mistake. It is for you to find out why your ears are boxed." It is not to be pretended that the Actors' Union is going to switch on an actors' millennium; but the A.U. still concerns the actor very much, and this utter indifference indicates the state of Denmark. The overcrowding, the underselling, the trickery, the bogus manager—all these are just what we deserve.—Yours faithfully,

J. TELLY DILLSEN.

Prince's Theatre, Accrington, Aug. 8.

THEATRICAL GOSSIP.

Sir Charles Wyndham, who was undecided whether to remove A Night Out from the Criterion to the New, or to produce there a German comedy which he has for some time had in reserve, has finally determined upon neither course, but has instead let the theatre to Mr. Desmond M. Raleigh, who will revive there early next month Horace Annesley Vachell's four-act play, Her Son, which had such a favourable hearing at its production at the Playhouse last March. Miss Winifred Emery will again be seen in her part of Dorothy Fairfax, while that of Richard Gasgoyne, formerly played by Mr. Maude, will be sustained at the New by Mr. Kenneth Douglas. Master Bobbie Andrews will once more be Min, and Miss Florence Haydon will repeat her assumption of Lady Helmingham.

It is understood that the name fixed upon for the new theatre at the corner of Wardour-street and Shaftesbury-avenue is the King's. It might very well be the Wardour, though that might cause confusion with the Waldorf; but why, since Mr. J. B. Mulholland has established in the West the beautiful King's Theatre, Hammersmith, should we have another house of the same name when there is a chance of honouring the gracious Consort who first won our hearts as "the daughter of kings across the seas"? We have had two Queen's Theatres in London, but none so worthy of the title as the new and magnificent house just built.

Speaking of the nomenclature of "the temples of Thespis" we are reminded that the theatre which has been rechristened The Kingsway by Miss Lena Ashwell was first known as the Novelty, then became the Jodrell, and later the Great Queen-street Theatre. There was some talk of calling it the Penley Theatre, but the favourite comedian relinquished the idea when he opened it with comedy in 1900.

Mr. Cyril Maude has acquired a play which will manifestly provide him with a part quite in his best style. The new piece is an adaptation from a three-act comedy, entitled Médor, by M. Henri Malin, produced at the Paris Gymnase in the autumn of 1897. Mr. Maude's part in the English version will be that of a timid, good-natured gentleman, who is engaged at Somerset House, and resides in a suburban villa. In his youth he had acted in the position of "fag" for a burly friend, and when in later life the two meet again the former relations are resumed. The bully is invited to his friend's house, where he takes up the old masterful sway, and the comedy that is likely to arise out of such a series of situations may well be imagined. Miss Alexandra Carlisle will have an important part in the piece, which is to be called Fido, and will be given at Tuesday and Friday matinées at the Playhouse during the autumn.

Puccini will be strongly represented on the Moody-Manners programme at the Lyric next week, and modern Italian opera will be strikingly exemplified by such works as Madama Butterfly, given for the first time in its English dress last night, and La Bohème. For the rest we are to have such perennial favourites as Faust, Lohengrin, Tannhäuser, and Trovatore.

Miss Maxine Elliott is assured of a cordial reception when she makes her reappearance in London on Monday, Sept. 9. She will open her season at the Lyric Theatre with Mr. H. V. Esmond's play, in four acts, Under the Greenwood Tree, which has for a sub-title that of The Romantic History of Mary Hamilton. The heroine of the play is a young woman of vast wealth, who, tiring of the follies of the fashionable set to which she is attached, seeks freedom amid the surroundings of a nomadic existence, and into this life of simplicity the author has succeeded in weaving the thread of romance. Among those who have been engaged for Miss Elliott's season are Mr. Charles Cherry, Mr. E. Maturin, Mr. T. Gideon Warren, Mr. Felix Edwardes, Mr. Tom Mowbray, Mr. W. J. Yeldham, Miss Mary Jerrold, and Miss H. M. Fraser.

Mr. H. B. Irving, who started his autumn tour this week, will make his first appearance as Louis XI. at the Theatre Royal, Manchester, during the week beginning Sept. 23. Mr. Irving's other plays from his late father's repertory include The Bells, The Lyons Mail, and Charles the First. The tour will also be marked by the production of two new plays—a one-act "historical farce," entitled The Lion and the Unicorn, and a four-act drama, called Cæsar Borgia, by Mr. Justin Huntly McCarthy.

Mr. Irving has also secured for eventual production a four-act comedy by Judge Parry and Mr. Frederick Mouillot, the authors of What the Butler Saw, founded on the career of Jonathan Wild. The famous thief-taker was burlesqued, we remember, by no less a public favourite than Fred Leslie, who appeared in the part at the Gaiety, and it is somewhat surprising to learn that Jonathan is to be "treated from an essentially comic standpoint." The situations of the new play are powerful, but each scene—even the last, which precedes Wild's execution—possesses the element of humour. The action of the first act is laid in a London street; the second passes in an old inn on the road to Harwich; the third takes place in the house of Jonathan's father; and the fourth in a Newgate prison cell.

In his selection of players for the production of The Christian at the Lyceum Mr. Wentworth Croke has taken note of the growing reputation of Mr. Matheson Lang by engaging him for the part of John Storm. Mr. Lang's parentage did not apparently encourage a stage career, for, like Mr. Walter Bentley, his father is a Scotch minister. After playing lead with Mr. F. R. Benson, he supported Mrs. Langtry both in this country and in America, and appeared with Mr. H. B. Irving in The Jury of Fate at the Shaftesbury. Going to the Adelphi, he was the Tristram to Miss Lily Brayton's Iseult. Previous to this engagement, however, he had the inestimable privilege of supporting Miss Ellen Terry, playing Benedick to her Beatrice. While with Miss Terry's company he met Miss Hutin Britton, whom he married in 1903. Mr. Lang has been a great success in Alfred Sutro's play, John Glayde's Honour, in which he played the impetuous lover, Trevor Lerode.

Miss Alice Crawford, another choice of Mr. Wentworth Croke's, is to play the difficult part of Glory Quayle. Miss Crawford has had considerable experience in the Shakespearean productions of Mr. Beerbohm Tree, and supported him in the recent revival of Antony and Cleopatra, in which she played the important part of Charmian.

Mr. Edmund Payne, who has been enjoying a holiday, will rejoin the cast of The Girls of Gottenberg at the Gaiety this evening, and will resume his original part of Max Moddelkopf.

Mr. Bernard Shaw's buoyant humour apparently does not desert him even in the face of imminent peril. He had an unpleasant experience recently at Llanbedr, Merionethshire, where he is spending a holiday. He and a friend while bathing were carried away by a current, which, however, took them safely to a sandbank. Mr. Shaw afterwards said he was utterly exhausted, and only kept on swimming as long as possible to "postpone the unpleasantness of being drowned."

Mr. Arthur Bourchier has selected Tuesday evening, the 27th inst., for the production of the new comedy of rural life, by Mr. Sydney Valentine and Mrs. Blundell, entitled Fiander's Widow. The cast will include Miss Miriam Clements, Mrs. Charles Calvert, Miss Maud Wynter, Miss Elfrida Clement, Mr. H. Nye Chart, Mr. Victor Widdicombe, Mr. Arthur Eldred, Mr. Frank Lacy, Mr. Edward Rigby, and Mr. Sydney Valentine. Fiander's Widow will be preceded by Mr. Eden Phillpotts's comedietta, A Pair of Knickerbockers, in which Mr. Charles Goodhart and Miss Pamela Gaythorne will appear.

The same evening witnesses the first performance at the Hicks Theatre, under Mr. Charles Frohman's management, of Mr. Henry Arthur Jones's four-act play, The Hypocrites, which achieved a brilliant success in New York, where it was accepted as one of the most notable of recent serious contributions to the American stage. The author relies to a large extent on George Meredith's axiom, "Expediency is man's wisdom; doing right is God's," and he seeks to illustrate it by means of a powerful and interesting story. The cast is rendered notable by the inclusion of Mr. J. H. Barnes, who of late has done such valuable work under Messrs. Vedrenne and Barker at the Court, and is sure of a hearty welcome on his return from his long sojourn in the States. Mr. Alfred Bishop, who has been released for the purpose by Mr. Cyril Maude, will also be of the company, which will further consist of Messrs. Chas. V. France, Vernon Steel, Arthur Lewis, Cecil Brooking, and Leslie Faber, and Misses Marion Terry, Viva Birkett, Winifred Arthur-Jones, Henrietta Watson, Doris Keane, and Irene Clark.

Smoking in theatres devoted to the drama is becoming very prevalent, and the permits seem to be so readily granted by local councils and corporations that the oft-urged complaint that in the solace of the weed the music hall patron has a great advantage over his theatrical brother will soon have no foundation in fact. At Edmonton, Brighton, Liverpool, Sheffield, Richmond, and other places the smoke test no longer makes people testy.

The latest house to which the privilege has been accorded is the Theatre Royal, Blackburn, where the Town Council has decided to allow smoking at all performances. The house was re-opened on Monday evening after being closed for the usual summer vacation. During the interval the theatre has been cleaned from floor to roof, and repainted, while an entirely new electric-light installation has been put in, including 190 additional lights for the stage and numerous new lights and switches in the auditorium. A new act-drop has also been fitted up. This is the work of Mr. F. G. Venimore, and there is a picture of Windsor Castle, inset in cream satin draperies with gold enrichments.

Mrs. H. Leigh, a comrade of Nellie Farren, has received the following from an unknown admirer:—"I met the other day an old chum—C. D. Leigh. What interested me more than a little in our chat was to discover that he was the son of Mrs. H. Leigh, whom old playgoers like myself will remember at the London theatres in the early seventies, particularly at the Gaiety—the old Gaiety, but then (alack! how the years pace along!) known as the new Gaiety—under John Hollingshead, who at the time of Mrs. Leigh's engagement put on some of the finest things in our great dramatic literature, with Phelps, Chas. Mathews, Henry Montague, Teddy Righton, J. G. Taylor, Constance Loseby, Miss Furtado (Mrs. John Clarke), and many others of the long or recent past. Mrs. Leigh was a favourite with them all, and particularly with us boys in the pit; for nothing ever came amiss to her, and she played everything in which she was cast with a steady, even ability, a fine humour, and a thorough conscientiousness. I well remember how she used to revel in her parts with Phelps, and how inimitably, for instance, she played up to his Falstaff—a very dry and subtle Falstaff—as Dame Quickly in The Merry Wives. And it is good news to learn that she is still alive, hale, and hearty, and occasionally revisits the glimpses of the footlights."

Mr. Martin Harvey has just concluded a delightful motor tour in Northern France, during which he has been partnered by Mr. George Frampton, R.A., the well-known sculptor.

Mr. Harvey's autumn tour of the provinces commences on Thursday at the Opera House, Buxton, the opening piece being The Only Way. Miss N. de Silva will, of course, be Mr. Harvey's chief supporter, and the company includes Mr. Fred Wright, sen., Mr. Charles Glenny, Mr. Patrick Alexander, Mr. Philip Hewland, Mr. Leonard Craske, Mr. Charles J. Cameron, Mr. George Cooke, Mr. Percy Foster, Mr. Alfred Mansfield, Mr. A. E. Raynor, and Mr. Vincent Sternroyd. Among the ladies of the company are Miss Coleridge, Miss Bessie Elder, and Miss Maud Milton. Mr. Alfred Rivers continues to be Mr. Harvey's stage-manager, whilst the direction of the stage is in the accomplished hands of Mr. H. J. Loveday. Mr. Frank B. O'Neill, of course, retains the position of business-manager, a post with which he has been identified for many years.

The répertoire this tour includes Great Possessions, Hamlet, The Corsican Brothers, The Breed of the Treshams, The Only Way, Rouget de l'Isle, A Cigarette-maker's Romance, &c.

After Buxton, visits in the following order will be paid to Harrogate, Nottingham, Hull, Newcastle, Edinburgh, Glasgow, Manchester, Birmingham, Cork, Dublin (three weeks), Belfast, Liverpool, Leeds, and the Coronet, Notting Hill.

One of Joachim's greatest friends in his youth was Schumann, who dedicated his beautiful D minor symphony to the violinist in these terms: "When the first tones of this symphony were conceived Joachim was a mere lad. Since then the symphony, and still more the lad, has grown. Wherefore I dedicate the former to the latter, if only in secret." Joachim still possesses the autograph score of this composition.

In 1899 Berlin celebrated Joachim's sixtieth anniversary in public with one of the most remarkable grand concert festivals ever held. Of the 200 instrumentalists in the orchestra, the whole of the 164 handling string instruments were either past or present pupils of the great master. In fact, violinists came from England and all over the Continent to take part in this remarkable jubilee.

Many honours were accorded Joachim in England. Cambridge conferred on him the degree of Doctor of Music in 1877, and Oxford in 1888. Glasgow University made him LL.D. in 1887. English admirers presented him with a Stradivarius violin, valued at £1200, in April, 1889, and in March, 1894, at the Grafton Galleries, he was the recipient of an address to mark the jubilee of his début in this country. In June, 1899, at a Philharmonic concert at Queen's Hall, he was handed a silver-gilt wreath in commemoration of the sixtieth anniversary or his first public appearance.

A new one-act play, entitled The Royalist, written by Mr. E. Oswald Brooks, the resident lessee and manager of the Grand Theatre, Swansea, will be produced, for the first time, on Sept. 5, when Mr. Brooks takes his annual benefit.

Mr. George Edwardes renewed his successes last week in the realm of sport. On Friday his three-year-old Raytoi won the Southdown Club Open Handicap of 150 sovs., and the following day at Lewes his two-year-old colt Danilo was victorious in the Mount Harry Selling Plate of 100 sovs. Both races were closely contested, the events being won by a head and a neck respectively.

Dr. E. Distin Maddick comments warmly in the current issue of Pearson's Weekly on the system that allows people to call themselves actors when they have no right to the title. "Let a man falsely describe himself as an ordained clergyman, a solicitor, or a doctor, and, whether he attempt to practise or not, he instantly becomes liable to heavy punishment," writes Dr. Maddick. "But any woman who finds herself in the dock can describe herself as an 'actress,' as so many of them do, and she not only commits no offence, but no one can say she is not an actress. In so far that the stage is open without fee, test, or examination of any kind to anybody, and in so far that the term 'actor' or 'actress' carries in itself no legal significance or status, as do the terms clergyman, solicitor, doctor, acting is not a profession, and actors and actresses are not professional men and women."

In connection with the neglected condition of Kate Vaughan's grave, Mr. Edward Terry writes:—"I was with poor Kate every day during her last illness until she died. She wanted for nothing that the loving attention of friends could provide. On a dreadfully stormy day she was lowered into the grave by six old comrades, of whom I was one. Before leaving Johannesburg I gave instructions for a memorial, and left a sum of money for the purpose. Some months after, in England, I received a photo of the cross, and was well satisfied with its appearance. I am sure any actor visiting Johannesburg would be only too pleased to take a few flowers as a tribute, and the Actors' Benevolent Fund for South Africa, which I helped to found when there, would keep it in order. At the same time, it must not be forgotten that the torrential rains will soon destroy a flower-decked grave and loosen the stones of any memorial."

The council of the Actors' Association have met with gratifying success in their endeavour to obtain a reduction of fees to members from golf clubs all over the kingdom. The Burnley Club replied that they would give facilities without any charge, and the same answer was received from the Cambridge University G.C. and the Folkestone G.C. The Blundell G.C. and Deane G.C. (Bolton) reduced their fees by one half, and many clubs have consented to allow the members of the A.A. to use their links upon payment of the nominal fee of 1s. per day.

Mr. Charles Manners, ever anxious to encourage native talent, is shortly producing Mr. Hermann Löhr's one-act opera Sarenna, the plot of which is simple and yet dramatic. The lyrics, by Avon Marsh, are far above the average. The opera is written for tenor, baritone, contralto, soprano, and bass. The composer is already favourably known to the public in connection with his songs, and in Sarenna he shows marked ability to write really dramatic music.

A copyright performance of Mr. Lawrence Binyon's play, Attila, which is to be produced by Mr. Oscar Asche on Sept. 4, took place on Thursday evening at His Majesty's. The author has gathered his materials chiefly from the records of Priscus, a Greek, who was despatched in 449 A.D. by the Roman Emperor on a mission to the Huns, and by whom Attila's appearance, manner and surroundings are vividly described. The principal ingredients in the play are composed of Attila's superstition, his desire to found a dynasty without which he could never hope to consummate the conquest of Rome, his profound affection for his young son, his infatuation for Ildico, the beautiful Princess of the Burgundian people, and the famous historical incident of the romantic passion conceived for Attila by the Roman Emperor's sister, Honoria, culminating in the offer of herself in marriage; but the pith of the play, as of the Germanic legends, lies in the shipwreck of Attila's ambitions on the Western conception, to which all his Oriental ideas were opposed, of the dignity of womanhood.

The Mansfield Grand Theatre will reopen on Aug. 26. During the closure many alterations and improvements have been effected.

At the Fulham Theatre next week Mr. Robert Arthur has arranged for the return visit of Mr. Bert Coote's principal company, in the celebrated play The Fatal Wedding, with the entire production as played at the Princess's Theatre.

The Bandmann Comedy Company appeared at Singapore on July 12 in Lady Gorringe's Necklace, and although this play is not quite new to the East, large houses were attracted. Miss Florence Hamer as Mrs. Gorringe played with distinction; Mr. Claude King as Captain Mowbray gave a convincing performance; Miss Violet Vorley as Isabel and Mr. P. Sanders as David Cairn were excellent; Mr. C. Bown was good as Colonel Jardine; and a really admirable rendering of the part of Mrs. Jardine was given by Miss Dorcas Corsbie. Mr. T. Peachey played well as Jernigan; Miss R. Spiers as Miss Potts, Miss Grenville as Hettie, and Mr. W. S. Butt as Charles, made the most of their parts.

Alberto Franchetti, the composer of Christoforo Colombo, produced at Genoa in 1892, will be represented during the autumn season at Covent Garden by his opera Germania, which was produced at Milan in 1902.

Mr. Geo. D. Day's company, The Bondman, with Mr. Frank Cooper in his original part of Jason, opened on Monday last at the Gaiety Theatre, Douglas, to a brilliant and most enthusiastic house. Appended, in round numbers, are the first four days' receipts, which certainly seem phenomenal:—Monday, £140; Tuesday, £182; Wednesday, £167; Thursday, £164.

Among the novelties to be given by Messrs. Vedrenne and Barker during their season at the Savoy will be a new play by John Galsworthy, entitled Joy. Mr. Galsworthy, it will be remembered, is the author of The Silver Box, which was produced at the Court in 1901, and revived in the spring of this year.

Mr. Maurice E. Bandmann, who has just returned to Calcutta, after having concluded arrangements in London for his forthcoming Eastern season, sends the satisfactory tidings that things are booming with him in the East. Mr. Bandmann now owns, or controls, a complete circuit of theatres in India and the Far East, and he is in a position to offer companies a twelve months' solid tour. He has also four companies of his own touring abroad this year.

Among the new operas that the Bandmann Opera company will produce in Calcutta this coming season are Amasis, The Girls of Gottenburg, and The Merry Widow, while the Bandmann Comedy company will shortly produce The Walls of Jericho, The Morals of Marcus, and John Glayde's Honour. Mr. Bandmann wishes particularly to warn artists against accepting engagements in India before making full enquiries as to the stability of the management they are going with.

Mr. Charles Manners, who is carrying on such enterprising work in the cause of English opera at the Lyric, has decided views with regard to "charity concerts." Nobody, he said, could accuse the musical profession of neglecting to use legitimate channels for dispensing charity, but a charity concert was not one of these—in many cases it was a cheap method of giving a swell "At Home." He gave as an instance the case of a charity concert at which—the artists giving their services free—the expenses totalled over £1000, the charity getting 30s. Music, he added, was as much the musician's livelihood as bricklaying was the bricklayer's, and the young musician who thought he improved his professional chances by singing for nothing and a free advertisement in a daily newspaper made a great mistake.

Miss Ellen Snow, who is one of the latest of young and accomplished actresses to venture into management on her own account, will appear at the Grand Theatre, Islington, on Monday, in a revival of the well-known play, Why Men Love Women. Miss Snow has already won golden opinions in the provinces with the excellent company she has chosen, and also on account of the complete manner in which the play has been staged. The author of the play is Mr. Walter Howard, whose Midnight Wedding is still drawing crowded houses to the Lyceum.

Mr. Jack Haddon and company will appear at the Shakespeare, Clapham, on Monday, in the romantic military drama, Under the Russian Flag, another play from the pen of the successful author, Mr. Walter Howard. Mr. Haddon started his autumn tour a few weeks ago in the provinces, and he has been highly complimented by various managers on the excellent way in which he has presented the play.

Influenced by the excellent results of the last visit of The Prodigal Son to his Kennington Theatre, Mr. Robert Arthur has arranged with Mr. Wentworth Croke to bring Mr. Hall Caine's play there for next week. The company is an exceptionally strong one, and some beautiful scenery has been painted by Mr. Ernest Howard. Later in the season (Sept. 9) Mr. Croke is also to present The Bondman.

A protean prodigy has been discovered in Italy, where Signorina Fatima Miris, aged 24, is creating a sensation by playing the whole of The Geisha singlehanded. She represents all the fifteen principal parts, changing her costume seventeen times, and at no time, it is said, is she off the stage more than five seconds.

Mr. G. Moreton-Williams, who recently concluded a second tour, playing his original part of Uriah Craven in Messrs. Warden and Sandford's A Woman's Past company, has been re-engaged by the same firm for the autumn tour of this piece.

During the summer vacation the Lyceum Theatre, Sheffield, has been cleansed, re-carpeted, and entirely re-upholstered. The proscenium and auditorium have been beautifully decorated, the chaste colour-scheme being suggested by the artistic manager, Mr. J. E. B. Beaumont. The foyer, corridors, vestibules, and refreshment-rooms have also been attended to, and the stage has been thoroughly overhauled.

Miss Violet Osmond, after a short rest, is again appearing as Dora Heather in The New Barmaid, and has been meeting with a flattering reception this week at the County Theatre, Kingston.

The Theatre Royal, Lincoln, has been leased to Messrs. W. Payne-Seddon and Ernest Pope, who are now carrying out some structural alterations. The theatre will be reopened on Sept. 2.

Mr. Robert Arthur is about to try a new experiment in Liverpool. In order to test public opinion regarding the advisibility of establishing a stock company for the production of Shakesperean plays on an elaborate scale, such as obtained at Manchester, he has arranged to take over, for the week commencing Sept. 9, the entire combination of As You Like It, which was this week revived at the Theatre Royal in that city. Mr. Gerald Lawrence and Miss Fay Davis will be in the cast.

Miss Beatrice Wilson will play Esther Agle when Mr. Norman V. Norman presents Miss Gladys Unger's Mr. Sheridan, which had such a successful run at the Garrick. Mr. Norman himself will play Richard Brinsley, and other important engagements that he has made include Mr. G. T. Norman-Burt and Mr. Alfred Gray, who will play Lord Cray and Tom Sheridan respectively. Mr. Norman is having a special plant of printing for the play, which will be elaborately dressed and mounted.

Mr. Norman V. Norman gave a pastoral play in the Vivary Park, Taunton, last week, in aid of the Somerset County Hospital. The performance, which was attended by most of the leading residents of the town and neighbourhood, was very successful, the grounds being tastefully illuminated with festoons of coloured lights and lanterns.

"Second to None," Mr. Walter Howard's latest effort, will make its first appearance in London on Monday, when it will begin a week's engagement at the West London. The piece will be presented by Mr. T. Edward Ward's company.

Mr. Moncton Hoffe, who, by arrangement with Mr. George Alexander, is touring Oscar Wilde's two plays, Lady Windermere's Fan and The Importance of Being Earnest, has recently acquired the entire British rights of Das Comedie der lugnenden Schauspieler, by Moritz Blankenberg. The translation is in the hands of Mr. Arthur Forbes Watts.

"The King of the Huguenots," a romantic play by H. A. Saintsbury, of the time of the famous massacre of St. Bartholomew, is to be produced in the late autumn by Mr. J. Maundy-Gregory. The opera by Meyerbeer on the same subject is familiar to Covent Garden frequenters.

A good story is told of a visit by Joachim to Manchester. After a concert at which there had been enthusiasm rarely surpassed he was walking up and down the railway platform with a cigar. A respectable man, apparently a navvy in his best clothes, kept intently eyeing him. Presently the man came up, asked for a light, and got it. Looking Joachim full in the face, and tapping him on the shoulder, he remarked, "But Paganini was the man." "I never felt so small in my life," said Joachim.

"Miss Hook of Holland" continues her successful career at the Prince of Wales's Theatre, playing every night to crowded houses. The 200th performance was given on Thursday evening.

Mrs. Annie Bellew is giving up her association with the theatrical profession after eleven years' service as wardrobe mistress with Mr. W. W. Kelly. Mrs. Bellew intends to start house-keeping in Birmingham.

Mr. Sydney Spenser's theatre at Glossop reopens on Monday with When London Sleeps.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

Outside Bailiffs!

Richard Craston, property master at the old Queen's Theatre, Manchester, was devotedly loyal to his employer, F. B. Egan. Once, when the broker's men were in, and on a Sunday night, "Dick" entered the theatre, by permission of the bailiffs, and wended his way to his room, which was immediately beneath the rat-holed and cracked floor of the stage-door entrance. Here he—by accident, of course—upset on a gas stove a couple of pounds of "villainous saltpeter" red fire, which, ascending to the olfactory organs of the men in possession, drove them into the street for fresh air, and to the corner pub for fresh beer. Dick immediately locked, bolted, and barred the door, thinking, with Gnatbrain in Black-Eyed Susan, that "a bailiff, like a snowstorm, is always best on the outside."

An Indignant Clown!

When Gomersal and Conquest took the Garrick Theatre, Leman-street, Whitechapel, they agreed to abide by a hard-and-fast rule, and that was that no free admissions were to be given by either. One evening, Paul Herring, the celebrated clown, asked to be passed in free. "I'm sorry," said Gomersal, who was in front, "but I cannot, Paul; it's against the rules; but, as I don't like to refuse an old friend, there's a shilling to pay with." "Thanks," said Paul. "What are you playing?" "The Dumb Man of Manchester, said Gomersal. "And who plays Tom?" "I do, of course." "And," said Paul, "do you think I'm going to pay a good, honest shilling to see you trying to struggle through a part like that? No; I'd sooner go and have a drink with it!" And he did.

Alexander and Shakespeare.

John Henry Alexander, the once well-known manager and comedian, of the old Theatre Royal, in Dunlop-street, Glasgow, whose tomb in that city, with its proscenium and fallen curtain—"Fallen is the curtain," &c., inscription—is one of the sights of the Necropolis there, was a warm-hearted, eccentric, pawky type of "Caledonia stern and wild." At the building of his theatre—"Ma Pawlace," as he termed it—he was asked by the builder as to the disposition of the busts of Shakespeare and Scott on the outside of the building. "Aweel, jeest put Shawkspeare on yin side, Scott on the ither, and, jeest to balance matters, put ma statue in the middle!"

A Cross Check!

Alick, senior, took checks in the gallery, and one exceptionally crowded night, having run short of these "pass-outs," he resorted to the expedient of chalking a cross on the backs of the boys, and husbanding the checks for the adults. This was good enough for the crowd of wee laddies who were waiting outside for gifts of "pass-outs." Chalk was easily procurable, and when the bona-fide check-holders returned there was no room for them.

A Storm-tost Mar-text.

A Mr. Kimber was an excellent stage-manager, and a man of infinite resource in times of difficulty. The piece was The Tempest, and the theatre the Prince's, Manchester. In the storm-tossed ship which commences the piece boys stood on the deck to represent the personages in the play, for the sake of perspective, the words of the piece being spoken at the side by the actors impersonating the characters. But these actors, being often late, Kimber used to cover their absence by speaking—or trying to—the lines of the author himself. For instance, he would deputise for one of the absent actors by shouting in the strident tones of the boatswain, "Yare, yare! Down with the topmast!" Then shouting to the company in the dressing-rooms, "You're all late; hurry up!" Then to the property man, "Work the thunder, and keep it up till they come!" Then reverting to Shakespeare, "Yare, yare! Lower, lower!"; to company, "I'll fine every one of you on Saturday!"; then harking back to the Bard, "All is lost! To prayers, to prayers!"; then improvising, forgetting that the ship was in mid-ocean, "Oh, gentlemen, let us all write home to our friends!"

To this Complexion!

Attention has been drawn to the neglect of Sarah Siddons's grave in Paddington Churchyard, and now comes the news from Johannesburg that Kate Vaughan's grave is shockingly neglected, and in no way worthy of one who so long graced the boards as queen of the terpsichorean art. "I visited poor Kate Vaughan's grave," writes a Johannesburg correspondent, "and found it in a shocking state of neglect! It is only a stone with a small cross, such as one would find on some child's neglected grave, with a small inscription giving the date of her death, and the following epitaph, 'One has to pass through life to reach eternity.' I tidied up the grave as much as possible, but it still presented a picture of the greatest desolation among the other well-kept graves around." Surely there are some frequenters of the Gaiety in the balmy days of the "Sacred Lamp," some lovers of dancing of which Kate Vaughan was so gifted and original an exponent, who would gladly contribute a small sum in order that her last resting-place might be worthy of a queen of dancers.

In Defence of Drama.

Mr. Hall Caine made further reference at Douglas, Isle of Man, on Wednesday night to the remark of an American professor that the English drama had been dead for 200 years. Addressing a theatre audience after a performance of The Bondman, Mr. Caine said: "The English drama is not dead, and is not dying. On the contrary, the old gentleman who was born before Shakespeare is still alive and fit, and likely to marry another wife, and have another large family. In other words, I think the English drama in the future will be the pulpit and platform of people from which great questions of life will be discussed, and that the theatre of the time to come will be a great forum, without ceasing to be a place of entertainment."

A Friend of Mendelssohn.

Music-lovers in general and frequenters of the now discontinued Monday and Saturday Popular Concerts will learn with great regret of the death of Dr. Josef Joachim. He was born in June, 1831, and was therefore in his seventy-seventh year. He commenced playing the violin at the age of five, and in his early artistic career was warmly encouraged by Mendelssohn, who accorded him the distinguished honour of accompanying him in 1843 at a concert of Mme. Viardot's in a Rondo of De Beriot's. He paid his first visit to England in 1844, making his professional début in London at Drury Lane Theatre, at a benefit of Alfred Bunn, on March 28 of that year. The sixtieth anniversary of his first appearance in England was the occasion of a very interesting concert at the Queen's Hall on May 16, 1904, when his own portrait, painted by J. Sargent, R.A., was presented to him by Mr. A. J. Balfour.

"The Sins of Society."

Mr. Arthur Collins writes in the Express on the Drury Lane autumn drama, The Sins of Society. "It must be supposed," he says, "that the drama is mainly composed of the unfortunate experience of a heroine who had been unlucky at bridge, or still more unfortunate in betting on horse races. Gambling, as in real life, leads the heroine into dire straits, almost verging on tragedy; but it is a mere incident leading up to grand situations which it has been my aim to illustrate scenically in a manner hitherto unknown even at Drury Lane."

"FRENCH AS HE IS SPOKE."

Comedy, in one act, adapted by Gaston Mayer from the French play, L'Anglais tel qu'on le parle, by Tristan Bernard, produced on Thursday, Aug. 15, at the Playhouse.

Peter ..... MR. CYRIL MAUDE
Monsieur Villiers .....MR. D. J. MCCARTHY
Charlie Lingard .... MR. ERNEST MAINWARING
Inspector of Police ..... MR. JOHN HARWOOD
Waiter ..... MR. A. G. ONSLOW
Policeman ..... MR. W. BLAIR
Rosine ..... MISS MADGE TITHERADGE
Hotel Manageress ..... MISS KATE HARWOOD

During his last stay in London M. Coquelin presented at The Royalty the excellent farce by Tristan Bernard, entitled L'Anglais tel qu'on le parle, and rejoiced his English admirers by his ingenious and clever impersonation of Eugène. The piece has now been adapted by Mr. Gaston Mayer, and was presented on Thursday evening at the Playhouse by Mr. Cyril Maude and company, as a prelude to the hilarious comedy, The Earl of Pawtucket, in place of the more serious piece, The Drums of Oude. As a curtain-rasier the success of French as He is Spoke—as the adaptation is called—was at once established, and it is probable that with repetition that success will grow. The days of a universal language are happily far distant, and our descendants probably will resent any evolution of tongues that robs them of the enjoyment that is to be derived from English misinterpretations of Gallic idioms, or vice-versa. Londoners will laugh over the mistakes made by Peter, who accepts an engagement as interpreter at the Avanta Hotel, London, his only qualification for the post being a colossal ignorance of any other language than his own. In the original it was Eugène's ideas of English that supplied the bulk of the fun. In the adaptation Peter's interpretations of French form a companion picture, and the chief characters, instead of being Parisian, are British. Of course, Peter makes a terrible muddle, and involves the characters in absurd situations. A runaway couple, Charlie Lingard and Rosine, arrive at the hotel, and are followed by the irate father of the girl, Monsieur Villiers. His anger startles the interpreter, who concludes that Villiers has been robbed of his pocket-book at the railway station, and sends for the police. Complications that ensue are eventually straightened out through Charlie Lingard himself becoming interpreter. The indignant father is called to explain the situation to the new interpreter, and then discovers the object of his search. Through the telephone it is announced that Charlie has been given a junior partnership in his firm, and le père Villiers readily consents to the marriage, forgiving the couple who have taken French leave.

Mr. Cyril Maude's quaint but effective method makes him a constant source of hilarity in the part of Peter, his facial expression being decidedly funny; a great hit is made by Mr. D. J. McCarthy, whose splenetic Frenchman (Villiers) reminds one of that excellent actor M. Marius, in a similar part. Higher praise would be impossible. Miss Madge Titheradge makes a fresh and ingenuous Rosine; Mr. Ernest Mainwaring is alert and breezy as Charlie Lingard; and to the success Mr. John Harwood, Mr. A. G. Onslow, and Miss Kate Harwood largely contribute. The Earl of Pawtucket pursues his light-hearted adventures to the accompaniment of laughter and applause, and in the name part Mr. Cyril Maude makes evident his wonderful versatility and adaptability.

AT the Workington Opera House this week Elliotts-Savonas' musical and variety performance is enthusiastically applauded by large houses. The Palace of Orpheus and the musical efforts of the Savonas give special delight. The one-act comedy, Are Wives Dummies? is ably enacted by Mr. Fred Monckton and Miss Lillie Monckton; Conan and Doyle, comedians and dancers, have a rousing reception; Miss Gertie Andrews sings tastefully, as also does Miss Florence.

THIS week, at the Theatre Royal, Whitehaven, Mr. Sidney and Miss Dora Dench's company is engaged in the drama A Prince of Rogues. Mr. Sidney Dorey has a capital part as Kenry, a detective; and Mr. L. Lawrence is a capable villain; Mr. Bert Dench is very amusing as Josh Buggins; and Mr. Robert Hall works hard as Frank Farrell; Miss Lorna Trehearne is good in the thankless part of Rita; and Miss Dora Dench is pleasing at Winnie Harwood.

NEW WEST-END PLAYHOUSE.

The very latest of the new West-End houses is nearing completion, and will be ready for opening by the end of September. The house is the sister one to the Hicks' Theatre, and is one of the two forming one block of buildings having frontages to Shaftesbury-avenue, Rupert-street, Wardour-street, and Upper Rupert-street, and comprising a large island site of about 25,000 superficial feet. Large shop premises occupy a portion of the centre of the site. The theatres have important corner entrances flanking on to Shaftesbury-avenue and Rupert-street, and Wardour-street respectively.

Mr. W. G. R. Sprague, who has designed the whole of the buildings for Messrs. Jacobus-Marler Estates, Ltd., has contrived to keep both the theatres absolutely different, both in the planning, details, and designing of the interiors, though the sites are practically identical in shape, the area of this latest theatre being somewhat larger. The theatre will be found to embody all that modern science and skill can do to make it perfect, both as to the comfort and convenience of the audiences and the requirements of the management. The principal entry is made through a semicircular lobby into a fine and exceedingly lofty crush-room, 24ft. wide and 24ft. in length, with a clear height of 21ft. A striking feature here is the fine white marble staircase directly facing one, the main landing above being arranged so as to form a projecting balcony in the room, whilst a handsome hammered-brass and ormolu grill balustrade adds to the effect. From this crush-room the better parts of the auditorium are quickly reached.

The auditorium is designed upon bold lines, and is 57ft. wide and 75ft. from the curtain line to back wall of pit. The construction is partly on the cantilever system, no columns being used anywhere. On the ground floor are stalls and pit. The first tier is the dress circle, above which is a large family circle or balcony; and above this, slightly set-up or raised, is a good gallery. The sighting of the house and acoustics are quite perfect from the most remote seat. It is estimated that the house can hold in money well over £300 per performance; but with even a much smaller audience, the auditorium will look cosy and well dressed, a point always appreciated by practical management.

The style of the decorative scheme throughout is Italian Renaissance, the groundwork of which is flatted gold, the relief modelling being ivory white, the colour scheme and draperies and upholstery being in a soft tone of eau de Nil green, with cherry-coloured silk shades to the electroliers and fittings. The building throughout is lighted by electricity, and the lighting is generally arranged to harmonise with the decorations. The heating is on the low-pressure system, and the stage is especially well provided with coils and radiators, so that the atmosphere in this part is pleasantly warmed before passing into the auditorium, thus obviating draughts, which often arise from lack of sufficient heat in this part. The stage and the auditorium are both well provided with hydrants and fire appliances, and the proscenium is fitted with a double asbestos and steel fire-curtain with water-sprays, in accordance with the London County Council's latest requirements. The dressing-rooms are provided in a separate block at the rear of the stage, and are fitted with hot and cold water supplies, heating, electric light, and all the latest modern accessories.

The various works have been executed by the following firms:—The general contract for the building—Mr. Walter Wallis, High-road, Balham, S.W.; decorations and furnishings—Messrs. Waring and Gillow, Sloane-street, S.W.; electric lighting—Messrs. Roger Dawson and Co., Ltd., Berners-street, W.; heating and hot-water supplies—Messrs. Strode and Co., Osnaburgh-street, N.W.; hydrants and fire-curtain—Messrs. Merryweather, of Greenwich-road, S.E.; stage and appliances—Mr. Darer, Pepys-road, Wimbledon, S.W.; steel construction throughout—Messrs. Smith, Walker, and Co., Tothill-street, Westminster; marble work of grand staircase, crush-room, and entrance—Messrs. Whitehead and Son, Kennington. Mr. George Webber has officiated as clerk of the works for the whole of the building, and Mr. William Wallis has acted as foreman.

MISS LOUISA PEACH, who was playing the leading part in A Broken Heart at the Dalston Theatre last week, was the recipient on the Saturday night of a handsome shower bouquet

THE ACTORS' UNION.

The usual weekly meeting of the Actors' Union was held on Tuesday at the Bedford Head Hotel, when the chair was taken by Mr. Fred Bentley, among those present being Messrs. George H. Child, E. Y. Rae, J. W. Braithwaite, Fred F. Loyd, D. G. Murray, Arthur Rose, Charles R. Hann, Wm. Allison, A. G. Harding, G. Trueman, Arthur Stratton, Robt. M. Taylor, H. Paulton, jun., E. Chester, R. C. Locke, G. P. Lester, Harry Bristow, and Leo Whamboult, and Misses Gladys Ffolliott, Kitty Marion, Adelaide Grace, Helene Forest, Louise L'Estrange, May Conrade, Mary Bessle, Grace Lester, Edith Chalmers, Florence Creagh, Alice Marsden, Nelly Howitt, Annie Warwick, Amy Coleman, Nancy Nevill, Ada Roscoe, Kate Lang, and Elizabeth Lang.

The CHAIRMAN, in opening the meeting, said all the arguments had already been used so many times that he must be excused if he was a little bit tautological, but the subject of the Actors' Union was to him like the bay leaf, ever green and ever fresh. It was a story oft told that never grew stale in the telling. He was just as ardent and enthusiastic as when a long time ago he used to dream of a brotherhood amongst actors and actresses. He had seen years ago scenes that could never have been imagined—scenes of poverty, misery, degradation, to which noble men and women had sunk, after giving of their best for the amusement and enlightenment of the public. Had such a brotherhood as he alluded to been in existence, such things could never have occurred. The Actors' Union, therefore, was an absolute necessity, and their motto should be "One for all, and all for one." They had been attacked on all sides by open foes and traitorous friends, who seemed to consider them an "Aunt Sally" to be shied at. They talked about running with the hare and hunting with the hounds, but the allegory would not apply in this instance, because in the chase the huntsman and hounds ran straight, and the fox knew which way they were coming; but the enemies of the Union came at it on all sides. The people who wrote to the papers were not of them, and why should they attempt to please outsiders? He remembered a line in a play which he used to speak:—"If England be true to herself, no foe can work her evil." That applied in the same way to the Union. If they were true to themselves, no outsiders could do them damage, try as they may. They did not want to strike, and would not unless absolutely forced. They could not at present push are £2 minimum, but they were keeping it in the forefront. It was what the Union was established for. Many abstained from joining the Union on account of the £2 minimum, but the principle was not compulsory, and would never be enforced until they were strong enough. Some of the salaries paid by the smaller companies in the provinces were really wicked, one company in a certain seaside resort getting a salary of £30 gross during Bank Holiday week. He instanced the case of the Actors' Association in Germany, which numbered 6,000, and which was so strong that, before putting anything into effect, managers had to go to them and ask them if they agreed. England, to all actors the world over, was the Mecca of their hopes; it was the hub of the dramatic world, and if they all put their heads together there was no reason why they should not only rival the German Association, but top it.

MR. G. H. CHILD said they had eight items on their agenda, and if actors were in favour of one single item, they had no excuse for not joining. The Actors' Union was started because it was wanted. The Actors' Association was started because no such thing existed; but the A.U. was started not because no such thing existed, but because it was what was wanted. The A.U. hoped to do something for the right-minded actor and actress's welfare. No member, he was convinced, joined the Union for what he or she could get out of it, but in order to put the profession on a better footing. With regard to ladies on the committee it was hardly necessary to make a rule on the subject at all. Why not leave it an open question, and let ladies be nominated at the general meetings, and let the majority decide? They all felt that, at some time or other, amalgamation with the Actors' Association was bound to come. They ran practically on the same lines, and the friendly rivalry between the two bodies resulted in them both doing their best to get members. As an instance of the low state to which the profession had fallen, he related a case in which an American manager advertised for artists, and had any number of replies, one of which came from a lady, who wrote, "If you will find dresses I will come for 5s. a week." Such a thing would not be tolerated in America. Another manager advertised for a heavy man for the provinces, and had over three hundred replies, and out of those three hundred only one asked for more than £2 10s. With regard to striking, he did not suppose there was a member of the Union who would strike if he was told to, because he knew they did not join together in order to strike, but to be strong enough to make them think they could and would strike.

MISS FFOLLIOTT said it behoved every Unionist to refrain from asking very small salaries, as they were thereby going against their own interests. If only they would take heart of grace and ask more, the manager would realise that terms were going up. Whatever they asked, the manager would not have artists if he did not want them, and if they asked a small sum it was immediately thought that they judged themselves at that value. Let them demand a proper salary, and managers would begin to see the time had come to make an improvement. She had heard very good reports of the Union, and much satisfaction had been aroused at the number of engagements—fifty or more—that had been made through its medium.

In reply to a member, the chairman stated that their agency was not an agency pure and simple, but what they called an "open bureau." Facilities were afforded for entering the names and addresses of those out of engagement, and when a manager sent to the secretary for an artist, he asked every Unionist who came in if they knew of one, and if they did not he went out and found one. No charge whatsoever was made, except for the cost of a letter or telegram if either were used. He added that no engagement was ever negotiated under a salary of £2.

MR. LOYD asked by whom the idea that an actor worked only thirty weeks in the year was started? His own experience during the past five years showed an average of forty-two weeks in the year. He was speaking from the provincial point of view. If he could do that, why could not others?

The CHAIRMAN replied that there were more actors than shops to fill, and some only got ten weeks in the year. They had struck an average of the people in the profession, and they thought it was a fair estimate.

MR. LESTER said he was a non-member of the Union, but he had read every account which had appeared. He had formerly come to the conclusion that there was no unity among actors or actresses, and he was waiting to see how it turned out. He agreed with its principles, and had decided to become a member.

In answer to a member, the chairman said neither baggage-men nor carpenters had any right in the Union, even if playing parts. If any such had gained admission to the Society, it must have been during the early days, when less supervision was exercised. The chairman also announced that Dr. Marshall, of Douglas, had been appointed medical officer to the Actors' Union for that town, and that Mr. Horne, a dental surgeon of the same district, had agreed to attend to the teeth of members at a very reduced rate. They would be pleased to add other names to the list.

A very appreciative audience welcomed the initial production of the above new play, which—all things considered—went smoothly and satisfactorily. The drama is well written, and Mr. James Bell, by whom it is produced, is to be congratulated on the manner in which he has allotted the characters. The embodiment of the title-rôle is found in Flare-Flare, a music hall artist who is all the rage at the Crescendo Music Hall, Paris, where she is surrounded by the "smart set," amongst them being Phillipe D'Esterre, a man about town. Flare-Flare is so greatly attached to the man that, in order to save his life, which is threatened in consequence of his being unable to produce the money demanded by a Nihilist brotherhood to which he belongs, she sacrifices her honour. Before Flare-Flare arrives with the money which she has obtained from Prince Sergius Zoreski, the head of the Russian secret society, Phillipe D'Esterre, having received news that he has inherited a fortune, forthwith borrows the amount needed, and when "the Idol of Paris" arrives he casts her off, sternly rebuking her for her misconduct. Later Flare-Flare becomes still more popular under the name of Mme. Coralie, a prima donna, and in this character she arrives at the Château de Sancterre, where she is to sing for a charity. Here she unexpectedly encounters Phillipe, who is staying with his aunt, the hostess of the stately home, and his cousin, Victor Cashelle, who inherited from the same source and at the same time an equal fortune with Phillipe. The latter has quickly squandered his wealth, and has been befriended over and over again by his cousin. Victor, who has heard Coralie sing in Berlin, falls in love with her, and they become engaged. To frustrate their union Phillipe enters Caralie's bedchamber at night by means of a secret corridor, creates a disturbance, and arouses the house, whereupon Coralie is ordered from the Château. Victor, however, believes in her innocence, and marries her. She is again beset by Phillipe, who declares that he holds Victor's death warrant from the brotherhood—of which Victor is also a member—and in order to get possession of the document Coralie behaves in such a way as to be expelled from her husband's house. Ultimately Phillipe is found to be a traitor to the brotherhood and condemned to death. Victor hands him a revolver and Phillipe shoots himself. Flare-Flare returns just in time to prevent Victor committing suicide, and they are happily reunited.

Miss Annie Bell is admirably suited to the trying and difficult character which gives the play its name, her powerful and realistic acting commanding the highest commendation of her audience. In the thankless rôle of Phillipe D'Esterre Mr. Otto Minster is deserving of very high praise. He has a thorough conception of the character, and plays it well. Mr. Sidney Arnold as Victor Cashelle acts the part of a French aristocrat in praiseworthy style, and Prince Sergius Zoreski is portrayed in a stately manner by Mr. Arthur McCullock. Tartare, the younger brother of Victor, and his pretty little cousin, Ann, are capably impersonated by Mr. H. Vyvian Thomas and Miss Annie Megson respectively, much laughter being aroused by their droll antics. Rachel Bernhardt, a would-be actress, is amusingly portrayed by Miss Ethel Selby, as is also the part of Olympe Sosage by Miss Grace Noble; whilst as Mme. Sancterre, the hostess of the Château, Miss Esther Carthew is successful, and Mr. Norton Shields is a dignified family lawyer. Capitally staged, The Idol of Paris should take front rank among provincial attractions.

CHARGE AGAINST AN ACTOR.

At Darlington Police Court on Tuesday Charles Craston, actor, was charged with larceny of a manuscript book containing the part of the Rev. Basil Gortre, which he had filled in the dramatised version of Guy Thorne's famous novel, When it was Dark.

Mr. A. W. Smith, who prosecuted on behalf of T. Morton Powell, proprietor of the When It Was Dark company, playing at the Darlington Theatre Royal this week, opened by stating that when Craston was engaged it was specially mentioned that it was subject to a fortnight's notice on either side.

The company commenced the tour at Nelson, in Lancashire, last week, and Craston attempted to take his part, but he was not happy in it, was not letter-perfect, and did not "dress" the part properly.

On the Friday night he was given a fortnight's notice. He travelled from Lancashire to Darlington last Sunday, and on Monday interviewed Powell, and asked if he intended to withdraw the notice, but the manager refused.

Craston then declared that he would not go on again. Fortunately the manager was able to play the part himself, as nobody else would have been able to take it properly.

Before the performance Craston took away the basket containing his effects, and also took the manuscript part with the words of the Rev. Basil Gortre. He was charged with stealing that. The stage-manager asked him to give it up, but he said he would not.

Thomas Morton Powell, manager of the company, bore this out. He said that three weeks ago he engaged Craston to play the part of Basil Gortre. He was in Brighton at the time, and went up to London, and saw Craston at the Bodega. He was to receive four guineas a week.

"He asked how long the tour ran," continued Powell, "and I said we were like the brook, we ran for ever, so long as the tour would pay."

Every artist engaged by him was subject to a fortnight's notice on either side, and Craston understood this. He afterwards wired Craston from Brighton, engaging him.

Powell added that he was not present at Brighton, where the rehearsals took place, as he was away in Normandy on holiday. The value of the book nominally he had placed at 10s.

Cross-examined by Mr. J. F. Latimer for the defence, Powell said it was unusual for star artists to be engaged for a whole tour in the provinces.

He admitted that Craston rehearsed at Brighton at his own expense—that was customary—and that they had a good night at Nelson on the Saturday. Craston was not satisfactory, but the other parts were well sustained.

"Basil Gortre is the leading character in the whole of the play?" suggested Mr. Latimer.

"Not in our play," was the reply.

Edward Valentine, stage-manager, was asked by Mr. Latimer if he had a written contract with Mr. Morton Powell. After considerable verbal fencing with the solicitor he admitted that he told Craston at Brighton that he had not.

"Then why did you tell the Bench you might have, when you know you had not?" demanded the solicitor.

Arthur Clifton, business-manager, was also called, but the magistrates asked Mr. Smith not to labour the case too much, and he was allowed to stand down.

Detective Hedley said he arrested Craston the previous night, and charged him with stealing the book. He replied: "I did not steal it; I had it handed to me. It is in my bag at home. He can have it with pleasure."

Craston then went into the box, and said he had been an actor for seventeen years, having started with Mr. Beerbohm Tree's company in 1890. Mr. Morton Powell engaged him for the entire present tour, and held out the inducement that he had toured the piece for eighteen months, with only two weeks out.

"My playing went with the audience," continued Craston. "I had from thirty to thirty-eight rounds of applause from Monday to Friday night at Nelson, and on Saturday night I had forty-two."

He characterised Powell's statement that his playing was unsatisfactory as "a trumpery fabrication." The manager, by giving him notice, violated the agreement, and he would have been perfectly justified in not playing at Nelson on Saturday night. Mr. Powell was not there, so he waited until he had interviewed him at Darlington.

"I have been straightforward and manly," declared Craston, thumping the desk with dramatic force, "and perhaps that is why he did not understand me. There are so many sycophants in the profession."

"Don't make a speech, Mr. Craston," implored his solicitor.

The book of words, Craston then pointed out, was not amongst the things he took from the theatre. It was at his lodgings. "It is no use to me," he continued, scornfully. "Look at it—a penny exercise book."

Fortnightly engagements, he informed Mr. Smith, might be "all very well for small-part people." He admitted that Valentine asked him for the book in a friendly way. Powell had insulted him, and made a convenience of him; and, in a moment of anger, he made use of a remark that did not become him. They were only foolish words—he had no intention of destroying the book. He came to Darlington intending to play the part if he could come to an arrangement with Powell.

Mr. Latimer, in the course of his address to the Bench, pointed out that Craston was an actor of considerable experience, and of a fair reputation. He could produce any number of testimonials to his abilities and high character in the plays he had been engaged in.

There was a bona fide dispute as to the terms of the engagement. If that engagement was broken, he was justified by law in leaving immediately.

Craston was arrested in the Market-place the previous night, and, if it had not been for a good friend, would have had to pass the night in the cells. That friend had to deposit £20 with the police as bail.

Personally, he had never known an action in which use had been made of the criminal law in that way. It was a private dispute between two men. He might, under civil law, have wrongfully detained that book.

If he was found guilty of a common theft it damned and blasted his character. He raised the point of law that he was wrongfully charged. The charge was common larceny, whereas, if anything, it should have been "larceny as bailee."

The Clerk pointed out that he had not yet been charged, and Mr. Latimer observed that he ought legally to have been charged at the close of the evidence for the prosecution.

Finally he appealed to the Bench to do justice to Craston, who was entitled in civil law to keep the book until the dispute had been settled.

After a short retirement of the justices, the Mayor (Mr. T. Bates) asked if Craston was willing to give up the book, and Mr. Latimer replied that it had already been handed over to the police.

"Then we have decided to dismiss the case, and say he leaves the Court without a stain on his character," concluded the Mayor.

"I am obliged to your worships," observed Mr. Latimer.

STAGE STAFF GOSSIP.

Mr. William Johnson, secretary N.A.T.E., has been appointed to represent that Society at the Trade Union Congress to be held in Bath, beginning on Sept. 2 and sitting the five following days. Mr. J. B. Williams will represent the Musicians' Union, and it is rumoured that the Actors' Union will be also represented.

A special report on the Award and the Arbitration proceedings is being issued this week by the Stage Employees' Society. Members of the staff in theatres and music halls may obtain a copy on application to the Secretary at 29, Wellington-street, Strand.

The Sports accounts, with names of those who sold tickets and the amount, is given in another column.

On Thursday last, Aug. 8, the employees of Mr. A. E. Pickard, Britannia Panopticon, Glasgow, held their second annual staff outing. It is generally the custom for these trips to be held on a non-working day, and Mr. Pickard, in closing his establishment for the entire day showed generosity, for, in addition to closing his house, the whole of the expenses incurred were borne by him. The company (employees only), which numbered 107, entrained at St. Enoch Station, Glasgow, in special saloon carriages, and proceeded to Robbie Burns country, the Auld Toon o' Ayr being the place settled upon.

On arrival, the Ayr Arms Hotel was made the headquarters for the day. During the forenoon several slight rain showers fell, but not enough to damp the ardour of the trippers in the slightest. Towards midday the weather cleared, and the remainder of the day was spent under the most favourable weather conditions. Dinner was served in sumptuous style, and the company was presided over by Mr. and Mrs. Pickard, the genial proprietor and his wife.

The customary toasts were pledged, and Mr. Pickard, in a well-chosen speech, thanked the staff for their untiring efforts to make the Old Britannia the gigantic success as it had been during the time of his proprietorship. Further, it gave him the greatest pleasure to see those of his employees who were with him on that day enjoying relaxation from work. A unanimous vote of thanks was passed by Mr. Edmunds, the manager to Mr. Pickard, for his generosity in providing such an enjoyable day's outing. After dinner the party visited all the places of interest in the home of Scotland's bard, viz., the monument to his memory and the cottage where he lived, and also the Auld Brig o' Doon. At each of these places all the members of the staff were photographed. Returning to the hotel, tea was served in good style, after which a hearty vote of thanks was unanimously passed to the host and hostess (Mr. and Mrs. Dickie), proprietors of the hotel, whose catering was of the very best. Glasgow was again reached shortly after ten o'clock.

Conferences on the Award are taking place between the Arbitrator and representatives of the Managers and the Employees' Association. On Tuesday a meeting was held in the Board of Trade offices between the Arbitrator, Mr. Henry Tozer, Mr. Walter Gibbons, Mr. Walter Payne, Mr. Rutland (solicitor to the Proprietors' Association), and Mr. William Johnson (general secretary of the National Association of Theatrical Employees). Mr. C. Jesson, L.C.C., secretary of the Musicians' Union, was also present. The Arbitrator deferred his decision on most of the points raised.

One question was settled. A complaint had been made that certain local managers were insisting upon their staff remaining until 12 o'clock midnight on Saturdays to help in removing, as part of the work of the show, the artists' scenery. It was stated by the manager alleged to be at fault that he had given explicit instructions that after the curtain was down and the stage cleared the work of the nightmen was at end, and that any work they did for the artists was at their own option. This statement was accepted as satisfactory to the employees. The question of the reinstatement of the men not yet absorbed was the most important of the questions discussed, and there is very strong feeling on the matter among the employees.

The second annual outing of the staff of the Palace Theatre, Carlisle, took place on Sunday last, and proved an immense success. Taking the 8.30 train to Penrith, the company adjourned to the Crown Hotel, where an excellent and well-served breakfast awaited them. After the repast the company took coach to Porley Bridge, and spent a most enjoyable time. Boating, swimming, and climbing the adjacent mountains were popular forms of recreation and amusement. Returning to Penrith, the company again sojourned to the Crown Hotel, and proved quite ready for the capital dinner provided for them.

Mr. A. E. Nicholls, the popular acting-manager, proposed "Success to the Firm," a toast which met with the utmost enthusiasm. Mr. Hinchliff, the musical director, proposed, in a neat and well-timed speech, the health of Signor Pepi, the managing-director, and the manner in which it was received left no doubt as to the feeling of the staff towards their courteous and able chief. Signor Pepi, who had motored over, replied, and considered the success of the Palace was due chiefly to the appreciation of their duties and loyalty of every member of the staff. After a visit to the numerous places of interest in the town the company returned home, arriving about 10 p.m., all thoroughly well-pleased with the delightful time they had spent.

The staff of the Holloway Empire had their annual outing on Sunday last, the place chosen for the present year being Margate. An exceptionally enjoyable day was spent, the party returning to Holloway about 11.30. A vote of thanks was returned to Mr. William Gazzard for the able and excellent manner in which he had catered for the comfort and accommodation of the employees and guests. Mr. C. W. Adams, the resident-manager, and Mrs. Adams were guests of the party.

MISS WINNIE VOLT IN DUBLIN.

A NEW COMEDIENNE.

A SWEET VOICE. COMEDY POWERS OF A HIGH ORDER.

Miss Winnie Volt, who undertook the title-rôle last evening, is a winsome young actress, possessing a sweet voice, comedy powers of a high order, and irresistible naïveté. She secured the admiration of her audience at the outset, and held it with increasing power till the end.—Irish Times.

ACTING, VOCALISM, AND DANCING WERE FASCINATING.

Miss Winnie Volt sustained the part of Phyllis—she did so superbly. Her acting, vocalism, and dancing were fascinating and of a high order. The pasages . . . were indescribably mirth-provoking.—Freeman's Journal.

ENTHUSIASTICALLY APPLAUDED.

The title-rôle was gracefully filled by Miss Winnie Volt, who as Phyllis—a sort of Cinderella of the family—acted, sang, and danced in quite a winning way. She was enthusiastically applauded, and well deserved the high opinions formed of her.—Dublin Express

"LIFE'S UNDERSTUDIES."

London: T. Sealey Clark and Co.

Sidelights are frequently cast upon the profession with more or less accuracy in novels which deal with the stage, but Miss Rozant gains the reader's confidence by prefacing her latest work with a phrase from the Scriptures:—"We speak that we do know and testify that we have seen." It may be hoped, nevertheless, that the moral code of touring companies rises superior to that of the Hearts and Diamonds company, with which the tale is chiefly concerned, and that delicacy in speech and manner is held in much higher respect. The novel is by no means a "one-part" story, but the interest chiefly revolves round Kate Daventry, the leading lady of a second-rate touring company, who years ago had been parted from her lover through a misunderstanding. Subsequently the young actress arouses the admiration of Bob Daventry, a member of the company, who, despite the fact that Kate has forfeited her honour, proposes to marry her and is accepted. Daventry loses his reason, and becomes an inmate of a lunatic asylum, and shortly afterwards Kate, who has given out that her husband is dead, meets her former admirer in the person of Vivian Blake, the proprietor of the Hearts and Diamonds touring company. The old lover renews his suit, but Kate refuses to be false to her husband. Years afterwards, when Miss Daventry has obtained a position as a London star, Bob Daventry recovers his reason and returns to his wife. He learns that Blake is still living, and realising that it is to that man that Kate's affections are given, determines to sacrifice himself by proving that his own marriage with her, which took place in Scotland, was illegal. He takes pains to find out that as the pair had only resided in Scotland a few days before the wedding, the ceremony was thus invalid, and in the end hands Kate over to Vivian Blake and emigrates. Probably the best written and certainly the most thrilling episode in the book is the account of the farewell between Kate and Daventry on the latter's departure for Australia. Kate accompanies Bob to the railway station and watches him as he falls in line with the crowd of passengers:—

"Save for the bright flush in his cheeks, he betrayed no sign of what she knew he was going through, and it struck the girl all at once as it had never done before, that, sane man, lunatic, or whatever he might be, first and foremost, Bob Daventry was a man. If there was one quality in a human being which appealed to Kate more than another, it was pluck, and for the next half-hour Vivian Blake and Cecil had for her no existence, but the whole essence of her being went out to the man who was taking himself for good and all out of her life because he loved her. The truth flashed suddenly into her mind as she stood there waiting, and watched the tall, thin figure and hunkered shoulders. He turned at last and looked into her speaking eyes, and for the first and only time in eight years the two really understood each other.

"They passed the barrier while the girl clung to the man's arm. The train was due to start in fifteen minutes. Passing right down the platform to the front of the train, where the crowd was not so great, the couple stood in front of a compartment where there were some vacant seats.

"When they stopped, 'Bob,' said Kate, with heaving breath, 'I'm coming out to you.'

"'No, Kitty, you're not,' very quietly. 'It's too late. This is good-bye. But thank God, you understand before we part. Kiss the little chap for me. I should like to have seen him again. I'm sorry you told him I was dead. S'sh! my dear! Don't break down now, for God's sake!'

"The girl's heart was full to bursting, but she controlled herself at once and did not cry. It seemed to be an altogether different man she was looking at to the old Bob of years ago.

"They stood in silence for some minutes, the man's arm around her shoulders.

"'I must be getting in, my dear,' he said presently. 'Good-bye, Kitty!'

"She raised her face to his, and for a few seconds upon that crowded London platform those two were lip to lip and heart to heart as they had never been before in all the long time they had known each other.

"'Take your seats, please! Take your seats!' came the loud sharp voice of the guard.

"The girl's arms fell limp away from Bob's neck, and he entered the carriage and sat down as quietly as if he had been going for a day's seaside excursion. She fastened her eyes hungrily upon his face, as with his old charming smile he apologised to a woman sitting next him for stumbling against her as he entered, then turned his look to Kate outside.

"'My God!' she muttered. 'My God! Don't let me break down till he's gone!'

"She looked and smiled at Bob, and he looked and smiled back at her.

"Five minutes before the train started.

"Sobs and kisses and sad good-byes around them both. Four minutes—three minutes—two minutes—one minute!—Great Heavens! would the guard never wave his flag?

"A man leaning from a railway carriage window and smiling with a wan, brave face.

"'Good-bye, little woman! Good luck!'

"A slender girl running along the platform and trying to keep up with a rushing train.

"'Good-bye, my boy! To meet again! Good-bye!' And then with wild, convulsive sobs, poor Kate broke down at last and cried as she had seldom cried before."

More than one chapter is devoted to an indictment of the theatrical agent, who is represented in a baneful light, and characteristic scenes of touring life, highly coloured, perhaps, form amusing reading. The story, though a little discursive, is well written, and has entertaining qualities that serve to keep the reader engrossed.

THE MOODY-MANNERS COMPANY.

Mr. Charles Manners' experiment in bringing sixty-five of the Sheffield choristers to assist his present chorus at the Lyric Theatre is proving a great success, and the warm reception given to the representation of Aïda on Monday may be taken partly as a well-deserved compliment to the lusty singers of the Ridings. The impresario's real object in inviting them was to prove to the people of London that there was plenty of material in England for grand opera. These choristers have previously assisted the Moody-Manners Opera Company in the provinces, but this is the first time that any manager has brought a whole body of provincials and placed them on the boards of London. Mr. Manners tells us he is losing, but he always manages to make money in the provinces, and yet in London, where one would expect the demand to be greater, the public will not patronise English grand opera to anything like the same extent. For enthusiasm and heartiness the audiences at the Lyric are not to be easily excelled, and the rapt attention with which every note is followed betokens the enjoyment of every music-lover in the house. The performance of Aida, already referred to, was one of conspicuous excellence, and reached a standard that shed lustre on English lyric art. Mr. Joseph O'Mara as Radamès sang with considerable fervour and tenderness, being highly complimented early in the first act on his rendering of "Celeste Aida" ("Heavenly Aida"). Madame de Vere-Sapio, who seems to go from triumph to triumph, enchanted all by the purity of her singing of the difficult but always grateful music of the heroine—both artists receiving several calls after the magnificent love duet. Miss Toni Seiter, for whom an apology was made on account of a cold, warmed to her work as Amneris, and won a legitimate dramatic triumph in her expression of the despair of Amneris at the fate of Radames. Mr. Lewys James—whose make-up might have been better—was a dramatic and powerful representative of Amonasro; Mr. Charles Magrath was entirely satisfactory as the King of Egypt; and Mr. Charles Manners as the Priest was sonorous and dignified, his fine basso being heard with the greatest satisfaction.

Tuesday night's representation of Faust at the Lyric Theatre was made exceptionally interesting by the fine interpretation of the title-rôle by Mr. John Coates, who was enthusiastically applauded for his rendering of "O dwelling pure and lowly" in the garden scene. The Marguerite of Miss Kate Anderson was girlish, and she sang the music very prettily. Mr. Manners was again an admirable Mephistopheles, and Mr. Dene an exceptionally good Valentine. Mr. Harrison Frewin conducted. Tannhäuser was given on Wednesday evening, and Lohengrin on Thursday, with Mme. Sobrino as Elsa.

ACTORS v. AUTHORS.

Actors returned victorious from the field on Thursday, when their match with the Authors at Lord's resulted in the latter being defeated by sixty runs and half-a-dozen wickets. The literary side, who were captained by Major Philip Trevor, batted first, and scored a total of 253. Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, a pillar of the M.C.C. provincial team, and the discoverer of Sherlock Holmes, was caught out for four, and Mr. E. W. Hornung, the well-known novelist, who had something to do with the creator of Raffles, cricketer and cracksman, went in last and carried out his bat for a modest seven. Major F. G. Guggisberg made a notable stand for the losers, and succeeded in passing a half-century.

Mr. C. Aubrey Smith, as in the recent match against the provincial players at the Oval, captained the Actors, for whom Mr. B. S. Foster, one of the famous cricketing family, scored 100. We are glad to find that Mr. V. O'Connor, who has always been a consistent scorer at Actors' matches, has returned to form, and contributed a well-played 51, his hits including six 4's. Mr. H. E. Pearce made a useful 39, and to the total of 253, which was made up in an hour and thirty-five minutes, Mr. H. Wilde and Mr. Aubrey Smith, neither of whom were out, contributed 48 and 15 respectively. The scores were as follows:—

THE ACTORS' ASSOCIATION.

At the Council meeting of the Association, held at the offices on Tuesday, there were present: Mr. Fredk. Morland (chairman), Messrs. Arthur Applin, Cecil Brooking, C. F. Collings, H. Athol Forde, Roy Horniman, and Chas. Cruikshanks, secretary. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed.

The hon. solicitors reported that they had had an interview with a member and advised her. The hon. solicitors also reported that they threatened proceedings unless a certain claim was settled, but had received no reply to their letter.

The secretary drew attention to the desirability of the Council considering matters in connection with the Agency Department. It was agreed that the discussion of the subject should stand over until next week, and a whip should be issued to the members of the Council. Mr. Arthur Applin stated that at the next meeting he should bring forward a proposition in connection with the question.

Miss Lucy Sibley was elected to fill the vacancy on the Council caused by the retirement of Miss Georgina Hamilton.

The secretary reported that in answer to the circular letter sent out to various golf clubs asking for reduced rates, he had received many replies. Some clubs offered free use of their links, and some were willing to reduce their fees by half for the benefit of the members of the A.A. Others offered a considerable reduction, while in some cases the fees were already too small to admit of abridgment. The secretary was directed to prepare a temporary list, showing the clubs who had agreed to reduce their fees, &c., such list to be exhibited in the general office.

The secretary stated he should be away from the next three council meetings, but in the meantime he would, according to custom, request the manager of the bank to honour Mr. Rivington's signature to cheques.

The report of the "Social" Committee was received, and the secretary was directed to ask the hon. secretary for some explanation as to the reason why the meeting fixed for July 19 last was abandoned or otherwise.

Maud Stuart and Edith Tasca Page were nominated for election to the A.A.

It was decided that a report should be prepared to be placed on the table at the next meeting, showing the number of managers who had applied to the Agency Department during the past twelve months, and the number of managers who had been supplied during the same period.

Two former members were reinstated. The Suggestion Book was considered, and an entry made.

AT the Pier Pavilion Theatre, St. Anne's-on-Sea, Mr. Leslie has made a popular booking in securing Mr. Chas. Macdona's company in A Chinese Honeymoon, which had a good reception from a crowded house. Deserving of special mention are Miss Kitty Clayton as Fi-Fi; Miss May Davis as Mrs. Pineapple; Mr. E. Sefton as Mr. Pineapple; Miss Alma Bolton as Mrs. Brown; Mr. Lindsay Harman as Hi-Lung; Miss May Stevenson as Soo-Soo, and Misses Davis and Ross as Florrie and Violet.

THE success of Mr. Robert Courtneidge's company at the Eastbourne Pier Pavilion in The Dairymaids on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday in last week was a record for that house, hundreds being turned away at each performance and the booking plan being closed each day some hours before the time of commencement.

MR. EDITOR, SIR,—Your Sheffield correspondent, in his notice of the Grand Hippodrome, alludes to my military incident, Sniped, as a comic sketch. I beg to say the performers did not play the piece as a "comic sketch," neither did the audience receive it as such.—Yours faithfully, C. CASE-HORTON, Aug. 10.

AT the conclusion of his My Sweetheart summer tour, at Salford on Saturday, Miss Lizzie Hall (Mrs. Sydney Spenser), who has been playing Tina, was the recipient of two handsome floral tokens from the members of the company, who also presented a valuable silver-mounted Panama cane and a large box of cigarettes to Mr. Spenser. The tour has been a happy and successful one all through, and at Salford the matinée on the 7th inst. was a record one.

AN adjourned sitting for public examination was held on Wednesday in the case of Arthur E. H. Eliot, described as of Onslow-gardens, S.W. The accounts showed liabilities £6,253, of which £2,653 was expected to rank, and no available assets. It appeared that the debtor had previously failed in December, 1895, and again in July, 1899, after having been for a short time lessee of a London theatre, and previously partner in a dental therapeutic business. From July, 1899, to June, 1901, he was engaged as an actor, and afterwards served in the South African Field Force. After hearing the debtor, and Mr. Frank Mellor on his behalf, his honour adjourned the sitting sine die.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1907.
To anyone connected with the stage, from the call-boy to the "star," and from the electrician to the manager, the "Era Annual" makes an appeal which it is very hard to resist. The number of stories and anecdotes contributed by well-known members of the theatrical profession are always bright, breezy, and fresh, and, as usual, the photographs are excellently reproduced. The calendar is arranged so as to give an interesting theatrical event, with the year of occurrence, for every day in the year. The tables of plays produced at the various London and provincial theatres provide an interesting story of successes and failures, and in every respect the Annual for 1907 is well up to the usual standard. It is published at one shilling by "The Era," at 5, Tavistock-street London.—Dublin Express. Jan. 28.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1907.
A welcome friend, with many old features as good as new, and with a selection of contributions in story form by theatrical celebrities.—Evening Standard and St. James's Gazette, Jan. 24, 1907.

CAUTION.
Re "The Mikado" and the other Operas by W. S. Gilbert and Arthur Sullivan.
In an Action brought in the High Court of Justice by Helen D'Oyly Carte against the Lessee of the Broadway Theatre, New Cross, and the Royal Bio-Radioscope Company, in respect of the Exhibition or Performance of extracts from the operas, "The Mikado" and "The Yeomen of the Guard," in singing pictures by a cinematophone, an Order was, on the 31st July, 1907, made for an Injunction perpetually restraining the Defendants from representing or causing to be represented the operas called "The Mikado" and "The Yeomen of the Guard," or either of them, or any part thereof, and also from performing, or causing or permitting to be performed, the music of the said operas, or either of them, or any part thereof.
In another Action by Helen D'Oyly Carte against the Eastbourne Pier Company, Limited, and the St. Louis Animated Picture Company, in respect of similar performances of extracts from "The Mikado," in singing pictures by a chronophone, an Order was on the 31st July, 1907, made for an Interim Injunction restraining the St. Louis Animated Picture Company, until after the trial of the Action or until further order, from representing, or causing to be represented, the opera "The Mikado," or any part thereof, and also from performing or causing or permitting to be performed the music of the said opera, or any part thereof; and the Defendants, The Eastbourne Pier Company, Limited, also gave an undertaking in similar terms to this Injunction.
I HEREBY GIVE NOTICE that the rights of public representation or performance of the music and words of all the operas by W. S. Gilbert and Arthur Sullivan are reserved. Any public representation or performance of any of the operas, or portions of them, whether by gramophone or chronophone, or any other instrument reproducing records taken of the music and words of such operas, is an infringement of those rights.
AND I FURTHER GIVE NOTICE that proceedings will be forthwith taken against all persons giving, or assisting in giving, any such performance or representation of the words or music of such operas.

THE LAW OF COPYRIGHT
FOR ACTOR AND COMPOSER.
Mr. A. A. Strong has published a book on "The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer," which should be in the hands of everyone who is obliged to know about this perplexing subject. Dramatic copyright in England is in a particularly unsatisfactory state, and it is much to be hoped that ere long some more rational method of securing protection for a play may be devised than the slovenly and sometimes costly "production for copyright purposes," which is at present required.—St. James's Gazette.

THE ERA

THE ACTOR'S HEALTH.

The excellent health which the actor usually enjoys is one of the best reasons for the popularity of the profession. When we contrast its statistics with that of many callings which have the reputation of being much less "trying," it is found that the actor enjoys remarkable advantages. Nor is this surprising when we regard the regularity of his hours of employment and their shortness. Practically, an actor is only occupied for four hours each day, and those the least valuable for the culture of physical well-being. He has to arrive at his place of business with all the punctuality of a bank-clerk, and can make certain of leaving it with much more exactness to the appointed hour.

Nor is an actor's calling in itself injurious to health. Nothing can well be a greater strain upon the nerves than the anxieties of a first night; but after a few repetitions the performance of a part becomes almost automatic; that is to say, the mind reproduces the impressions which it has received while the character was being created and conceived. We are sure that most actors will agree with us that the ordinary exertion of their faculties on the stage has, so far from an injurious, a beneficial effect on them. The combination of well-regulated excitement with a heated atmosphere is calculated to open the pores very freely indeed; and the amount of exercise taken in the course of an evening is considerable. It is a miracle that the actor does not catch cold more frequently in the course of his work; but it must be remembered that his transition from the dressing-room to the stage is short, and that all the time he is in a condition of nervous activity.

The actor, again, has the advantage of the active use of his lungs. The delivery of a number of sentences in a carefully pitched voice is a different thing from the ordinary languid drawing-room delivery: and as for the light comic-opera people, they are trained in the healthy exercise of the lungs. As an instance of what may be done by exercise, a well-known actress informed us some—we are not ungallant enough to say how many—years ago that she had lost the whole of one lung, and did not expect to live long. Anyone who looks on her comely and cheerful countenance and hears her voice on the stage can judge how false has proved her expectation.

But the actor's chief advantage on the side of health is the time he has at his disposal for its cultivation. Whether in London or the provinces, he has, when a piece is once in full swing, practically the whole of his day at his disposal. The only drayback is that he is always, more or less consciously, holding himself in reserve for the evening. SOTHERN did himself serious harm by combining hunting with acting, and perhaps Mr. LEONARD BOYNE will tell us how he manages to do it and always turn up so "fit." Milder games, like cricket and golf, seem, as the doctors say, to be "indicated"; and we are pleased to know that these are growing more popular with the profession yearly. Week by week we have reports of matches at one or other of these pastimes; and besides this, there is a vast amount of practice. Football, we notice, is also indulged in; but it is a question whether it does not take too much out of an artist, besides endangering his valued limbs.

The actor's health suffers most, perhaps, in the provinces. There is nothing more trying to the character than a round of these provincial places when once one knows them by heart. The "lions," which it was so delightful to see on one's first visit, have become absolute bores. Then there are the iron-manufacturing towns, where everything is encompassed with blackness; and the chemical towns, where everything smells of alkalies; and the stolid, sleepy agricultural towns, where everybody seems to be absent. Cannot something be done to make the lot of the travelling actor happier in the less agreeable times of the year? Would it not be possible to have an actors' club-room in at least each principal city to which admission might be gained either by a small yearly subscription or by a nominal payment on entering the town? All that would be needed would be a comfortable room, a billiard table, the daily papers, and a fire; the actor's natural geniality would do the rest. When we consider that there are often two or three companies in a town at one time it will be seen that the thing, if it were taken up by actors, might easily be done at a profit—or, at any rate, so as to make both ends meet.

Meanwhile, every young man who is thinking of "taking to the stage" should prepare himself seriously for facing the most difficult of its problems—its periods of enforced idleness. Every actor should have a hobby; and it is surprising what excellent facilities present themselves for cultivating these in provincial towns. Sketching is afforded admirable opportunities; the collector of old furniture and "curios" comes across rare chances in his travels; and all the minor hobbies may be pursued with pleasure and profit. A game we regret is less common than it used to be is that of skittles. And why should not every company have its lawn-tennis players, its players at bowls, and its croquet-ites? We feel certain that managers both of theatres and of travelling companies would find it to their interest to promote such enterprises by every means in their power. Members have too much time on their hands and too little outlet for the exuberant energies; and the more the latter can be employed, the greater the harmony in the company. Even as things are, the theatrical profession is noted for the longevity of its members. In France, at any rate, as our excellent Paris correspondent pointed out last week, actors and actresses die at advanced ages. DERVAL, the famous actor, was 90 when he died; Mlle. CLAIRON departed this life at 79; DÉJAZET at 78; BOUFFÉ at 88; Mme. DORUS-GRAS at 91; Mlle. ROSE DUPUIS at 90; FRÉDÉRIC LEMAÎTRE at 76; LAFERRIÈRE at 76; GEFFROY, of the Comédie-Française, at 91; LAFONT at 72; LHÉRITIER at 76; HYACINTHE, famous for his talent and his long nose, at 73; CHOLLET, who created Le Postillon de Longjumeau, at 89; LATOUCHE at 81; LACRESSONNIÈRE at 73; RÉNIER at 75; RAVEL at 76; Mme. ARNOULD-PLESSIS at 74; GILBERT DUPREZ, the celebrated tenor, at 90; DELAUNAY at 79; GOT at 77; TALBOT at 84; and, recently, Mme. MARIE LAURENT at 78. A similar list could easily be compiled from the English stage.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—May I trouble your readers with a few words relating to my association with the Lyceum production of The Christian? They are as follows:

1. I hold the sole and exclusive licence of producing and representing the play direct from Mr. Hall Caine.
2. I supply and pay the salaries of a full and efficient company.
3. I supply all pictorial printing.
4. All announcements by my contract are to be as follows:—"Season by arrangement with Mr. Wentworth Croke."
5. I enter the Lyceum practically as a touring manager, as is now so often the case in London, by taking a percentage of the gross receipts, and paying all author's fees.

As to the reason of my association with the Lyceum management, as Messrs. Carpenter and Smith truly state, it is because I hold the sole performing rights of this play. I, therefore, cannot see a better reason for such association.

I shall be very much obliged if you will be so kind as to insert this letter.—Yours faithfully,
WENTWORTH CROKE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—Our attention has been called to a letter from Mr. Wentworth Croke referring to our production of The Christian.

When he sends forth announcements stating it is "Mr. Wentworth Croke's season," it is imperative for us to at once contradict them, as they give such a false impression.

We must once more make it clear that the entire management of the theatre and the absolute control as regards the production and the casting of the play is in our hands, and Mr. Croke has no voice in these matters at all. The agreement provides that the play shall be cast and produced by Mr. Ernest Carpenter, subject to the approval of Mr. Hall Caine. It was only on this understanding that Mr. Hall Caine consented to the performance of his new version here, and had it not been that Mr. Croke held an agreement as regards the acting rights Mr. Hall Caine would have dealt directly with us. How in the face of this Mr. Croke can justify his announcement "Mr. Wentworth Croke's Season," or suggest that he is in the same position as a touring manager, passes our comprehension.

We very much regret this friction, but it has not been of our seeking. We could not allow the impression to go forth that we have in any way allowed the control of this theatre or its productions to pass out of our hands.—Yours faithfully,
HENRY R. SMITH,
ERNEST CARPENTER.
The Lyceum Theatre.

CHARITY MATINEES.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—With regard to above, I think there seems to be a good deal of misunderstanding. In contracts nowadays there is always mentioned one matinée free, or as I prefer to call it, the weekly charity matinée. Now, I maintain this matinée cannot be claimed unless six evening performances are completed in one week—in other words, in an incomplete or broken week. You cannot be expected to give one or two evening performances in a week and the free matinée. In a broken week the matinée counts as a seventh. One evening performance and one matinée would be two sevenths. Say a manager in a ten weeks' tour wanted to give four or five matinées in one week and only one or two night performances, claiming that he was entitled to ten matinées in the ten weeks, and he could take them as he liked. Perhaps some of your readers will spill a little ink on the subject. Apologising for taking up your valuable space, yours truly, X. P.

MR. CARLTON WALLACE'S company is paying a return visit this week to the Theatre Royal, Ton-y-pandy, with The Love That Women Desire. Mr. Jno. Davidson is seen to advantage as Philip Carnaby; Mr. J. O. Stewart does well in the character of Squire Abingdon; Mr. Oliver Rogers does justice to the part of Richard Abingdon; Mr. Jno. Hignett shows considerable sense of humour as Dennis O'Rourke, being well assisted by Miss Winifred Barton as Pittie Swift; and Miss Aimee Grattan-Clyndes is satisfactory as Madge Abingdon, Sybil Thorburn finding an efficient representative in Miss Lallah Stanhope.

DEATH OF JOACHIM.

THE musical world has lost one of its most distinguished figures in the death of Dr. Joachim, the world-famous violinist, who died in Berlin on Thursday afternoon after a brief illness. Stricken by paralysis a few days ago, the condition of the sufferer became rapidly worse, and he passed away at a quarter to two in the afternoon.

Dr. Joseph Joachim was born near Presburg, in Hungary, of Jewish parentage, on July 15th, 1831, so that he has died in his seventy-seventh year. He had hardly begun to talk before his musical talent showed itself in an attempt to pick out his elder sister's songs on a toy fiddle. Encouraged by these signs his parents spared no pains or money to give him a good education, sending him in the first place to old Serwaczynski, the director of the opera at Buda Pesth. Such good progress did he make that at seven years of age he won the approbation of musical critics by playing in public a difficult set of variations on a Schubert waltz. In 1841 he went to Vienna and studied successively with Miska Hauser, G. Hellmesberger, the elder, and Boehm.

At twelve years of age he was sent to Leipzig, where he received some invaluable advice from Mendelssohn, and in the following year, when he travelled to London, it was with a note of recommendation from the great master. His first appearance in this country was at Drury Lane on March 28th, 1844, at a benefit given to Bunn, the impresario. Two months later he played Beethoven's Violin Concerto at a Philharmonic concert with Mendelssohn conducting, when he was hailed with rapture. Adult violinists were dismayed at the intellectual difficulties of this composition, but the boy of twelve played it with such inspiration that the applause which broke from the audience at every rest in the solo part almost unnerved him. From that time the great violinist became a regular visitor to this country, and three years ago, on the occasion of his attaining the sixtieth anniversary of his appearance amongst us, was presented at the Queen's Hall, where a notable gathering, which included Mr. Balfour, had assembled, with his portrait painted by Sargent. On November 25th following his first appearance in England, Joachim took part in a performance at the Gewandhaus, Leipzig, of Maurer's Concertante for four violins with Enst, Bazzini, and David, all very much his seniors. He remained at Leipzig for several years, continuing his studies under Mendelssohn's powerful influence and studying with David most of the classical works for the violin.

In 1849 Joachim accepted the position of leader of the Grand Duke's Band at Weimar. Here he met Liszt, who had given up his career as a pianist and was conducting operas and concerts. The violinist had the privilege of being present at the first production of Lohengrin, under Liszt's direction, and subsequently he met Wagner, who ranked him next to his friend Liszt as an artist. Joachim, however, had not much opinion of Liszt as a composer, and when Wagner also had criticised and attacked Mendelssohn in a pamphlet on "Judaism in Music," Joachim was annoyed, and his influence was thrown into the scale against that of Wagner in the upholding of the ideals of classical as against that of modern music. Another great master with whom Dr. Joachim came much into contact was Schumann, whom he had known since his youthful days. It was at Schumann's house that Joachim was paid a compliment by the celebrated composer. The two were sitting together one lovely evening watching the stars come out against the deepening blue of the sky. "I wonder," said Schumann, "whether beings exist up there who know how beautifully a little boy here below has just played the 'Kreutzer Sonata' with Mendelssohn."

Schumann was always kindly disposed towards the young violinist. In the year 1853 he went to Düsseldorf to play at a concert, and was greatly delighted at receiving a token of regard from the illustrious composer, couched in the kindest terms. It was a sonata composed by Schumann in conjunction with Dietrich and Brahms, and the inscription on the title-page was to the following effect: "In anticipation of the arrival of our honoured and beloved friend, Joseph Joachim, this sonata was written by Robert Schumann, Albert Dietrich, and Johannes Brahms." Needless to say Joachim preserved this as one of the greatest treasures of his early life.

After leaving Weimar, in 1854, Joachim became conductor of concerts in Hanover, where he married Amalie Weiss, the well-known and justly celebrated contralto singer, who predeceased him about eight years ago. In 1869 Joachim became a member of the Senate of the Berlin Academy, and was nominated Director of the School of Instrumental Music, in the newly-established conservatoire in that city. In 1877 he was given the Hon. Mus. Doc. Degree of Cambridge; Oxford followed in 1889 with the Hon. D.C.L. Degree. He was also an LL.D. of Glasgow. In 1882 he became conductor of the Royal Academy of Music in Berlin.

Dr. Joachim was also a successful composer, his best known works being those for his own instrument, the violin, the most notable being the Hungarian Concerto, on melodies resembling those played by gipsies, and heard in Joachim's boyhood. In addition to a long list of compositions for the violin, Dr. Joachim has also composed several charming Hebrew melodies for the viola and the piano. The world-famed Quartette, founded by him at Berlin in 1869, occupied a supreme position in the world of chamber music. During the whole of the time that the Quartette has been in existence Joachim occupied the post of leader and first violin. The Quartette was not heard in England till 1900, but the popularity of the combination was no less pronounced than in other parts of Europe. Like the truly great, Josef Joachim died a poor man. His body lies in the Royal Academy, at Berlin, of which institution he was president, and there also a memorial service will be held.

OWING to a programme error, the name of Miss Lillian Herries was associated with the part of Mary Barnard in our notice of A Broken Heart at Dalston Theatre last week. Miss Herries left A Broken Heart company in April, and since then has been appearing with Mr. Morton Powell as Countess Natalie Steinbach, the title-rôle in The Woman Who Gambles.

THE DRAMA IN PARIS.

PARIS, THURSDAY, Aug. 15.—The open-air playhouses—"Théâtres de la Nature" as we call them here—are becoming more and more patronised by those who dread stewing in a hot theatre, but who enjoy listening to a good play in a seat shaded by trees. The Théâtre de la Nature in Cauterets has just made a hit with La Velléda, a four-act piece in verse by M. Magre, although it cannot be denied that the artistic manner in which it was mounted contributed in a large measure towards its success. At the back of the stage is a mountain, and the stage scenery is so arranged that it blends with the surrounding trees and hills. The effect is truly magnificent, and nothing finer can be imagined than the appearance of Aphrodite on the before-mentioned mountain, with the white robes of the priests among the trees. The story is founded on Chateaubriand's "Martyrs," except that the author shows us two goddesses, Aphrodite, the goddess of love, and the goddess of Goodness, hitherto unknown to man. Both want to sway the sceptre, and Velléda dies, because she believed in Love. The work, which created a deep impression, was admirably acted by Mlle. Brille, a pathetic Velléda; by M. de Max, excellent in the rôle of an old woodcutter; and by Mmes. Faber and Mancini and MM. Soubé and Dupont.

As a proof of how these Théâtres de la Nature find favour with the public, I can mention that the famous Arènes de Lutèce will be turned into an open-air playhouse. The place is well known to English visitors to Paris. It is a Roman amphitheatre, discovered more than a year before the Franco-Prussian war. The Rue Monge was being pierced on the flank of the old University quarter, when the workmen, in digging the foundations of the new houses, laid bare old walls and a Roman arena. This was during the Second Empire, when everybody connected with Napoleon the Third's Court speculated in land. And for this reason the petitions of the antiquarians were disregarded, and the excavations were stopped only after one-half of these old remains had been brought to light. The speculators were jubilant, but some of the papers of the day protested against what they called an act of vandalism. But even this "half arena" is very big, and capable of seating something like three thousand people. M. Camille de Sainte-Croix, one of our most distinguished authors and dramatists, hit upon the happy idea of turning the old Roman amphitheatre into an al fresco playhouse; and the Municipal Council of Paris has granted him the concession to give performances there during the summer months. The place has, of course, to be put into thorough repair, which will require a not inconsiderable outlay of money. But, when thrown open to the public, it will prove one of the attractions of the capital. On account of its size, comedies cannot be produced there, but the Arènes de Lutèce will lend themselves admirably to spectacular plays.

M. MARCELIN DUCLOS, one of the prize-winners at the recent Conservatoire competition, has just been engaged by M. Gailhard, and will make his début in Rigoletto in the rôle of the jester, which secured him the first prize.

"LE CREPUSCULE DES DIEUX" will be the first important work produced at the Opéra under the new Messager-Broussan management. MM. Busser and Rabaud, the chefs d'orchestre, have started for Munich, where, by special favour, they will be allowed to attend the rehearsals of the beforementioned work, directed by M. Mottl.

A COUPLE of weeks ago we announced in these columns the engagement of Mlle. Jane Margyll at the Opéra. To-day it is with the utmost grief that I have to announce her death. Young, talented, sweetly pretty, this charming artist is also a victim of the dreaded appendicitis. Mlle. Margyll made a brilliant début at the Opéra-Comique in the rôle of Santuzza. From there she went to the Gaîté, managed by MM. Isola, where she appeared in Hérodiade. Two years ago she was engaged by M. Gailhard; and the new management was only too happy to retain her services. She will be deeply regretted by all her friends.

THE ambition of every French actress when she retires from the stage is to own a small country-house where she can grow flowers. Unfortunately, this ambition is not always gratified, for which reason the famous Actors' Home in Pont-aux-Dames has been founded, where at the present moment there is not a place vacant. For all that, no French actress ever dreams of emigrating, even should there be an opening for her in a strange country. She is rooted to her native soil. Yet I have come upon an exception. Mme. Rose Marie, widow of the well-known actor Boccage, and at one time a favourite actress, followed the advice of her friends and went to Brazil. This happened many years ago; and to-day she is at the head of an important hotel in Rio de Janeiro, and, as my informant puts it, "making a big pile." Tant mieux!

THE heat has proved too much even for Raffles. Mme. Réjane has wisely closed her house, with the intention of reopening it in the first week of September, of course with Raffles, which, for some mysterious reason, many of the good Parisians pronounce "Raphaels."

COQUELIN AINE, now touring in South America, will be back in Paris in the month of October. By that time M. Victorien Sardou will have finished the new piece he is writing for the Porte-Saint-Martin. It will be an historical work, for Mme. de Montespan and the woman Voisin are introduced therein. But M. Sardou, following Dumas the Elder example, takes such liberties with history that the uninitiated must not accept these "historical personages" without a grain of salt. For the benefit of those not familiar with French history, I therefore mention that La Voisin was one of the most horrible women on record. Soothsayer and cartomancienne, she sold poison to those who wanted to rid themselves of troublesome relatives. She was burnt in the year 1680, but not before she had compromised half the ladies and gentlemen of Louis XIV.'s Court. An important rôle in the new play has been assigned to M. Coquelin, and another to Mlle. Gilda Darthy, whom we shall be glad to welcome once more on the boards of the Porte-Saint-Martin.

APROPOS of M. Coquelin, I hear that there is a feud between him and M. Rostand, the author of Cyrano. It is all about the piece Chantecler. There were rumours of M. Coquelin playing the chief part in the disguise of a cock. But M. Rostand is erratic. He has altered his mind, and the monarch of the farmyard has been relegated to the background, and with it M. Coquelin. The bird has been replaced by a nightingale, which means that for the moment Chantecler is held in reserve for Mme. Sarah Bernhardt. I say "for the moment," because M. Rostand may—and will—probably alter his mind a few times before the work sees the footlights, supposing this interesting event ever takes place.

GORKI'S Dans les bas-fonds, which had an unprecedented success in the Fatherland, fell wofully flat in Paris. M. Halperine-Kaminsky, who translated the work into French, intends now to introduce us to another Russian dramatist, Léonide Andréef, the author of Sawwa, which, in the French version, will bear the title La Terre nue. It will probably be produced at the Théâtre de l'Œuvre.

"LE TOUR DU MONDE D'UNE MIDINETTE" is the title of a musical play by MM. Pierre Decourcelle and Louis Varney, to be brought out in the course of next season.

THE Prince of Wales and Prince Edward of Wales witnessed the performance of The Merry Widow at Daly's Theatre on the 9th inst.

VARIETY GOSSIP.

Mr. Gus Elen will sail from Liverpool for New York on Thursday by the liner Baltic. This week he has been delighting Liverpudlians with a nightly change of répertoire, and both his present and past successes have been appreciated in the most hearty fashion. Mr. Elen has been the recipient of many letters from his admirers, containing not only the most flattering testimonials to his talent, but heartfelt wishes for his success across the sea. Costerdom has been idealised for the Yankee by Mr. Albert Chevalier. Mr. Elen will represent the merchant of the gutter in his habit as he lives, moves, and has his being. We join his many friends in wishing him bon voyage.

Mr. Bransby Williams is making flying visits to ten different towns next week, giving recitals at each of them. After this strenuous labour, in which, of course, the young actor delights, he will join his family at his seaside home, Elsinore, near Selsey Bill, for two weeks. He will shortly be visiting America, where he has had many flattering offers to stay, but is unable to accept them in consequence of his contract with Mr. Stoll at the Hippodrome at Christmas, and other numerous engagements.

Mr. H. G. Pelissier and his companions, known as that popular coterie The Follies, are coming early in September to Terry's, where laughter has ruled during the last few months with the culture of Mrs. Wiggs's Cabbage Patch. Mr. Pelissier promises us another travesty of Hamlet, and though we are prepared for something fresh and funny, we shall be surprised, indeed, if we get anything so truly quaint and humorous as Sir W. S. Gilbert's Rosencrantz and Guildenstern. From past experience of their operatic skits we should derive much hilarity from the Follies' parody of Tschaikowsky's overture "1812," which is also promised.

"Humanity" Lawson, always a great favourite with Hackney audiences, will go one better next week by presenting his three great successes, Humanity, The King's Minister, and The Monkey's Paw, during the week at the Empire. All Mr. Lawson's sketches are elaborately mounted. The gowns the ladies wear are by Worth, of Paris, and the furniture used is valued at £300.

Some years ago there arrived in London a clever trio known as the Sisters Hawthorne, who gave us that dainty fancy, The Willow Pattern Plate, at the Oxford. Two of the sisters have for a long time confined their activity to the American stage; but the third, Miss Lil Hawthorne, stayed in England to acquire greater fame on her own account. She is no stranger to Hackney, where on her last visit it will be remembered she especially distinguished herself by use of an expedient which has been copied far and wide. What time she sang "Rosie O'Grady," a fresh, boyish voice would respond from the gallery with an unexpected chorus.

Mr. Frank Parker, the stage director of the Hippodrome, has been telling an interviewer how the redecorations of that magnificent building are to be accomplished. "The men who are to renovate the ceiling," he said, "will work on a staging slung from the roof, and as there will be no noise connected with the painting operations, we shall be able to carry these on during the performances. Travelling cradles will facilitate the work round the circles, and we shall be employing about five hundred men." The quantity of material to be absorbed in the process will include £1500 worth of gold leaf, 24,640lb. of white lead, 18,000 yards of velvet, and 3000 square yards of carpeting.

The fourteenth ordinary general meeting of the Palace Theatre shareholders was held at the theatre on Thursday. The report showed a profit for the year ended July 26 of £21,352. This sum is reduced to £16,552 15s. 6d. by extra expenditure in connection with the L.C.C. alterations, &c., but is increased to £26,750 by the amount brought forward from the last account. The directors propose to pay a dividend of 12½ per cent. for the year, and to leave £15,500 to be carried forward.

At the meeting Mr. T. Ernest Polden, in moving the adoption of the report, said that the high position that the Palace had reached had been more than maintained during the past year. It was a unique fact that during the present management they had had the honour of a visit from His Majesty the King, and on two occasions from Her Majesty the Queen and the Prince of Wales. They thought it was a singular compliment that Her Majesty the Queen should have visited this theatre twice almost within a year, and, were it necessary, it was corroborative of the fact (of which they had always boasted) that the Palace was a house to which ladies could always come without the slightest fear of meeting with anything offensive or vulgar. Sir John Runtz thought the directors had adopted the proper course by strengthening the reserve, and thereby preparing for the rainy day which he hoped would not come. Sir E. Galsworthy remarked that the management of the company had been excellent.

Mr. Tom Jones, the original Welsh comedian, has just returned from his holidays, having spent an excellent time in Germany, Denmark, and Sweden. Curiously enough, his knowledge of Welsh helped him considerably in these countries. Mr. Jones has been secured by Mr. Oswald Stoll, and opens at Newport on Sept. 2.

Miss Jessie Preston will shortly produce three new songs, "I can't forget auld Reekie," published by Francis, Day, and Hunter (the march song of the year), and "Maggie Schneider," both by J. F. Lambe; also "Wee Willie Winks' sister," a reply to Harry Lauder's "Saftest o' the family," written for the old Glesca lassie by the great comedian himself.

Striking novelties will be added to the Empire programme on Monday. These include Mr. Charles Reinsch, the Tabarino Trio, and the Three Meers. Mr. Reinsch, who comes with a great Continental reputation, will introduce a novel horse and dog act, in which several highly-trained animals will take part. The Tabarino Trio provide a high-class vocal entertainment, while the Three Meers, whose names are already famous in the variety world, will present a novel comedy performance. Sir Roger de Coverley and the amusing sketch, Man, the Brute, still remain features in the programme.

One of those unexpected incidents that sometimes occur in theatres happened at the Hippodrome on Tuesday afternoon last. Powell's ponies were going through their act, when the Hippodrome black cat unexpectedly sauntered into the ring. At once the animals ceased their performance, and stared with amazement at the intruder. Miss Powell endeavoured to get the ponies to go on with their show, but all to no purpose. The cat had entirely upset the routine of their performance, and they struck work at once, with the result that the act had to be brought to an abrupt termination.

Owing to the success of the Sunday Concerts at the Britannia, Messrs. Macnaghten and Barrasford have been enabled to arrange for about 1000 of the poor children of Hoxton for a day's outing. It is proposed to take them for a drive into the country, give them a good meal, and arrange sports, etc., for their amusement. The first contingent will go on Sunday, Aug. 25th.

Mr. Charles Mussett sails for New York next Wednesday, per White Star liner Majestic, from Southampton.

Mr. Thos. F. O'Brien, who was for over ten years connected with the Opera House, and has now been appointed manager of the Palace Theatre, Cork, was on Saturday evening made the recipient of a valuable gold watch—a presentation from the manager and staff of the Opera House. Mr. John Horgan bore tribute to Mr. O'Brien's excellent qualities, and Mr. O'Brien, in reply, thanked his friends for their kindness, and acknowledged the pleasant years he had spent while associated with the Opera House.

Mr. O'Brien has already taken over the management of the Palace Theatre, which reopens on Sept. 2 with a programme of exceptional variety and strength. Since this popular place of entertainment closed it has been redecorated, reupholstered, and altered, and improved in many ways.

Mr. Charles Beanland, manager of the Waterloo Pierrots, took his fourth annual benefit at the Summer Gardens, Bridlington, on Friday, Aug. 9, when the Mayor and Mayoress and Deputy-Mayor were present. The Mayor, in a speech, referred to Mr. Beanland in glowing terms. Amongst the numerous presents received by the beneficiare were a beautiful silver-mounted umbrella, a case of pipes, a cigar case, a cigarette case, and a box of cigarettes, &c. It was a record house, admission being refused before 7.30.

Miss Lillie Lassah, the rising young serio, who made such a success at the Crystal Palace pantomime last Christmas, has been engaged by Mr. Bannister Howard to play the principal boy in his forthcoming production of Aladdin at Plymouth, and thence to Bath. This young lady has been making great headway in the provinces lately, return dates being given to her wherever she has appeared.

Miss Maude May Murray appeared at the Hippodrome, Barry Dock, on Monday last for the first time since her accident, and Mr. Arthur Carlton was most careful to secure a special wire, which worked perfectly, consequently a brilliant success was secured, and the audience became most enthusiastic.

Mr. H. A. Moore, the well-known mimic, has recovered from his severe illness, and has been combining business with recuperation at Brighton prior to his current town engagement. In addition to the mimetic portion of his entertainment, he has successfully exploited two new monologues from his own pen, entitled respectively Jack and Joan and My Lady's Face at the Window.

Hamilton, Lanarkshire, will shortly be in possession of a Hippodrome. Plans for a new building to be erected in Townhead-street have been lodged for disposal by the Hamilton Dean of Guild Court. The plans, drawn by Mr. Gavin Paterson, architect, Hamilton, show an up-to-date theatre and music hall, designed on lines similar to the one recently erected in Paisley by the same proprietor (Mr. Bostock).

At Liverpool Police-court on Thursday, Mr. Gunnar Gooes, licensee of the Theatre Moderne (formerly Parthenon), in Great Charlotte-street, was fined 20s. and costs for permitting a girl under the age of 14 years to appear on the stage after nine p.m. without having obtained a licence. The defence was that the child's age had been wrongly stated to the management. The mother of the girl was fined 5s. and costs for permitting her to appear without a licence.

Mr. George Anthony was presented on Monday through Mr. George Manners, manager, with a very handsome gold watch, and a gold chain with brooch of sapphire and pearls was handed to Mrs. Anthony (Miss Beattie Edmunds). Mr. Anthony is resigning his position with the Moss and Stoll administration to undertake the management of the Grand Theatre, Glasgow.

At the Grimsby County Court on Thursday the jury awarded £150 damages to Mrs. Sarah Rushbrook, a Hull widow, for the loss of her only son, who, whilst acting as stage manager at the Grimsby Palace Theatre of Varieties, was killed by being struck by the falling fireproof curtain during a sacred concert on Feb. 10. Whilst deceased was lowering the curtain the weights broke, and the defence suggested that the accident was due to his negligence.

The popular "Pimple" is still carrying on with unimpaired vitality the well-known troupe, "Tom White's Arabs," of which he has been a member over eighteen years. Yesterday, it may be recalled, was the seventh anniversary of the death of Mr. Tom White, the founder of the troupe.

Mr. Julius Simpson, manager of the Palace Theatre, West Hartlepool, took his benefit on Wednesday evening, by the kind permission of Mr. Frank Macnaghten. During the evening Mr. Harry Burns, who was heartily received, presented a cheque for £20 to Mr. Simpson. It had been subscribed, he said, by the Mayor, a number of friends, and the music hall managers in the district. He hoped Mr. Simpson would remain here for many years to come. Mr. Simpson, who was received with cheers, briefly thanked the subscribers for the gift. He was presented with other gifts from the staff and from the members of the A.O.D., which he suitably acknowledged.

The magnates of Coventry are said to be disappointed over the result of the Lady Godiva procession, in which La Milo figured, only £260 having been collected in the streets for the hospital, instead of an anticipated £1,000.

Several papers state that in the pageant at Coventry a Belgian horse was supplied for Godiva. The animal was one of Mr. T. G. Hales's white horses from his Russell-street stables, which are kept purposely for his various contracts.

A new and beautiful entertainment, entitled Unicum, is being enacted by Mabelle and Victor Mora, and is eliciting great admiration. The scene presents at the opening a drawing-room, where a trombone duet is played by a lady and gentleman. Subsequently the scene changes into a lovely flower-garden, in which the two performers indulge in musical lawn tennis, after which a saxophone solo is rendered by Miss Mabelle. The scene finally changes back to a drawing-room, and both performers join in a selection on an instrument with the inspiriting title of "Electric Sparkophone."

Dr. Walford Bodie has been spending a short holiday at his Highland home, the Manor House, Macduff. He has just finished two weeks at the Palace, Aberdeen, and one week at the Palace, Dundee, where he has broken all previous records. The Doctor opens on Monday at the Star Theatre, Swansea, with Mr. Wm. Coutts, who is running him at the Albert Hall, paying him the record salary of £200 for his own act for one week.

It is finally settled that little Max Darewski, the gifted pianist and composer, shall appear at the London Hippodrome in November, the youthful genius having been secured by Mr. Oswald Stoll.

It is proposed to present a testimonial to Mr. Frank Gerald at a dinner to be given on Sunday evening, Sept 15. Mr. Gerald is retiring from the music-hall stage, but it is probable that he will be officially connected with a new association formed in connection with the profession.

Mr. Fred Miller, who for several years has been successfully associated with the administration of the Canterbury and Paragon, will be accorded by the directors a complimentary benefit towards the end of October. Mr. Miller is an excellent sportsman, and deservedly popular with the profession, and a great success is certain.

Mr. Charles Beecham, the manager of the Paragon, is to have a complimentary benefit at that fine house on Thursday, Sept. 26, when we may be certain the popular beneficiare will be liberally supported, both by his friends in the profession and the East-end public, whom he finds it a pleasure to serve. Fine programmes are to be seen at the Paragon. Next week the chief attractions are Little Tich and Cinquevalli.

Miss Anna de Grey, the secretary of the Ladies' Music Hall Guild, announces that the result of the Hat Competition is as follows:—Mme. Phœbe's hat has been won by No. 319, Mme. Beatrice's hat by No. 245. The winners must forward their tickets to Mr. Barry, 28, Wellington-street, Strand, and the hats will be sent on.

The Grand Order of Water Rats go up the Thames into the beautiful reaches of Cookham on Sunday. The party will leave Waterloo at 9.45 for Windsor, thence travelling by the steam launch His Majesty. Junketing and jollity will prevail, and it only requires fine weather for the complete success of what has been always a most enjoyable outing.

"The Schoolboy's Dream" is a musical sketch which even Maskelyne and Devant might well include in their magical entertainment at St. George's Hall. It is from the pen of Mr. Harry Dacre, who has invented the idea, written the words, and composed the music. Miss Rhoda Paul, in the dual quick-change rôle of the Eton boy and the street waif, is making quite a sensation with the sketch on the Stoll tour. The principal musical item is entitled "They were singing 'Home, sweet home'" (the street-waif's song), which several astute managers have already secured for pantomimes.

Mr. Dacre and Mr. Bertie Shelton (the Stoll general stage-manager) have spent much time and energy in perfecting the sketch, with the result that audiences are thoroughly mystified by the instantaneous changes made by Miss Paul from Eton boy to street waif, and vice versâ. She is a youthful actress and vocalist of much promise.

At a special meeting of the Executive Committee of the V.A.F. held recently, it was unanimously recommended to take immediate steps to secure the affiliation of the Federation to the General Federation of Trade Unions. One of the principal rules of this latter organisation, and the one on which most of its best work has been based, reads as follows:—"To promote industrial peace, and by all amicable means, such as conciliation, mediation, references, or by the establishment of permanent boards, to prevent strikes or lock-outs between employers and workmen, or disputes between trades or organisations. Where differences do occur, to assist in their settlement by just and equitable methods."

The annual meeting of the Empire, Camberwell, Ltd., was held on Tuesday, when a dividend of ten per cent. was declared. Mr. Harry Bawn was unanimously re-elected managing-director. Both he and Mr. Jesse Sparrow, his fellow-managing-director, are to be heartily congratulated.

An occasional correspondent writes:—"On Friday night last, whilst passing the Margate Hippodrome, I noticed a number of gentlemen in Bath chairs drawn up at the stage-door entrance, and, wondering what 'new turn' Mr. F. C. Bawtree had booked, I enquired of the ever-courteous manager, and he informed me that Mr. Harry Randall (who is appearing at the Hippodrome), had invited a few of his Margate invalid friends into the large private box to witness the excellent show." Mr. Randall appears to be a favourite with Margate invalids, and we admire him for giving a little pleasure to help them bear their afflictions.

After poor "G. V. Brooke," the celebrated tragedian, went down in the wreck of the ill-fated ss. London, some of the sailors who had escaped with their lives went around exhibiting themselves at, amongst others, the London Music Hall—now the Queen's Theatre—Manchester. The spokesman, in selecting out one of the group for praise, said:—"Ladies and Gentlemen,—This is the chap who, wen they wos in the lifeboat, said 'as if they didn't row for land he'd knock a hole in the bottom o' the boat with his hoar and drown 'em hall.' And, ladies and genelmen, wen I looks at 'im, e's jest the sort of plucky chap as 'ud do it; for 'e's a heye like an 'awk and the 'eart of a heagle!"

Miss Denise Orme's success at the Palace this week has been accentuated by her appearance not only as artist, but as composer. She sang on Monday two songs of her own, one entitled "One little word" and the other "A Chinese love song," accompanying the latter song on the violin. Miss Orme is a young lady of undoubted ability, besides possessing a fascinating personality.

Mr. William Holles and Miss Nannie Goldman's company, in Mr. Arthur Shirley's great domestic drama, The Stepmother, struck an immediate success at Mr. Ernest Dottridge's enormous theatre, the Empire, Oldham, and they have been rebooked by that gentleman. Mr. Montgomery, of Liverpool, and other managers booked the piece immediately after witnessing the production.

Mr. E. W. James, manager of the Ealing Hippodrome, has a new aide-de-camp in the person of Mr. Harry Blight, who has gone to the western suburb from Islington. The members of Mr. Herbert Darnley's Sandow Girl company, appearing at the Mansfield Hippodrome, had a drive round the Dukeries on Friday, the 9th. The weather was ideal, and a very enjoyable day was spent. All were delighted with the scenery, and thanks are due to Mr. H. Fletcher, of Mansfield, who so successfully organised and carried out all arrangements.

Lord George Sanger, a resident of Finchley, has expressed his regret to Mr. J. Gibbs, one of the committeemen in connection with the carnival to be held on Thursday, Sept. 19th, in aid of the funds of the Great Northern Central Hospital, as he would be away until the end of October the veteran king of showmen would be unable to assist in the procession. Decorated cars would, it was reported, form a conspicuous feature of the display.

Mr. Reginald Allan, the well-known composer and orchestral arranger, held a "house warming" a few nights since at his new domicile in Cromwell-avenue, hard by Highgate Archway, to which many well-known clients were invited and attended. The scoring of a famous Alhambra ballet awhile back was a great feather in this young musician's cap.

Conferences on the Award are taking place between the Arbitrator and representatives of the Managers' and the Employees' Associations. On Tuesday a meeting was held in the Board of Trade offices between the Arbitrator, Mr. Henry Tozer, Mr. Walter Gibbons, Mr. Walter Payne, Mr. Rutland (solicitor to the Proprietors' Association), and Mr. William Johnson (general secretary of the National Association of Theatrical Employees). Mr. C. Jesson, L.C.C., secretary of the Musicians' Union, was also present. The Arbitrator deferred his decision on most of the points raised.

One question was settled. A complaint had been made that certain local managers were insisting upon their staff remaining until 12 o'clock midnight on Saturdays to help in removing, as part of the work of the show, the artists' scenery. It was stated by the manager alleged to be at fault that he had given explicit instructions that after the curtain was down and the stage cleared the work of the nightmen was at end, and that any work they did for the artists was at their own option. This statement was accepted as satisfactory to the employees. The question of the reinstatement of the men not yet absorbed was the most important of the questions discussed, and there is very strong feeling on the matter among the employees.

A special report on the Award and the Arbitration proceedings is being issued this week by the Stage Employees' Society. Members of the staff in theatres and music halls may obtain a copy on application to the Secretary at 29, Wellington-street, Strand.

The freedom of the American Press has been illustrated in a case where three sisters, variety artists, sued the Des Moines Leader for publishing the following "criticism" of their act:—"Effie is an old jade of fifty summers, Jessie a frisky filly of forty, and Addie, the flower of the family, a capering monstrosity of thirty-five. Their long, skinny arms, equipped with talons at the extremities, swung mechanically, and anon waved frantically at the suffering audience. The mouths of their rancid features opened like caverns, and sounds like the wailing of damned souls issued therefrom. They pranced around the stage with a motion that suggested a cross between a danse du ventre and fox-trot—strange creatures with painted faces and hideous mien."

This was held by the Court to be "fair criticism," and not libellous, for the ladies to a certain extent presented their personal appearance as a part of their performance. We wonder what the amount of damages would be as the result of a similar criticism of a turn at any of the halls in the United Kingdom.

Caicedo, king of the wire, is sailing for New York on Wednesday by the Kaiser Wilhelm, and to his friends in England desires to convey the message "Au revoir, but not good-bye" until his return from America next year. On Bank Holiday this clever and intrepid performer presented his act at Haverhill before a large crowd, and was most enthusiastically received.

Mr. W. Graham's new act, The Music Hall of Bygone Days, is repeating its London success in the provinces, and at Blackpool, where Mr. Graham is an established favourite, the novelty has been most enthusiastically received.

Miss Helene Forest and company will be at the Middlesex next week in her new dramatic sketch, A Woman of Paris, by Roy Milton, Miss Forest appearing in her successful part of the adventuress Phédèle Lemoine and Mr. Roy Milton repeating his Manchester success as Vernon Black. The turn is eight o'clock. Agents and managers should endeavour to see this powerful sketch.

The 524th meeting of the Executive Committee of the M.H.A.R.A. was held on Wednesday afternoon. There were present:—Messrs. J. O'Gorman (in the chair), Geo. Smythson, Harold Finden, Douglas White (hon. treasurer), C. C. Bartram, Lieut. Albini, Fred W. Millis (V.P.), Harry Blake, John Alexander, Jeff Vendome, and C. Douglas Stuart (secretary). The various claims of the members for refunds and insurances were considered, and the secretary instructed in the matters. The weekly statement of receipts and expenditure showed twenty-three new members, and a cash total of £24 9s. The Glasgow weekly report was received. The secretary reported that 512 members of the association travelled from London on Saturday, August 3rd, the largest number ever recorded.

At Champion Hill Grounds on Aug. 14 the Hercules again defeated S. Salter's Terriers, this time by the narrow margin of 4 runs. The Terriers batted first, and a startling collapse took place, the first four wickets falling with the score only registering 2 runs. The remaining batsmen got on far better, and pulled the score up to 148, thanks for the fine display made by Miles, who scored 63. The Hercules followed, and faced their big task splendidly, and after a good all-round display of batting managed to bring their score up to 145, when the last man went in amidst tremendous excitement and succeeded in securing the necessary runs for victory.

Dr. Walford Bodie has introduced another sensational novelty in his performance, which he has called the "Cage of Death." It has proved a great draw, and is likely to be seen in London soon. The cage is built up of live wires, and the doctor enters within this awesome circle, wherein he stands, extracting a current sufficient to electrocute six men.

The usual monthly meeting of the Committee of the Music Hall Sick Fund was held on Wednesday afternoon at the York Hotel, York-road. There were present Messrs. W. J. Wainratta (chairman), Frank Heath, H. E. High, W. West, Pat Carey, and R. T. Baines (secretary). A letter was received from Griff, resigning the position of one of the hon. auditors, as his engagements abroad during the ensuing twelve months would prevent him fulfilling the duties. The other business was of a formal character, and the proceedings closed with a vote of thanks to the chairman.

The scenes from Dickens presented by Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Lucas are proving so popular all over the country that these favourite artists are being rebooked by every manager at an increase of salary. Mr. Milton Bode has secured them for Reading and Chester; while recently at the historic town on the Dee they were specially invited to visit Eaton Hall by the Duke of Westminster, who was a passenger on the same boat with them on their return from Africa.

Morritt, the renowned illusionist and wonder worker, is to be congratulated on the fact that a cheque in excess of his salary was presented to him by Mr. Charles Elphinstone in recognition of the record created last week at the Grand Varieties, Hanley. Miss Bessie Butt was fortunate enough to have sufficiently recovered from her recent influenza attack to be able to open at the Tivoli on Monday. Although given a very late turn, and immediately following Harry Lauder, she scored an instantaneous triumph, and her latest song, "Cherries are blooming," was at once pronounced as undoubtedly one of the season's successes. This number is published by Messrs. Francis, Day, and Hunter.

A music-dealer, with several shops in Sheffield, named Edward Kitchener, of 365, Ecclesall-road, was fined last week £2 and £3 costs for selling pirated music. Chief Inspector Andrew obtained search warrants, and visited defendant's shops at 195, Spital-hill, where he found eight pirated copies of music, and at 182, London-road, where there were forty-three copies. Mr. Arthur Preston, of the Music Publishers' Association, proved the copyrights. Mr. A. Howe defended. An order was made for the music to be destroyed.

We regret to learn that Mr. Hugh Wigglesworth, the variety artists' agent, of London and Manchester, does not improve in health so fast as he would like. Recently he has had advice from some of the leading medical men in Manchester, and it has been decided for him to undergo an operation. His many friends will re-echo the hope that Mr. Wigglesworth will speedily be up and about his business with his accustomed vigour.

To Mr. Leonard B. Bramwell, formerly of Moss' Empire, Edinburgh, and now of Santa Barbara, California, Sunday, July 28, proved a red-letter day. He was visited by a surprise party, consisting of a four-in-hand Tally-ho coach, under the expert guidance and manipulation of Brother Fred T. Bramwell, accompanied by Mr. Archibald R. Spence, of Leith, popularly known as "Archie," and Mr. George Noble, of Fraserburgh, Scotland. The party drove a distance of seventeen miles to a favourite tourist resort known as Shepherd's Inn, on the boundaries of the mighty Pacific Ocean, incidentally viewing on the way the historical mammoth grape vine in the Carpinteria Valley, said to be the largest producing vine in the world; then, after eating lunch and toasting each other in the good old "Scots wha hae" style, the homeward drive was made to Santa Barbara, in time to enable Brother Fred to catch his train, and, as he jocularly remarked, "Get back to the tall timber." A return date has been promised two years hence, spot barred.

The staff of the New Cross Empire arranged their annual outing for Sunday, July 28, members paying in subscriptions weekly. Prisoner acted as treasurer, Chapman paying over to him £9 12s. from the orchestra, and Harris £6 10s. from other members of the staff. It was arranged on the Saturday that prisoner should meet the other members of the committee at the London, Brighton, and South Coast New Cross Railway Station at 8.15 a.m. on the following day, but he did not appear, and the tickets for the railway journey were only obtained on an undertaking being given by the manager, Mr. Ernest Bridgen. Prisoner was sent to gaol for two months, with hard labour.

LONDON VARIETY THEATRES.

SADLER'S WELLS.

Mr. Leonard Mortimer's dramatic vaudeville company has been extremely well received in the sensational sketch, A Man with a Fortune, written by Mr. Mortimer. It tells the story how Tom Dawson, who had served a term of penal servitude for another's (Jenson Wayne's) crime, goes to a foreign country, makes a fortune, returns home, is nearly murdered by Wayne, and finds his wife, who is eventually restored to him after several very trying adventures. Mr. Herbert Pearson acts in vigorous style as the hero, and Miss Helena Walbran acts pleasingly as the heroine; while able support is rendered by Mr. Harry McClelland as a detective, Mr. Albert Guyon as the villain, Mr. Charles Ludlow as Dicky Dunlop, and Miss Guinevere Shelton as an old woman. Coming to the other turns, there is a very charming coon comedienne and smart dancer in Miss Ada Parker, whose songs, "I love you because you are tender and true" and "The sun may be shining, but it don't shine on me," are extremely well rendered, and find great favour with the audience. Mr. A. E. Clifford, the versatile vocalist, also comes in for much applause; and Rita and Roma submit a really capital vaudeville entertainment, their song on the subject of springtime and their dances going extremely well. The Three McDonalds prove an exceedingly merry trio in their "musical garden," their performances on a variety of novel instruments being much appreciated. Indeed, they seem to have done the last thing in the way of manufacturing melody out of the most commonplace objects. Edwards and Dacre present a most attractive act, entitled What a Life; and the Flockton Foster Sketch Company create endless merriment with their laughable sketch, Ferdie's Ma-in-Law, in which Mr. Arnold Richardson appears to advantage. Miss Jennie Johns, a graceful and talented soubrette, delights her hearers with the ditty, the subject of which is her own name, and another called "The Seaside Girl." Mr. Frank Seeley proves as eccentric as of yore; and Raymond's Bio-Tableaux show a fine film in Palmistry.

THE BEDFORD.

An excellent programme is put forward for the current week at this comfortable hall in Camden Town, which, with its excellent ventilation and sliding roof, is kept delightfully cool during the warm weather, and Mr. B. P. Lucas is able to see the house he so ably directs filled at each performance. The first turn is Mr. Harry Milton, character comedian, who sings a quaint Dutch song, in native costume, afterwards giving a smart exhibition of clog dancing. He is heartily applauded for his efforts. Miss Edith Courtney and Co. appear in a musical comedy sketch, A Marble Flirtation. It is a little episode of a young man who makes love to a marble statue in the garden; his wife takes the statue's place, and teaches the flippant spouse a lesson. This really dainty and fanciful little interlude includes some melodious vocal numbers, which Miss Courtney sings with her accustomed skill. The lady who assists her and plays the wife is very amusing when she poses as the statue, and acts the part in just the right spirit. A turn which is greatly liked is that of Miss Kate Traill, a vocalist with a charming voice, who accompanies herself on the piano in two very pretty songs with great point and archness, and scores a striking success. Shirley and Ransome have an amusing sketch in 'Arf a Quid—a little family quarrel between a coster and his wife over a half-sovereign which he has lent to his brother-in-law. The many amusing sayings introduced cause roars of laughter, and there are also some pathetic moments. All ends happily, and a pretty duet brings it to a close. The neatly-written episode is well played by the two artists, the husband being especially good.

A sure winner is Miss Dora Lyric, who is always most fascinating, and sings catchy songs with a good chorus refrain, which the gallery always love. Her present numbers are that great favourite "I'll tell Tilly on the telephone" and "All that glitters is not gold." The choruses are taken up and sung with the utmost enthusiasm, and at the finish the audience is loth to part with the popular lady. A deputy appeared on the evening of our visit, and made a hit with a taking number, "When the right little girl comes along," which quite caught the fancy of the audience. Hall and Earle, the comedy eccentrics, are as clever and as amusing a couple as can be found anywhere. They present some neat acrobatic feats, and the comical partner is intensely funny with his various antics. It is a most novel turn, and there is a freshness about the whole show which is most pleasing. Miss Geraldine Montrose and Co. present a thrilling episode, The Ring Between, in which Miss Montrose is successful as Stella. Mr. William Felton, the author of the sketch, makes a great hit as Sir David Denham, the Cabinet Minister, who comes to take a farewell of his mistress before his marriage, and is robbed of a despatch by Stella, who is prompted to do it by one Leon de Roche, a foreign spy. Stella eventually shoots Leon, and returns the despatch to Sir David. It is an extremely well written and conceived little play, and contains many striking lines. Mr. Martin Sands is particularly good as Leon de Roche, while the other characters are ably filled. The Imperial Bioscope is still to the fore with some interesting films. The programme is brought to a close by Lawson and Namon, who introduce a clever exhibition of ball punching. The lady is an expert at the art, while the male partner evokes endless hilarity by his efforts in the same direction, and concludes the turn by giving a very clever and withal funny display of trick cycling. The turn deserves a more prominent place in the bill. The orchestra, again under the baton of Mr. G. R. Hatley, lends valuable aid. Mr. A. F. Lovesey is, as ever, most energetic in his duties as manager.

THE QUEEN'S, POPLAR.

The management of this comfortable hall must have been gratified to find the house so well filled on Monday night, when a programme of all-round excellence was presented. Miss Wynnie Darrell gains the full meed of appreciation by her artistic rendering of "In December" and "Grey Eyes"; and the speciality act of Henny and Blanche, entitled Continental Experiences, in which some clever acrobatic dancing is introduced, speedily finds favour with the audience. The society episode, entitled Her Good Name, is well played and handsomely mounted. Mr. Monte Bayly portrays with praiseworthy vigour the part of the chemist John Vyce, and Mr. Munroe Jones earns distinction for his sterling exposition of the Hon. James Ancrum; while Miss Diana Hope acts with resource and capability the character of the chemist's wife Adelaide. The piece is well received, the reconciliation making a happy climax.

Miss Marie Blythe, looking very handsome in her black velvet costume, makes full use of her fine contralto voice, and is heard to advantage in "Keepsakes" and "When you're in view"; while an interesting turn is given by Mr. Ted Saunders, whose imitation of Mr. Joe Elvin in Touched is very realistic. Karsy's Giant Myriophone is an instrument of great size, consisting of twenty-five revolving wheels, with wires attached, from which perfect tones are produced, and upon which Mr. and Mrs. Karsy perform the intermezzo from Cavalleria Rusticana and a selection of popular melodies, while a pretty effect is introduced by an ingenious arrangement of chromascopic lights. Mr. Herbert Darnley's clever troupe of Dots delight the house with their novelty, Helping Mother, in which they sing "All New Moon," "Don't cry, my mammy dear," and "Hello, dear John," while the dancing of Little Winnie Crisp is particularly good.

Much merriment is the result of the comical impersonation of the mummy by Mr. Sandy McNab in the farcical sketch, The Egyptian Mummy. Mr. McNab is ably assisted by a competent company, who do full justice to their respective parts. The Selwyns present an attractive interlude; and the smart orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Fred Venton, tastefully play the "Mousmousse March" (G. T. Vives) and "Dream of her childhood" valse. Retribution, or the Hand of Cain, is a strong dramatic film shown on the Bioscope. The usual attentiveness is displayed by the general manager, Mr. Jack Woolf, who has this week gained a legal victory affecting child licence, and the zealous assistant acting-manager, Mr. Morris Abrahams, is ever on the alert to contribute towards the comfort of the patrons.

HOLLOWAY EMPIRE.

A well-varied programme is submitted at this popular hall this week. The top of the bill is occupied by Fred Ginnett's company, in Dick Turpin's Ride to York, a very popular subject. The main incidents of the historic events recounted by Harrison Ainsworth in "Rookwood" are rapidly portrayed, the bioscope depicting some features that could not have been realised on the stage. Mr. Ginnett carries himself gallantly as the highwayman, and is well supported by a very capable company, and the sketch enables his beautiful mare, Black Bess, to display intelligence of an uncommon order. The scenery and mounting are on a lavish scale, and there is every sign of popular enthusiasm when Mr. Ginnett takes his call at the close.

The Brothers Egbert are at the bottom of the bill, and their antics and acrobatic agility enable them to keep the house in roars of laughter the whole time they occupy the stage, their reception being very hearty. The Lyons trio of pantomimists and dancers submit a good and amusing turn, which goes well. Anna Kenwick, American comedienne and dancer, gives a good impersonation of a coon singing a coon song, and concludes with a smart dance. The Four Madcaps, though billed as such, are really a quintette. Their dancing is of the acrobatic order, is very clever, and they gain a most cordial call. Harry Grey, a comedian, makes an immediate hit. His first song, "We had to carry Carrie to the ferry," goes well; but his second, a burlesque imitation of a novice making her first appearance as a ballad vocalist, quite captures the house. Little Agnes Tina proves herself to be an accomplished mimic. Her first number is cleverly sung, and her concluding imitations of Eugene Stratton, Harry Lauder, and other stars are highly popular. Boyd and Gilfain present a most interesting act of song, burlesque, and music, the gentleman possessing a good tenor voice and the lady being a capable performer on the bagpipes. Westland, a Scotch comedian, makes a good impression; the Bioscope is up to date, as usual; and Mr. Russell's orchestra still renders yeoman service during the evening. Business here continues to be exceptionally good.

THE PRINCE'S, POPLAR.

Heading the bill at this handsome establishment for the current week is Mr. John Lawson's revised version of The Unwritten Law, in which a powerful rendition of the unscrupulous Sir Stephen Clinton is given by Mr. F. W. Paull. Mr. Arthur Royston is well in the picture as Fritz Hartmann; and the forger, Leslie Marsden, is excellently performed by Mr. R. Bosco. Jack Graham is represented with the necessary vigour by Mr. C. de Gue; and Miss Buena Bent is a charming Moya Marsden. Miss Madge Haines is attractive as Miss Sophy; and Miss Lilian Locke is a competent Gladys Berg; the remaining parts being in the capable hands of Messrs. Melot Leslie, Boon St. Josephs, and Adrian Lawrence. The piece is handsomely staged, the Café Chantant scene being especially good, while the fight between Clinton and Graham is effectively managed.

During the evening, Brilliant and Brilliant give well-executed xylophone selections of the overture to Poet and Peasant (Suppè) and the March, "Light Cavalry" (Suppè); and the acrobatic turn of Les Rallis scores an immediate success. Mr. Will English soon becomes a favourite, and keeps the house in good humour with his song, "Daisy," and his imitation walks and eccentric dances. Messrs. Woodhouse and Wells indulge in some very smart patter, while their duet, "The Hunters," is extremely funny. Mr. Alf. Chester is good in "Sergeant" and "My Wife"; and Miss Ida Brophy sings with great charm "I wish I were you," and gains enthusiastic applause for her clever dance. Mr. Harry Pleon takes the opportunity in his "Breach of Promise" to give some of his well-known imitations; and the bioscope picture, "Hurry Up," is provocative of much mirth. The fine band, under the bâton of Mr. Macdonald, plays with spirit "The Bedford Two-step" march; and the general-manager, Mr. C. Melville Lurring, spares no effort towards looking after the comfort of his numerous patrons, being ably assisted by his lieutenant, Mr. Percy H. Gallagher.

EALING HIPPODROME.

The engagement of the Two McNaughtons, who star the bill here this week, is a most popular one. These inimitable comedians step at once "across the footlights" to their audience, for whom, from start to finish, their turn is a convulsion of laughter. Commencing with a lever de rideau of cross-talk, the scene quickly changes to the sylvan glades of a forest, where we find one of the duo habited in a travesty of Robin Hood, while the get-up of his brother artist is a combination portrait of Hackenschmidt and the Sheriff of Nottingham. The merry man of Sherwood exclaims that nothing is to be seen but silence, but his antagonist, who quickly appears, shows him that it is a silence that may be felt, and a desperate duel ensues—first with knives and then with gloves. There are many quips and jokes in the scena, which, as a merriment-producer, serves its purpose admirably.

Dainty Miss Amy Clevere is no stranger to Ealing, and her refined style is ever welcome. Her two songs, "Girls, girl, girls," and "When the shades of night are falling," are both melodious, the second being particularly so, and here Miss Clevere's rich voice, mellowed to the tenderest softness, is heard with excellent effect. From pathos to laughter is but a step, and Mr. Tom Woottwell takes it. In his "I shan't forget the day that I was born" he croons of the delights of infancy, and a certain little shirt "made by mother"; while in "Come and have a drop of gin, old dear," he introduces one to the amicability of a quiet neighbourhood. Mr. Wootwell is very popular with the "upper house," and deservedly so. Miss Annie Lauri is a chic young comedienne, who is a tuneful songstress and graceful dancer. She has two attractive numbers, "I'd like to be a sailor" and "Mary and her little motor." Miss Lauri makes good use of her nimble toes, and with two handsome costumes presents a pretty stage picture. Hall and Earle present some novelties in comedy acrobatics, and are, besides, capable musicians and dancers. Mr. Harold Hughman is a clever imitator, some of his mimicry being wonderfully close to the originals, notably his Italian knife-grinder from Hammersmith and a Hippodrome soda and whisky. An amusing comedy duo is found in Mueller and Coyne. Their cross-talk is smart, the lady's vocalisation tuneful, while the gentleman's acrobatics are really funny.

That the bioscope has come to stay becomes every day more certain. The rapidity with which current events are reproduced has ceased to excite our wonderment, and when Ruffell's Imperial Bioscope presents us with "The King's Naval Review," or "The Burglar Hunt by the Dogs of Paris," the expression arises forcibly to the lips, "We are there." Mr. E. W. James, an alert and courteous manager, is ably assisted by his aide-de-camp, Mr. Harry Blight.

RECORD HOUSES WITNESS HIS LATEST SENSATION, "THE CAGE OF DEATH."

Comparatively few of the leading lights of the variety stage have the phenomenal drawing power that Dr. Bodie has in Aberdeen. He invariably brings with him a flutter of sensation and excitement, and consequently plays to record houses. His entertainment is, of course, out of the ordinary run; and, gifted as he is with very considerable oratorical powers, he treats his audience to exhaustive analyses and explanations of his various experiments, and of cures effected electrically. His own personality, too, arrests attention—he has a fine commanding appearance—and while his orations frequently evoke hostile retort and comment, he can generally "come out top," with the applause of the greater proportion of his audience undoubtedly ringing gratefully in his ears. Last night's audience in point of numbers was no particular exception to the general rule—the theatre being practically filled at early-door prices. Dr. Bodie's work consisted principally of electrical demonstrations, which embraced exhibitions of what he terms "the Cage of Death." This an electrical show of endurance and resistance. He is encircled by live wires, and at the same time "thousands of volts" are passed through his body. It must be confessed that the performer, to all appearance, enjoyed this part of his show, coming out unscathed. Members of the audience were experimented upon with batteries, and at the close Dr. Bodie gave some graphic illustrations of "bloodless surgery," effecting apparent cures. It may be mentioned that Dr. Bodie has recently signed a contract to visit America, opening in New York, at a salary of some £400 a week. His show is entrancing and bewildering, and is undoubtedly a most popular attraction. A capable variety company of artists herald the appearance of this sensational performer, and altogether the programme at the Palace is a splendid one.—Aberdeen Express, July 16, 1907.

THE PARAGON.

Mr. Harry Lauder takes the responsible position at the top of the bill here this week, giving in his artistic manner "Rob Roy Mackintosh," "We Parted on the Shore," and "I Love a Lassie." Needless to state, Mr. Lauder is enthusiastically applauded by the whole of the house. Messrs. Clark and Hamilton provide a very interesting few minutes, the drolleries of the gentleman whilst accompanying the lady at the piano causing many hearty laughs. They conclude with that tuneful number, "My Yokohama Queen," to which a neat dance is attached. Mr. Harry Tate in Motoring is as funny as ever, and one is compelled to laugh heartily, no matter how many times it has been seen before. Miss Winifred Hare, charmingly gowned, and in beautiful voice, sings "Yes, yes, so would I," and for her second item gives "Cheer up, Mary," a bright and catchy little song, which is well liked. Mr. Edgar Budden provides an interesting entertainment, his dancing on roller skates combined with his manipulation of the bones being remarkably clever. Mr. Budden is also a first-class comedian, and must have felt well satisfied with the round of applause he received. Miss Alice Pierce, the neat young American actress, gives some realistic impressions of various celebrities, her impersonation of Mrs. Leslie Carter as Zaza being capital. Her latest assumptions are those of Miss Clarise Mayne and Miss Ellaline Terriss, whom she imitates to perfection. The Morton Comedy Trio supply a very good number, the blending of their voices being excellent.

Mr. Norman G. Acton's company appears in an American dramatic sketch, entitled A Sister's Honour, which proves very thrilling. The scene is laid in a living room in the backwoods of America, where dwell Miss Mamie West and her brother. A stranger appears in the person of Jim Radcliffe, who pleads for shelter. The girl notices blood on his hands, and demands to know the cause. He explains that a certain ruffian had ruined his sister, and after pleading to the man to act honourably towards her he only laughed at him. The two men fought, and in the end the betrayer was killed, and Radcliffe, afraid of being lynched by the man's friends, had fled. The girl sympathises with the man and promises to assist him, although she fears her brother. A knock is heard at the door, and, thinking it is her brother, she tells the stranger to hide in her room, but it is a friend called with the news that the brother has been murdered at the camp by a fellow who had "a bit of a grievance" about his sister. The girl realises that she is sheltering her brother's murderer, but when Jim comes forward and asks to be delivered up she refuses, and the finale is reached by her promising to assist him to escape. Mr. Norman G. Acton as Jim Radcliffe, Mr. Arthur O'Keene as Tom Rivers, and Miss Gertrude Churchill as Mamie West played well together, and achieved a success.

Anthony, comedy juggler, is very amusing. Mr. Nat Clifford supplements his "Grand Hotel" song by some funny patter. Mr. Tom Leamore gives a smart song and dance, and his second effusion, "Listen, my lad, to my story," is extremely droll. Kelly, Gillette, and Bart in their feats on a billiard table are highly amusing and clever. Mr. Dan Thomas has two good numbers in "Advice to ladies" and "My old woman," concluding the latter with a smart dance. Miss Flo Challis sings two bright songs, and Messrs. Phillips and Merritt are a clever couple, who indulge in singing, dancing, and whistling. Mr. Joe Elvin in King of the Castle furnishes one of the best characters he has had. Ruffell's Bioscope shows some excellent films.

"THE ERA" can be obtained at the principal bookstalls throughout the provinces.

THE CHAOS OF THE LAW.

Mr. Woolf, manager of the Queen's Theatre, Poplar, who was accompanied by an intelligent-looking girl of thirteen, named Winnie Crispe, applied to Mr. Dickinson, at the Thames Court, for a licence enabling the child to perform at that theatre at 7.30 and again at a quarter to ten.

Mr. Dickinson said, according to the London County Council regulations, there must be an interval of at least four hours between each performance.

Mr. Woolf said, although he had made, and been granted, many similar applications, the question had never before been raised.

Mr. Dickinson: Well, I never grant such permission if within the four hours. Continuing, his worship remarked, he saw the piece was Helping Mother. That exactly described the state of affairs.

Inspector Montgomery, in reply to the magistrate, stated that he had known instances where children performed twice within four hours.

Mr. Dickinson: Then what is the good of the London County Council regulation if managers can snap their fingers at it? So long as I am sitting on the bench I shall only sanction one performance within the specified time, as I consider it a very proper provision. Such performances entail great excitement and more exhaustion than many people imagine.

Mr. Woolf said if the application was not granted it would disappoint the public, as the piece had been "billed," and the child was the "star turn." He would be obliged to issue some announcement as to the reason.

Mr. Dickinson: Yes, you can do that. You may even mention my name. (Laughter.) His worship further asked Inspector Montgomery if the County Council's inspectors regarded such applications as a mere form?

The inspector remarked that all he could say was that similar licences had previously been granted, and the facts were known to the Council's inspectors.

Mr. Dickinson: Then the sooner the attention of the Music Hall Committee of the Council is drawn to the matter the better. I should like to have an inspector from Spring Gardens here with regard to this matter, and the application could be renewed later in the day.

Mr. Woolf afterwards informed the magistrate that he had been in touch with the Public Control Office of the London County Council, and informed that the regulation in question was not a by-law, and the conditions were for the magistrate to say, and not the Council. The latter body only saw those conditions were carried out.

Mr. Dickinson said the Council and the magistrates had agreed to certain rules, and he was not able to understand the action of the former body, but he intended the matter should be fully explained. In that particular case he would make a special exception and grant the licence; but in future would not sanction a child performing twice in four hours.

Mr. Woolf said he would bring the matter under the notice of the Music Hall Managers' Protection Society, in order to have the point settled.

Some notable songs have been acquired for publication during the past few days by Messrs. Francis, Day, and Hunter, including, among others, "The old canoe, the moon, and you," by J. E. Sutton; "The girl who thought she would" and "The wise and foolish virgins" (both sung by Miss Alice Lloyd), by George Arthurs and Orlando Powell; "My Lady Belvedera," by T. F. Robson; "My little Yiddisher boy (Miss Kate Carney), by Charles Collins, Herbert Rule, and George Jackley; "Won't you go to Gogo?" (Miss Gladys Huxley), by J. F. Lambe and T. W. Thurban; "Come closer," by G. A. Stevens; "Cherries are blooming" (Miss Bessie Butt), by A. E. Sidney Davis and John Neat; "My Mary Llewellyn," by Horace Jones; "You're the girl I've been waiting for," written, composed, and sung by Charles Lilburn; and the latest effort of that past master of comic song writing, Frank Leo, a ditty, entitled "You don't mind me asking you, do you?"

A little lad of twelve summers, Master E. Frisby, appeared for the first time at the Metropolitan on Monday, and so phenomenal was the boy's pure soprano voice in that delightful song of Messrs. Francis and Day, entitled "Starlight," that it was not to be wondered at that his singing evoked thunders of applause. Needless to say, his future is assured, he being instantly snapped up by sure judges for long engagements, and next week the gifted boy will be heard in Edward Montagu's beautiful song, "At the old cross-roads," another of Messrs. Francis and Day's publications.

The author and composer, who, in conjunction with Eustace Baynes, wrote Mr. Gus Elen's "Postman's 'Oliday," were discovered having a "nice quiet day" by the beach entertainers at Skegness on Thursday, and the twain received an uproarious welcome from Fred Clement's crowd and "The Bohemians." The best item of news from London for the entertainers was the intelligence that Charles Osborne's celebrated song, "Potted poetry," had been included by Messrs. Francis and Day in the "Sixpenny Pops."

The great success which has attended Miss Kathleen Cogan's rendering of Henry E. Pether's striking original song, "My Sweet Bird of Paradise," on the Stoll tour continues unabated, and the demands for the number from all quarters show what a potent factor the Earl's Court Exhibition is in the popularising of a song. It has been featured at the latter place by Miss Nellie Le Breton, of Harry Loftus's Pierrots, and has ever been encored.

Mr. George D'Albert has arranged with the Monte Carlo Publishing Co. to feature two of their newest publications, both written and composed by Paul Pelham and Herbert Rule, entitled "Canoodle in my canoe" and "Can't help loving 'em," both of which he is convinced will be worthy to rank amongst his biggest successes.

Mr. Tom Costello has just secured from Harry Adams a song, entitled "Awfully slow," for which Bennett Scott is composing the music, and the comedian has commissioned the progenitor of "On guard" to supply him with three special creations, the subjects of which will be undisclosed till production.

The Sages are making a hit with their new number, "If you're coming in, I'm agoing out," written and composed by Will Letters. Mr. Harry Burns is booking them up fast.

Miss Rosa Adams re-opens on Monday at the Camberwell Empire after a most successful provincial tour with new songs from her father's pen.

At a recent Thursday matinée at the Foresters' Hall, Hastings, a special turn was supplied by Messrs. Stanborough and Hughes' company, with the comedy sketch, The Baby Elephant. It met with a capital reception from the audience.

Jack Thomason, a well-known local weight-lifter, at the Wolverhampton Empire on Saturday night, succeeded in beating his own record. He raised the platform, on which a horse and seven men were standing—the total weight being 2500lb. Such a feat has never been accomplished before by any Englishman.

SONGS, WRITERS, AND SINGERS.

"Yucatan," the Mexican Indian song by A. E. Sidney Davis and Sydney Baynes, has been so successful, both at New Brighton and Blackpool, that Mr. John Tiller is having it featured by the Palace Girls, who opened at the Shaftesbury Avenue House on Monday and scored a tremendous success at the first time of asking. "Yucatan" is published by Francis, Day, and Hunter, who anticipate a big Christmas sensation from this number.

What is very often a vexed eleventh-hour question has been settled for good and all early this year, and a great weight has been lifted from the minds of prospective principal boys and girls, the unmistakable signs of what will be the absolute chorus rages of the forthcoming "annuals" being evidenced by the present enormous hits being made by Mr. George Lashwood with "In the twi-twi-light" and by Mr. Whit Cunliffe with "Meet me down at the corner at half-past eight," and by the requests received daily by Messrs. Francis and Day for "rights" of the same from foremost pantomime producers.

A very interesting article appeared in the Evening News a day or two since under the heading of "What the Stars are Singing," from which it appears that Messrs. Francis and Day hold the copyrights of the sheet-anchors of almost every artist of prominence. The article gave facsimiles of portions of the scores of Vesta Tilley's "Jolly good luck to the girl who loves a soldier," R. G. Knowles' "Every little bit added to what you've got," Wilkie Bard's "You-you-you!" Winifred Hare's "Cheer up, Mary," George Lashwood's "In the twi-twi-light," Tom Costello's "For auld lang syne," and Annie Purcell's "In the valleys of Switzerland."

Mr. Dennis Drew is breaking all records at Woolwich with his stirring military scena, Back to Barracks, the numbers "Mona May" (by Herbert Shelley and Ernest Bucalossi), "Come and be a soldier" (by Nairn and Stiles), and "The beat of the drum" (by Kenneth Lyle) being redemanded again and again. Messrs. Francis and Day publish the three items, the two last being also "Sixpenny Pops."

All the natives of the North of England who are dancers—and that includes the entire population—have voted the new dances which have taken, notably Manchester, Blackpool, and Douglas, by storm the best for many years. They include "The White City Waltz" and "White City Two Step," invented by Tom Walton; "The Officer's Two Step," by J. B. McEwen; "Carmencita," by Emily Jones; and "Esperanto," by Tom Almond. The music of each is from the graceful pen of Luke Cavendish Everett, and Messrs. Francis and Day have published them all.

Mr. Walter Munroe, the ever-young Irish comedian, has been delighting patrons of the Hippodrome, Glasgow, with a beautiful song of the Green Isle, by that melodious Milesian, Felix McGlennon, entitled "When you're tired of roaming." The Star Music Co. have received the following wire from the genial Walter: "'When you're tired of roaming' has hit them. They sing chorus all night.—Munroe."

Miss Dora Lyric, who returned to London on Monday after a triumphal provincial tour, has been appearing at the Islington Empire and the Bedford during the week. On Tuesday evening she produced at these halls a new song, by Mills and Scott, entitled "When the lilac blooms in springtime." The success of this number was instantaneous, and Miss Lyric had to return again and again in response to enthusiatic applause. Thus another great chorus song was launched on the sea of popularity, and another "winner" added to the Star Music Co's. catalogue.

Clever Miss Claire Romaine, who is under engagement to Messrs. Klaw and Erlanger, and sails for the States on the 22nd inst., will open in New York with three new numbers specially written and composed for her by Messrs. John P. Harrington and Jas. W. Tate, which are respectively entitled, "Hurry up Walter!" "What little Willie wants to know," and last, but not least, a coster girl's song with a simply ear-haunting chorus—"He's jest the bloke for me"—which the author confidently believes will even eclipse the American success of his sterling "winner," "Never introduce your bloke to your lady friend."

Two new songs, which Mr. R. G. Knowles will shortly produce and afterwards exploit throughout America on his return thither (which will be in the near future) are "The diner, the dinner, and the doctor" and "Girls, be on your dignity!" both of which have been written and composed specially for the talented American by the ubiquitous John P. Harrington and Jas. W. Tate.

The latest convert to the Monte Carlo Publishing Co.'s fold is clever Miss Carlotta Levey, who will in a few days produce their new song, written and composed by Paul Pelham and Herbert Rule, entitled "I'm going to try my luck in London," at all her engagements. She is also studying up Mellor, Lawrance, and Gifford's great song, "Don't go back to Carolina," published by the same go-ahead firm, with a view to early inclusion in her répertoire.

Mr. L. B. Athol has been "stirring them up" at the Hippodrome, Putney, during this week with Wallis and Collins's enormously successful song, "We all came in the world with nothing." This is another of the Star Music Co's. lucky snips.

Mr. Harry Bedford has secured from R. P. Weston a droll dude song, well calculated to show off the singer's quaint idiosyncracies. The title of this comical hit is "When I breathe," and copies for pantomime may be had from the Star Music Co.

Those well-known sketch artists, Miss Haidee Lee and Mr. Wallace Kingston, have in active rehearsal an entirely new and original pétite musical comedy, specially written for them by Mr. John P. Harrington, with appropriate music by Mr. Jas. W. Tate, entitled Gussie in Mentone, which has been pronounced by all who have heard it to be quite the finest thing of its kind which this talented "duo" has yet essayed.

A new descriptive vocalist, Mr. Mark Adams, has lately been winning golden opinions with his rendering of Messrs. Paul Pelham and Herbert Rule's charming song of sentiment, "I'm thinking always of you," which he has embodied in his dramatic scena, The Wanderer; indeed, so great has Mr. Adams's success been in his rendering of this number that the Monte Carlo Co., its publishers, are issuing a special new edition, with his portrait on the frontispiece.

Mr. Geo. Chirgwin's Concert Party at the Happy Valley, Westcliff, are enjoying unparalleled prosperity, and Manager Charles Osborne's own songs, "Join the Navy," already a "sixpenny pop," and "Potted Poetry," which is to be issued in the same form immediately, are easy first favourites with the huge audiences. Bert Dansie sings the naval number, and the author-composer the latter. Another item from Francis and Day's catalogue, greatly in favour with Southend visitors, is "Don't tell the world your troubles," tastefully sung by Miss Beatrice Varley.

LONDON VARIETY THEATRES.

THE METROPOLITAN.

Prominent in Mr. Henri Gros' well-varied and entertaining programme at the Metropolitan this week is the dramatic sketch, A Japanese Revenge, adapted, by permission of the author, by Cecil Newton from a story by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, and presented by Ferdinand Conti and company. The action takes place in the quarters of a Japanese officer who, taken by a Russian colonel for a spy, turns out to be a Japanese general. Neatly possessing himself of the Russian's pistol, the Japanese commands him to be seated, and then proceeds to relate the story of his son's capture by the enemy and the kind treatment he received from one Russian officer and the cruelty meted out by another, illustrating both phases of the episode as he goes along on his helpless captive. He even goes to the extent of calling his men in and commanding them to bind the Russian and present arms, but nobly refrains from having his prisoner shot, bidding him depart, and remember "a Japanese Revenge." The names of the two characters and their interpreters are not given on the programme, but both parts were excellently enacted, and the interesting trifle evidently impressed the audience favourably. Another serious sketch in the programme that met with approval was Sunshine, admirably played by Miss Margaret Parker and company.

The principal comedian of the bill is Mr. Dan Crawley, who kept the house in continual laughter by his droll rendering of "Te-um-te-um-te-ay" and a grotesque female impersonation; and the turn of Jack and Evelyn, in their amusing interlude, Come into the Office, was also punctuated with almost incessant laughter, the hard-working and entertaining couple evoking some of the heartiest applause heard during the evening. That popular comedienne, Miss Millie Lindon, charmed all by her rendering of "The angel of my dreams," and her song telling of the fascinations of a certain "Mary, who kept a dairy"—evidently a very profitable occupation for the rustic damsel. An encore being demanded, Miss Lindon obliged with a daintily-rendered and amusing song concerning a demure little milliner who was always home by ten. The electrical transformation musical act contributed by "Unicum" (a lady and gentleman) found favour; and there was much admiration also for the feats of strength indulged in by Ben Hur, in his spectacle, Pompeii, especially when he succeeded in holding up half a dozen or so "gladiators" and a huge bar-bell. The sack-lifting competition in connection with his show also proved interesting and amusing. Mr. Leo Dryden employed his fine voice in "I'm going back to the mines" and "Putting my house in order," both songs proving greatly to the liking of his auditors; and Miss Dorothy Gerald amused with "What's the matter with London Town?" and a quaint song and dance. Mr. Charles Williams, Miss Maudie Francis, the Four Burnells, Miss Jessie Merrilees, Mr. Percy Farrimond, and Miss Edie Veno also contributed entertaining items; and the pictures shown by Jeape's Animated Graphic pleased immensely.

THE EMPRESS, BRIXTON.

The holiday season seems to have little, if any, effect on the attendances at this popular hall; and audiences of the most liberal proportions are nightly turning out to testify their appreciation of the excellent bills that continue to be presented. On this week's scheme of amusement Manager Francis is to be heartily congratulated. A prominent place is taken by Miss Annie Purcell, the popular comedienne, who gives a couple of capital numbers, entitled "Baby's trance" and "In the valleys of Switzerland"—both of them excellent vehicles for her talents. On concluding the audience simply will not let her go, so she eventually gives that old favourite, "By the side of the Zuyder Zee," the chorus of which is taken up in no half-hearted manner by the whole house. Witty Wattie Walton, character comedian, soon has the house in roars of laughter with his many stories. His character impersonations are also most clever—that of the football player especially being most funny. The Brothers Zampah, one-legged equilibrists, soon show themselves to be acrobats of no mean ability, and their turn is one of the greatest successes of the evening. Gracie Raine, a dainty comedienne, proves herself a neat and clever dancer; and Bertha France sings an amusing number about "A musical comedy actress." Charles Fanning is certainly entitled to take a high place amongst comedians for originality. He revels in amusing patter and funny stories, and the quaint yet unconcerned manner in which he delivers them is a very considerable asset in their scoring power.

The Devil's Sunday is being presented by Mrs. John Lawson, supported by a very able and powerful company. The sketch is going as well as ever, and, improved in one or two minor details, it holds the house from the rise of the curtain to its fall. Miss Cissie Lawson as Fay puts an amount of "devil" into her work that enables her to electrify the house, and on concluding she is compelled to come before the curtain and bow her acknowledgments.

Bessie Lind sings a couple of numbers with success. She appears, however, to greater advantage in G. H. Elliot's popular number, "If the man in the moon were a coon," the chorus of which appeals strongly to the gods. Johnson and Pelham introduce a novel and entertaining turn. The male member proves himself an able exponent in the art of ball-punching, and the lady as a dancer is most attractive. Arthur Woodville, a light comedian, gives an amusing number about "Courting," which he follows with that increasingly popular number, "I wish I were you." He brings his turn to a conclusion with some neat dancing. The Great Northern Troupe can certainly be said to be quite in the front rank of dancers. The Jees in their funny sketch, The Musical Smithy, and Harry Rogers and company in Told in a Flat contribute most successfully to the enjoyment; and a most pleasant evening is brought to a conclusion by some very amusing pictures on the Bioscope, which are followed with interest from start to finish. Mr. Francis Winchcombe, Mr. Nelson Francis's popular aide-de-camp, shows himself to be au fait in the front of the house.

RICHMOND THEATRE.

The autumn season at this house has commenced under happy auspices, and there is every reason to predict a successful one. This week there is a budget of good things for the delectation of the audience. Macer and French combine to win approval in some clever clog dancing, and are applauded liberally, as they deserve. Tony Iveson, the ragman at the piano, is quite refreshingly droll. Miss Florrie Robina, always a welcome visitor here, vocalised prettily in "The wearing of the green" and "The Holy City." She has a fine voice. The Eight 'Varsity Girls have plenty of talent, but their répertoire needs strengthening; their show is prettily dressed and grouped. Mr. Horace Pollack's company in Hester's Mystery, by A. W. Pinero, proves a welcome addition. Such revivals are always pleasant to chronicle. The company is a good one, but the cast should be printed on the programme. There is a touch of Fenimore Cooper about Yeotha, the Indian Red Bird, and Capt. G. Grade; the archery of the latter would put Hubert, "who drew a long bow at Hastings," to shame. It is quite an interesting turn. Miss Florry Cooper, a refined vocalist, sings "Angel faces" to the entire satisfaction of the audience; and Stidder and Dunbar get through a comedy pot-pourri act with distinction. Mr. Arthur Andrews completes the programme. Mr. E. J. Macdermott, as manager, is the embodiment of courtesy

MR. HERBERT DARNLEY'S ENTERPRISES

Few men lead such a busy life as Mr. Herbert Darnley, the well-known writer of comedies, farces, and dramatic plays and sketches. At the present time he is running, on his own account, companies on tour in the theatres and music halls in pieces written by himself. These include The Sandow Girl, a musical farce; and The Skirmishers and Moving In, sketches which are proving most acceptable to music hall audiences. In addition, Mr. Darnley tours in the variety establishments in the provinces a juvenile troupe, who go by the name of Herbert Darnley's Dots. Then he has the theatre at Mansfield, which he took over last year, running it for the first three months of his possession as a music hall, and latterly as a "legitimate" house. Mr. Darnley found that the local public did not want and would not patronise a variety entertainment, so instead of closing the doors, he fulfilled the contracts that had been already entered into with vaudeville artists, then ran cinematograph pictures for a week previous to commencing with dramatic fare. The theatre has a holding capacity of two thousand, and can draw upon a wide community of some 150,000 people.

"I have been watching," said Mr. Darnley, "the trend that public taste in the direction of amusement has been taking recently, and I have come to the conclusion that dumb shows are no longer wanted. It was for this reason that I turned Moving In and The Skirmishers into talking sketches, introducing songs, dances, and conversations, while still retaining the comic pantomime business. The result has been extremely gratifying. By the way, I ought to tell you that while I write all my pieces myself, the music in the case of The Skirmishers has been composed by Mr. Joseph Cleave, and that in the case of Moving In and my other shows by Mr. Dudley Powell.

MR. HERBERT DARNLEY.

"You may be interested to learn that in the autumn I shall produce a drama, in four acts, entitled A Mother's Sacrifice, upon the writing of which I am now engaged. In this piece my juvenile company, the Dots, will play quite important parts. Indeed, the principal members of this troupe, namely, Harry, Dora, and Winnie Crisp, will be seen in parts very similar to those they played with Miss Olga Nethersole in America and Paris."

At Christmas Mr. Darnley will produce his own pantomime on the subject of The Babes in the Wood, at Mansfield, he himself taking the character of the Dame. After its presentation at Mansfield the production will be sent on tour.

"I have considered it an advisable course to appear in my own pantomime," continues Mr. Darnley, "because I have had so many offers for pantomime from other managers. I can assure you it was my intention not to play again, but it has since occurred to me that if I am worth the large salaries that have been offered to me, then surely I was worth more in my own show. Oh, yes, I shall be the author of the 'book' of the pantomime."

That Mr. Darnley does not permit his "shows" on tour to get rusty is evident from what he tells us as to his business methods and procedure. Every night he witnesses a performance, either by his own company or by somebody else's; and he visits each of his own shows once a week, when he calls a rehearsal to see that everybody is perfect in his or her part, and that the scenery and other effects are in good order. No defects are allowed to escape his keen observation. Early next year he will produce a new sketch, in which the principal parts will be played by Miss Queenie Leighton and himself; and Mr. Fred Kitchen (at the conclusion of his present engagement) will become a member of Mr. Darnley's company, though for the present Mr. Darnley has not decided in what part Mr. Kitchen will appear.

Mr. Darnley is having some new premises, for rehearsal rooms and other stage purposes, erected at the rear of his fine old-world house at Clapham Old Town.

No. 7,364.—Fire-extinguishing. H. T. Murphy, Springfield, Massachusetts, U.S.A.—Relates to means for extinguishing and for preventing the spread of fires in theatres. A fire-proof curtain is lowered by means of water-motors or by a windlass. The water-wheels are attached to the curtain-roller, and mounted within a casing fitted with a supply-pipe and discharge. The pipe is connected with the water main through a valve-casing provided with two branches fitted with valves which are operated respectively by hand and automatically. To cause the automatic operation of the valves, it is fitted with an arm which carries a weight, and is held up by links connected by fusible material, and is attached to a wall, &c. The fusion of the material releases the arm, allowing the weight to fall and open the valve. Guides are provided at each side of the stage for the curtain, to prevent it being blown about by draughts. Sprinkler pipes are arranged at the rear and front of the proscenium, these pipes being fitted with nozzles directed across the curtain so as to keep it moistened when lowered or to form a water curtain. The pipes are put into operation by valves. At the back of the stage and in the auditorium are arranged pipes connected with the water supply through double valves, and terminating in sprinkler pipes fitted to the ceiling.

THE ALHAMBRA.

Artistic additions to the Alhambra programme this week include the versatile M. Rudinoff, the clever sketcher and silhouettist, who comes with a fresh supply of entertaining items. A warm welcome awaited the accomplished performer, despite his six years' absence, and all his feats were received with rapture. He begins with his etching in smoke, by means of which he reproduces New York Harbour, with the Statue of Liberty in the distance; while a rowing boat is also contrasted with a mighty steamship approaching the quay. A few impressions of M. Rudinoff's travels result in the depiction in crayons of a beer-drinker in Munich, and of a personage of the Jewish persuasion, whose physiognomy is traced by means of his name. The sybillant powers of the artist are employed in a bird-like variation of Mendelssohn's "Spring Song," and in a droll nightingale courtship, and some ingenious specimens of shadowgraphy complete the attractive series. M. Rudinoff keeps his hearers in the best spirits with his amusing commentaries, and his skill is recognised in repeated recalls.

The quality of the programme is further enhanced by Franco Piper, whose facility on the banjo is demonstrated by the rendering of an operatic excerpt, and by playing a tune on two of the instruments while they are revolving under his hand. "Old Folks at Home" proceeds from a quartet of banjoes while the player is juggling with them; and a familiar tune is also extracted from a half-dozen instruments while they are kept spinning rapidly on end. Enthusiastic encores are showered upon the clever performer, who in response gives, without the aid of the orchestra, "The Lost Chord," in the playing of which a distinct accompaniment can be traced.

New pictures by the famous Urbanora are presented in a series of episodes at the Naval Review, during which the shooting competiiton at full speed is reproduced, and the targets riddled with shot and shell are revealed at close quarters. Excellent views of Royalty are also presented, the King being seen in his most benign aspect when congratulating the officers of the ship on their expertness. A picturesque exhibition of Arab horsemanship outside the city walls at Casa Blanca, and the side-splitting misadventures of a short-sighted cyclist are also included in a superb series of pictures, to which Mr. G. W. Byng's music forms a fitting accompaniment. The ballets Electra and Queen of Spades still furnish a sumptuous display of scenic and terpsichorean art; and the Four Black Diamonds, Rosina Casselli's midget dogs, Vanola, the Mexican Antipodiste, and W. E. Whittle, the clever ventriloquist, continue to prove a source of delight to large audiences.

THE DUCHESS, BALHAM.

The high standard of excellence which the programmes presented here have reached is fully maintained this week, and even the most carping critic would find it difficult to put his hand on a weak spot in the bill. After a spirited and well-rendered overture by the orchestra, the house is early put on good terms by Miss Scheila McNeil, a dainty comedienne, who sings an amusing Scotch song in a most acceptable manner. Bert Williams, a clever ventriloquist, assisted by a couple of excellent manikins, causes roars of laughter by the amusing cross-talk between himself and his Eton boy, who is also made to sing a number of songs, a parody on "The Zuyder Zee" being very funny. He brings his entertainment to a conclusion by singing a verse of "Sweet Genevieve," and has many times to bow his acknowledgments. A prominent place in the evening's entertainment is taken by Dale and O'Malley, the popular comedians, who entertain with some very clever and original patter, their jokes fairly convulsing the house.

The Ten Dixie Girls are again presenting their scena, entitled "The Silver Coon," and are repeating their former successes. The singing of the various members of the troupe leaves little to be desired, and their dancing is both neat and effective. Sable Fern, a great favourite here, is giving a couple of capital numbers, entitled "If you read between the lines" and "It's the echo of an old, old tale," both being excellent vehicles for the display of her vocal ability, one of the most pleasing features of which is the artist's clear and distinct enunciation, every word sung being clearly heard in all parts of the house. The Two Bees are again here, and their "Man in the Moon" scena serves for the introduction of several excellent songs, topical and otherwise, which are highly appreciated.

Doody and Wright, the Australian comedy duo, are well to the fore with some real comedy, which is heartily received. The comedian's quaint and original dancing is especially to the liking of all present. Leo Dryden inquires in vigorously-rendered song "Are we proud of the Union Jack?" and also scores a hit with "I'm going back to the mines." Gardiner Vincent and company are presenting their spectacular fantasy, Winning a Queen, in which the comedy merchant works hard for the success of the piece, his labours being certainly not in vain. A pleasant and enjoyable evening is brought to a conclusion by some excellent pictures on the Bioscope, the series depicting Belgian scenery being most interesting. Mr. L. Westcott Hicks, the popular manager, assisted by Mr. Arthur F. Vernall, has, by his tact and courtesy, made many friends during his stay here, and continues to look after the front of the house in a manner that is satisfactory to all.

BRODIE AND NAPOLEON.

To the Editor of The Era.

Sir,—I read in your paper of the 10th inst. a paragraph to the effect that "Mr. Oswald Stoll has re-engaged Mr. Brodie for all the Moss Empires next year with a new playlet. He (Mr. Brodie) intends engaging another Napoleon and still running The Drummer." Let me at once say, to save disappointments, that Mr. Matthew Brodie has no power to engage anybody to take his place as Napoleon in my sketch, and that when he ceases to play Napoleon in The Drummer that it will not be Mr. Matthew Brodie who will engage the new Napoleon, but—Yours truly,

LOUIS COHEN.

Eccentric Club, Aug. 14.

Miss Millie Hylton will appear in Mr. Charles Macdona's No. 1 company of Mr. Popple at the King's Theatre, Hammersmith, on Monday, in the part of La Bolero.

Sandy McNab and company have made an instantaneous hit in London with their Scotch sketch, The Mummy. It has been secured for every hall of importance for the next three years.

After concluding a successful re-engagement at the Canterbury, Miss Elsie Kerry (heretofore known as Elsie Enry) opens on Monday next at the Chelsea Palace. This dainty and versatile young comedienne is steadily establishing herself in public favour. To anyone acquainted with the Emerald Isle, the change of name is sufficient indication of this young lady's nationality, which has before now been associated with some of the most brilliant performers on the music-hall stage. But in the present instance Miss Kerry does not confine herself merely to Irish "business." Her turn is agreeably diversified and freshened by the introduction of melodies differing widely in character and requiring special study for successful presentation to a cosmopolitan audience.

CHAT WITH MR. HORACE WHEATLEY.

It is a matter of some theatrical interest to mention that Mr. Horace Wheatley, the well-known Irish comedian, is about to revive Muldoon's Picnic, which was at one time so popular an entertainment in the London and provincial theatres. The piece is to be revived on Dec. 30, at Wolverhampton, and will then proceed to visit Belfast, Birkenhead, Manchester, Portsmouth, Southampton, Brighton, Leeds, Newcastle, Sheffield, Birmingham, Liverpool, and Glasgow. Mr. Wheatley will be seen in his original character of Michael Mulcahy, the comical Hibernian, who on numerous occasions sent an older generation of playgoers into fits of laughter. Mr. Wheatley tells us that it is on the advice of managers that he is once more touring the play, and it is noteworthy that it can be presented at a music hall as a sketch, running from thirty to fifty minutes, or as a play for the legitimate house, lasting two hours and three-quarters. The special scenes which will be carried will depict an American saloon and a cleverly-arranged mechanical bridge, which falls to pieces at a given signal.

It says much for the confidence reposed in Mr. Wheatley by managers generally that Muldoon's Picnic should have been engaged by so many without having been seen for years. Of course, everybody realises that Mr. Wheatley as Michael Mulcahy is bound to be a big draw; but remarkable reliance has been placed in his intention and ability to secure a good company. On one occasion a well-known manager wrote to him as follows:—"I rarely book a new piece before it has been produced and had a fair trial, but I have confidence in your judgment, and will break my rule in your favour." Muldoon's Picnic, of course, will be practically new to the present generation, and it seems that it will be equally suitable for music halls as for theatres. In the Picnic scene a number of specialities are introduced, that form a really attractive variety act.

MR. HORACE WHEATLEY.

Some twenty-four years have elapsed since Mr. Wheatley and his late partner, Mr. Ted Traynor, played Muldoon's Picnic as a sketch in America. The performance lasted for forty minutes, and went so well that the sketch was elaborated into a four-act comedy, which was toured all over England and America with great success for over eight years. The partnership terminated only with the death of Mr. Traynor, and Mr. Wheatley felt his loss deeply. Working single-handed, the following years of Mr. Wheatley's life were passed in England and America, fulfilling engagements in the music halls and in pantomimes. He has appeared in twenty-seven of the latter, nine of them in Dublin, within a period of thirteen years. One of his first appearances in pantomime was at the old Theatre Royal, Glasgow, under Miss Marie Litton's management. It was as a female character in Little Bo-Peep. Mr. Wheatley likes male and female rôles equally well. One of his biggest successes was as Hassarac, in The Forty Thieves, at the Gaiety Theatre, Dublin. It was in this pantomime that he first introduced to British audiences the once-popular American ditty, "The Bogie Man." He was also the first to sing in Britain the other well-known transatlantic song, "After the ball." Mr. Wheatley has paid a couple of successful visits to Australia, in one appearing as Baron Gormano in Cinderella, which ran for twenty-six weeks in Melbourne and Sydney. He assures us, however, that it was no joke playing in pantomime with the thermometer 100deg. in the shade. The intense heat made false noses and eccentric make-ups useless, and he lost several pounds in weight by having so much dancing to do. However, he had a wonderfully warm welcome.

The subject of this sketch was also the original singer of "Two little girls in blue," this, as everyone knows, being a very popular reminiscent refrain, which told of an old man who "gazed on a photograph." Other songs with which Mr. Wheatley scored were "The little, old dhudeen," "I never drink behind the bar," "Bonnie Kate," "Patsy Doyle," "Patsy Brannigan," "Bantry Bay," and "I'll be a soldier, too."

On the question of the stage representation of the Irishman, Mr. Wheatley holds strong views, and vigorously deprecates the practice of some performers using red hair and green whiskers. "Put on the legitimate Irishman anywhere, leave out all the burlesque features, and it will get a hearty reception," he says. "I am pleased to see that the old-time idea of the Irishman is gradually dying away on the stage, and soon I hope to see all performers treating the character as it really deserves to be treated."

Mr. Alan Holt's sketch, A Society Woman, which has been on the road for the past few years, achieved such a success at the Queen's, Poplar, last week that several good bookings have been the result—not surprising this, when one considers the excellent manner in which the playette was acted and mounted.

Great preparations are being made at the Crystal Palace for the People's National Co-operative Exhibition, which opens on the 21st. The whole of the north transept is now in the hands of workmen, busily engaged in erecting stands and preparing for the large number of interesting exhibits. Arrangements are being made by the various railway companies for excursions from all parts, and on the last day of the exhibition, Saturday, Aug. 24, there will be sports and a grand festival, including gymnastic and musical drill displays, dramatic performances, and a whole host of side shows, with a great concert, to which a large choir and orchestra, conducted by Mr. Allen Gill, assisted by Mr. Frank Idle, will contribute. There will also be a "junior" concert, led by Mr. Charles J. Jeapes, and choir contests for adults and juniors for valuable shields and prizes. At night Messrs. C. T. Brock and Co. will give a grand display of fireworks.

TESTIMONIAL TO FRANK GERALD.

The following letter has been sent to us for insertion:—

Dear Sir or Madam,—We cordially invite support of a testimonial to Mr. Frank Gerald, late Secretary to the Variety Artists' Federation, which will be presented as a token of appreciation of the services he has rendered to the cause of the variety artists during the past five years.

We regret to say that Mr. Gerald has decided to retire from the music-hall stage, and he will thus conclude a noteworthy career extending over thirty years in various parts of the world.

It is well known that Mr. Gerald has made great sacrifices for the cause of his fellow artists and their future well-being, and it is felt that his devotion and unquestionable loyalty to their interests deserve general and substantial recognition.

The Committee propose that a dinner be arranged in London on Sunday evening, September 15, when an illuminated address and a cheque will be presented to Mr. Gerald.

Contributions to the testimonial should be sent to Mr. George Reeves, Hon. Treasurer and Secretary, at 29, Wellington-street, Strand.

The names of those who have already joined the Committee are:—W. C. Steadman, M.P., Secretary Trade Union Congress Parliamentary Committee; P. THE GRANVILLE.

At the Walham Green palace of varieties, under the able management of Mr. William H. Lennon, a good programme is always forthcoming, and during the hot weather the sliding roof is a boon and a blessing to the audience. Will Evans is here this week, and as bright and entertaining as ever with his amusing patter concerning himself and his advent on earth. He has caught the "Limerick" craze, too, and warbles many a limericky line. He also started a "Limerick" competition, three prizes being given for the best last line to—

Will Evans, "The Monarch of Laughter,"
The public will always run after;
His Limericks are great,
And right up-to-date,
. . . . . .

His latest chorus song, "Down at the garden gate," and his musical monstrosity and scena, Queen of the Ballet, which evokes roars of laughter, also form the items of his entertainment. Letine, the famous female impersonator, sings "All I want is a lump of love to love me all the time" and his song and dance in female form, "Come under my parasol, dear, don't be afraid," is wonderful. Devere and Kenwick, with their clever violin playing, patter, and sand-dancing, and in their ludicrous burlesque pictures of songs, such as "When you hear the bugle calling," are great popular favourites. May Henderson, the bright little white girl turned black for amusement's sake is full of untiring energy, vim, and vitality, and her songs, "You shall have a lovely home in Ohio" and "Peter Peacock, Esq.," are rendered by her in inimitable fashion. Stewart and Morgan are excellent vocalists, and "My blue-eyed Irish boy," "The Irish emigrant," and "Kathleen Mavourneen" are capitally rendered. Maudie Ford is a dainty comedienne and dancer, and her songs, "Shy Anne" and "I ain't a-goin' to leave my home in Barbadoes," and her sand-dancing are much appreciated. Kelly and Agnes are a clever American comedy duo, the dancing and acrobatic feats of Kelly are something to be marvelled at. The band selection from Iolanthe is very well rendered; Woolmer Young, the vocal comedian, is a great favourite, and his ditties "The new motor-cab," "Don't you think it's time to wake up, John Bull?" (sung to a very taking tune), and "I was there in the morning and stayed till closing time," which teaches a moral lesson to the amorous loafer, all go with a swing; the Northern Troupe of International Dancers give a very dexterous and dainty turn; Edwin Barwick is an actor-vocalist of no mean order, and his ditty, "It's done that way in London," and his more tragic scena, The Gambler—in which a broken-down roué ruminates on his past triumphs and present misery—are excellently presented; Minnie Fisher is a pleasing vocalist, and her chosen contributions are "The reason why I love you is—it's you" (a very pretty and tuneful ditty) and "Be advised by your dear old dad"; Frazer and French are a pair of exceedingly clever rag-time clog dancers; the Bioscope, always amusing, does not belie its reputation in the pictures of "Bobby's Birthday," "The Magnetic Man," and "Too Stout"; and Ouida Macdermott, comedienne, Charles Butler, and Millicent Prince complete the programme.

Mr. John Christie, who for six years was manager of the Hackney Empire, has received a well-deserved promotion at the hands of Mr. Oswald Stoll, and proceeded on Monday to take up his new post of district-manager of the South Wales district. At Hackney on Friday afternoon, the 9th inst., Mr. Christie had a hearty send-off, and was the recipient of many valuable gifts from well-wishers in the neighbourhood.

The presentation, at the Town Hall, Hackney, on Friday, the 9th inst., by the Mayor of the Borough to Mr. Christie consisted of an address with the following wording:"To John Christie, Esq., in appreciation of the high esteem in which you are held, and to mark the feelings of warm personal regard which you have gained while holding the position of acting-manager of the Hackney Empire Palace, the undersigned desired to record their expressions of goodwill and sincere wishes for your future well-being. In the cause of charity you have, with tireless energy, given signal assistance, and always freely and ungrudgingly rendered most valuable service. We sincerely wish you continuous success and prosperity, and trust that those attributes which have won regard during your stay in Hackney may prove the means of further advancement in the future."

Then follow the names of Dr. F. Montague Miller Mayor of Hackney; Sir Walter Johnson, ex-Mayor of Hackney; Alderman George Billings, L.C.C.; Dr. H. Christoffers Powell; Norman Storgie, borough surveyor; A. M. Stewart, Hackney Furnishing Co., Ltd.; A. E. Gardner, London and Provincial Bank; L. A. Cormack, of the Ship Hotel; W. A. A. Lashmore, of the Horse and Groom Hotel; and Alderman Fox, of the Town Hall.

In addition to this address, Mr. Christie was presented with a handsome silver épergne, and Mrs. Christie was the recipient of a silver dressing-case. Expressions of regret were expressed on all sides at Mr. Christie's departure, and he received the warmest wishes for his future welfare.

A new and original musical comedy sketch, called The Major's Middy, written and composed by George D. Fox, will be produced by Miss Lizette Kitchen at the Empire, Camberwell, on Monday next.

THE SHOWMAN WORLD.

THE fairs ahead for next week are:—Barnsley, on the Lancashire and Yorkshire, Midland, Great Central, and Hull, Barnsley, and West Riding Junction; Bowling, on the Great Northern; Guiseley, on the Midland; Horsforth, on the North-Eastern; Lowmoor, on the Lancashire and Yorkshire; Long Eaton, on the Midland; Yeadon, on the Midland; Birstall, on the London and North-Western; Great Harwood, on the Lancashire and Yorkshire; Hartlepool, on the North-Eastern; Stonehouse, on the Great Western and Midland; Bracknell, on the London and South-Western; Crediton, on the London and South-Western; Ipswich, on the Great Eastern; Skipton, on the Midland and Lancashire and Yorkshire; Darlaston, on the London and North-Western; Darley, on the Midland; Eyam, on the Midland; First Lee Fair; Newton Heath, on the Lancashire and Yorkshire; Oldham, on the London and North-Western, Lancashire and Yorkshire, Oldham, Ashton, and Guide Bridge, Great Northern, Midland, and Great Central; Prestwich, on the Lancashire and Yorkshire; Saddleworth, on the London and North-Western; Whittington, on the Midland; and Irvine (N.B.), on the Glasgow and South-Western Railways.

White City, Old Trafford.

ANYONE remembering the Royal Jubilee Exhibition held here in 1887, while walking about the grounds of the present city of pleasure—listening to the entrancing music, smartly rendered by the finest military bands of the country, and witnessing inter alia the beautiful fairy fountain displays—would be likely to marvel that it has taken exactly twenty years to formulate such a favourite resort as the Exhibition made it.

IT is understood that last week the passengers on the Manchester tramways numbered 3,076,525, as compared with 2,945,227 in the corresponding week of last year, and it is therefore only fair to say that a large proportion of these travelled to the White City, in addition to many thousands who came in other ways. The approach roads appear much like they did when the Exhibition was open. No doubt railway statistics would also show a great increase of traffic over the corresponding period of last year. Railways and tramways greatly benefit from fairs and "white cities." In return, they should help the showmen in every way possible.

THE great water chute, the dragon slide, and the numerous other amusements are continually patronised. Not the least popular of these is the figure eight gravity railway, describing the figure eight three times, and occupying about seventy minutes in the cars doing the journey. It is a great improvement on the old switchback railway, which was new in 1887.

Bolsover Fair.

THIS pretty Derbyshire town kept its annual Summer Fair in grand style. The shows, machines, and other novelties, were: Dr. E. Lawrence's coliseum of cinematography, W. H. Hall's helter-skelter, steam horses, shooting ranges, and coker sheets, A. Twigdon's steam yachts, Proctor's shooter and variety frames, H. Sanhow's school of boxers, and throwing games by Jereson and Co.

St. Wilfrid's Feast, Ripon.

THE big show here for this ancient local festival was Randall Williams's (Monte Bros.) superb theatre of animated pictures which, as usual, drew immense crowds—an artistic triumph and a source of popular delight. Shipley, the local caterer, exhibited motor switchbacks, and the Cullines had steam horses, big boats, swings, shooters, and throwing games. The other caterer was Mapplebank with variety games and sheets.

RIPON, unfortunately, has bye-laws made in 1877, and without the saving clause exempting from penalty music at the time of the fair.

THE Town Clerk is now in communication with the Committee of the Showmen's Guild on this question of bye-laws. It appears that one resident in the Market Place has drawn the attention of the Corporation to their own bye-laws, and he threatens to compel the Council to enforce a bad bye-law that the authorities themselves do not wish to carry out.

THIS is one of those examples of the mischief done by bad bye-laws in the days before the organised showmen opposed or even knew that corporations had such drastic powers. The Guild Executive advised the Corporation to formulate new bye-laws containing the saving clause. The Guild will support the Corporation by petition, so that before another Fair comes round the Corporation will have full control.

Lindfield Fair

HAD for its show entertainers Biddall with bioscope, Purchase with menagerie, Birch with midget marvels, Roberts with freak museum, Prof. Gillham with boxers, Harniess with gondolas, Messrs. Bond, Harris, and G. Bond with juvenile roundabouts, and all the fun of the fair by a number of experts and local caterers.

Stockport Summer Fair.

HODGINI'S circus, Capt. Tom Payne's royal bioscope, Shaw's fine art academy, Holland's Japanese airships, and other motive novelties; shows, steam swings, shooters, throwing games, and varieties by Messrs. White, Clough, Thomas, Hooton, Cordwell, Smith, and Beckett.

Hospital Fête at Crewe.

HELD in Queen's Park, under the management of P. Collins. The novelties at this local carnival were P. Collins's No. 1 set Gordon-Bennett motor-cars, steam yachts, and racing cockerels, Smith and Scott's premier theatre of animated photography, Prof. and Mme. Haydn (the mental telepathists), H. Cullis and school of boxers, Smith's park swings and variety frames; and stalls by Messrs. Jewell, Whyatt, Birch, Cordwell, Humphries, and Scott.

Philanthropic Showman.

SOME time ago a committee was formed for the purpose of commencing a Nursing Institute at Burry Port. The well-known amusement caterer, Mr. Henry Studt, was approached with a view to his giving his assistance in the formation of a fund for that purpose. On Tuesday evening he placed his Venetian gondolas at the service of the committee, with the result that the very handsome sum of £25 has been added to the fund. At the close of the proceedings, Mr. Joseph Williams proposed a vote of thanks to Mr. Studt for his kindness. This was seconded by Mr. A. A. Lewis, J.P., and carried with acclamation by the crowd.

Presentation.

MR. WILL KELLY, the celebrated showman and doorsman, was on Monday last presented with a diamond pin by his longtime friend and admirer, Harry Clay.

Carmarthen Fair.

ON Monday last Carmarthen Pleasure Fair was held. The weather was very unpropitious, with the consequent result that business was very poor. The chief attractions at the fair were Messrs. Henry Studt and Sons' fine electric gondolas and Mr. W. Haggar's splendid electric bioscope. Shooting galleries, cokernut shies, aquariums, Aunt Sally's, &c., were also in evidence, but very little business was done at these stalls. The fair was continued on Tuesday.

Hyde Wakes.

THIS annual holiday commenced last Friday, when the mills closed down for a week. On Saturday thousands of people visited the fair, which is held on the market ground, and the takings constituted something in the nature of a record. The attractions were hardly so numerous as in previous years, but this is no doubt due to clashing of dates with other towns in the district. President Kemp's palace of light and music has done splendid business, and "house full" was the order of the day and night. P. Collins's luxurious motor-cars were incapable of holding the crowds of people who desired to have a motor run. Green's motors also did a roaring business. There were also Hibbert's cocks and hens, Collins's farmyard cocks and hens, Davies' roosters, Hibbert's horses, Richards' steam yachts, and the helter-skelter. In addition, the side-shows were numerous and attractive. From a monetary standpoint Hyde Wakes has been an unqualified success.

Welsh Notes.

FOR the past few weeks Mr. J. Danter, with his steam galloping horses, has been stationed at Llanstephan, a favourite little seaside resort, about eight miles from Carmarthen. Mr. Danter has received a fair share of patronage from the visitors. On Tuesday he left the village.

Robert Fossett's Circus at Merthyr.

LAST Saturday and Monday Robert Fossett's circus visited Merthyr Tydfil. At the evening performances the circus was crowded with large audiences, who thoroughly enjoyed the excellent programmes submitted. On Tuesday Twedyihiw was visited.

Walsall.

P. COLLINS'S razzle-dazzle, Chaplain's juvenile horses, two freak shows, and other attractions, were at Walsall Fair.

Kingsbridge Fair.

THIS year the shows and other amusements at Kingsbridge were—John Jones, with his West of English variety company and living picture show, Hancock's motor-cars, and various side-shows, stalls, and minor novelties.

Otley Feast.

THE amusement caterers and funsmiths at this famous festival on the Yorkshire moors were—Marshall, with motor-cars; Burgess, with shooting concerns; Scott and Williams, with rifle-ranges and highfliers; and a dozen minor concerns by various Yorkshire showmen.

Featherstone Feast.

THE principal providers of the entertainments here were—Tuby and Sons, with coliseum of animated and talking pictures, motor-car set, and steamhorse set; Watson's school of boxers; Fisher's Winchester range and park swings; Pullan's shooter, swings, and varieties; and throwing games by Clayton, Johnson, Webb, Smith, and Jones. Johnson also exhibited highfliers.

Made "Free" of the Fair.

CLOSE by Thurston's new fairground at Mitcham stands the fine block of school buildings, the Holborn Schools, where the orphan children and other children under their care are housed and educated by the Holborn Board of Guardians. This new fair is the overflow of shows, roundabouts, &c., that could not find ground on the historic fairground, and is being run by those enterprising showmen, Messrs. H. Thurston and Sons.

IT was a happy thought and a kindly to invite the children of the poor from the Holborn Schools to come to their neighbour, the showman's fair; and, better still, to make them "free of the fair." We can well imagine the tumult of joy it would arouse in the young hearts of the happy throng of children. Oh, the abandon of it, the swing, the whirl, the life of it—and all free! No worry about the pennies falling short of the desire. "Free of the fair"—free to be satisfied to satiety.

To see these dear youngsters enjoy the fair was enough to melt the heart of the stoniest Conservator of them all. Messrs. Thurston and Sons have received the following very pleasant letter from the superintendent of the schools, Mr. W. Lane Drury:—

Holborn Schools, Lindon-road, Mitcham, Surrey.
Aug. 12, 1907.

Messrs. Thurston and Sons

DEAR SIRS,—As I had not the opportunity of thanking you at the close of the entertainment you were good enough to give to our children this afternoon, I should like to take this early chance of doing so, and saying how much the youngsters enjoyed both the switchback and the bioscope show.—Yours faithfully,

W. LANE DRURY,
Superintendent.

Messrs. Thurston and Sons will continue the fair on their ground over to-day (Saturday), and Messrs. Alf. Ball and Son, whose beautiful show is also pitched on private land, will remain Saturday over.

THE success of Mr. Ball's show has been the big feature of the fair. We felt sure that no matter where the showman-hero of Mitcham had pitched his tent there his warm admirers would flock in their thousands. Although interdicted the use of the Fair Green, the people recognised Mr. Ball's sterling qualities as a champion of their ancient fair rights, and rejoiced in the fact that Ball's show was the real centre of Mitcham Fair, 1907.

WE are informed that the marriage of Mr. William Ball (son of the redoubtable Alf.) with Mlle. Olga is fixed for Monday next.

Pageant at Newlyn.

NEWLYN, the artists' mecca, near Penzance, has not escaped the prevailing epidemic of pageantitis for last Friday Perkin Warbeck, attended by a gorgeous retinue, landed there, and was solemnly presented with a crown. The land procession through Penzance consisted of 700 people, mounted and on foot, whose costumes were typical of historic periods, from ancient Britons and Phœnicians up to the time of Cromwell. Mr. G. W. A. Norton, well known amongst travellers, rode at the head of the procession as the Sultan of Morocco, and was attended by Kaid Maclean. The whole affair was such a pronounced success that it is shortly to be repeated.

MITCHAM FAIR.

The rights of the people of Mitcham in their old Charter Fair have again, this year, been asserted by the showmen of the London district.

Mitcham Fair, 1907.

All along the line the people of Mitcham have won a signal victory. The people welcomed—with an enthusiasm beyond words—the advent of the showmen. It was a peaceful invasion, and not a murmur of protest was heard, not a single thing said or done to indicate that the people did not want the fair. There was an officer of the Conservators (or was it of the owners of the franchise?) busy with pencil and book taking down names of the showmen on the Fairgreen. The omnipresent pressman and the man with the snap-shot camera were all there. The show people were there, for in less than no time the various shows, roundabouts, and stalls were built up in their usual places, and all was ready for the legal fair day, the Monday following the invasion of Saturday. Not a thing was done to take advantage of the present unsettled state of affairs. On the fair itself and on the two odd patches adjoining the Fairgreen apparently an integral portion of it (yet not controlled by the franchise owners), these pitches were not used by their tenants on the Saturday, although there was no law preventing them. In this respect the showmen were loyal to the charter and the old usages of the fair.

The People's Protest Meeting.

Convened by the leading members of "The Ratepayers' Association" and "The People's Rights League," a mass meeting of the inhabitants of Mitcham was held on the Saturday night at seven o'clock. Mr. Councillor Dant presided, and on the platform with them were the Rev. T. Horne (representing, by request of the chairman, the showmen's interests), and Councillors Bland, Baker, and Dr. De Caux, ex-Councillor Grange, and other prominent Mitcham residents were present, and took part in the proceedings. Councillor Dant, in a masterly review of the whole controversy as between the people of Mitcham and the abolitionists, referred in indignant and scathing terms to the startling discovery of how public money had been voted in the end of last year, when the old Council were in the throes of dissolution, to a fund then being raised to abolish Mitcham Fair. He was confident that if ever the people had known of that astounding transaction they would have expressed their disapproval in no unmeasured terms. Late in the day as the discovery of that matter had been, he was not yet without hope that the people's share in the purchase of the fair franchise would secure, not the abolition of the fair, but its permanence under better conditions as to site and control. The Parish Council having spent £400 of the ratepayers' money in purchasing the fair rights would see to it now that the people got full value for the money spent. He, for his part, would try his best, now that he fully understood the showmen's willingness to improve the character of the amusements, and that it should be under local control, to have it removed, with all its charter rights and privileges, to a better site on the people's common.

Certain people had called his public action in this matter into question. They (his critics) could not understand why he, a professed Christian worker, identified himself with a movement for the defence of Mitcham Fair.

His answer was, that he believed in the people having proper open-air amusements. His Christianity was broad enough and deep enough to accept the position that—given the necessity for recreation—it was far better that the municipality should secure by co-operation with the showmen themselves the very best entertainments possible.

He supported the movement to remove the fair to a more suitable site on the broad public grounds of social service and public utility. He then proposed from the chair the resolution of the meeting, asking the Conservators and the franchise owners to bring the question of the fair to a peaceful decision by acting in generous accord with the declared will of the people.

The Guild Chaplain's Speech.

The Rev. T. Horne, in rising to second the resolution read and proposed by the Chairman, was most enthusiastically received. He began by fully endorsing all that Councillor Dant had so admirably pleaded for in his opening address. He would loyally follow Mr. Dant's lead, and in his address on behalf of the showmen he would scrupulously avoid matter of a personal nature, nor would he degrade the discussion of public matters by either mentioning names or by any appeal to easily aroused passions.

First of all he would endeavour to remove the false impression created by some unauthorised and most misleading statements.

A seriously inaccurate report had gone the round of the daily papers. In identical words, in all the London papers of that very day a statement had been made to the effect that the Executive Council of the Showmen's Guild had issued official invitations to its members to come to Mitcham Fair.

That was not true. No such request had been sent out by them. The invasion of Mitcham was indeed a notable demonstration in force, but it was all the more remarkable from the fact that it was entirely spontaneous, and utterly without order or arrangement from the Guild. Instead of two or three hundred show concerns, as they had seen enter Mitcham that day, at the call of their Guild thousands of showmen would have come. The highways and the byways of their ancient village would have been lined with show wagons and all the paraphernalia of a modern fair.

A String of Local Misapprehensions.

An important member of the Parish Council had intervened at the last moment before the date of the annual fair. This gentleman had made a series of misstatements calculated to damage the position of the showmen. Misstatement number one was that the sanitary condition of the Fairgreen after the three days of the fair was such that it took £40 of public money to remove the filth and to cleanse the Fairground. If the gentleman is correctly reported the statement is grossly inaccurate, and pointedly injurious to the showpeople. He repudiated for the showpeople this horrible reflection on their life and daily work, and he denied the whole accusation. The fact of the matter was that every year the litter of the fair had been cleared away by the owners of the franchise at a cost of £3 or £4. For years before the death of the late showman owner of the fair rights, Mr. Frank Bailey, £4 had been paid by him to the sanitary authority to prevent the cost of cleansing the ground falling upon the rates. Misstatement number two was that there is no charter—and that there never was a charter. What amazingly superior knowledge this champion of abolition possessed. What was the nature of the proprietary that he, with three other local gentlemen, had purchased, and under which they had presumed to practically kill the fair? These gentlemen were the owners of the fair franchise. A fair franchise could only become a legal entity in two ways—by Royal Charter or by an Act of Parliament. To quibble over the existence of the actual Royal grant now is to attempt to throw dust into the eyes of the people. There is a legal fair at Mitcham. Its legal tenure is beyond all present dispute. This very gentleman, as a joint proprietor of the fair, can be called as a witness to prove its existence. Why, then, raise such purely sophistical arguments as the misleading statements—"There is no charter," "There never was a charter" implies? Misleading statement number three is that the Showmen's Guild was a party in the action of the Conservators against Messrs. Ball, Hill, and Wilson.

The Guild gave no undertaking such as the one asserted by this expert exponent in the art of oblique statement. The Council of the Showmen's Guild never sent out, or authorised, such an agreement. In fact, our principal function as a trades union is to advise and to assist our members. We possess no powers to either coerce or to bind our members. The only parties to the injunction proceedings were Messrs. Ball, Hill, and Wilson, and all these men will undoubtedly obey the order of the Court, and will not, until that interdict is removed, think of drawing on the Green. The other misleading statements (to which he referred seriatim) had reference to the attitude of the Home Secretary, the motives of a sordid character attributed to the showpeople, and to the alleged difficulties only existent in the unwilling mind of the abolitionists that surrounded the proposed removal of the fair to the Three Kings' Common.

Mr. Horne carried the crowd with him in his warm denunciation of the action of the Conservators in seeking to usurp the statutory powers alone vested in the Home Secretary—the power, after hearing all parties concerned, to abolish a fair. The responsible Minister of the Crown had refused, and still refused, to abolish it. The constitutional machinery had been invoked by these persistent abolitionists. The machine had failed. Those gentlemen, instead of bowing to the one and only proper authority, endeavoured to secure their ends by other methods.

The Policy of the Showmen's Guild.

There was no need for concealment. He was there to state what their policy was. It was to secure under permanent conditions the Fair. They recognised that the Fair-green had become unsuitable, and were quite willing that it should be removed to the Three Kings' or to Figg's Marsh.

The Showmen's Guild would join the proper authorities in any petition to the Home Secretary asking for its removal to another position of the Common, provided that the Fair rights still remained to the people of Mitcham. He concluded a powerful speech (every point of which told with the vast concourse of people to whom it was addressed) with an appeal for justice. He assured them that until justice was done the showmen would persist in asserting their rights. He warned the abolitionists that procedure by injunction was a tedious business, and that the showmen would continue to assert their rights. He was well aware that perhaps 100 showmen would be threatened with an injunction. If the injunction proceedings succeeded and the whole of this year's tenants were interdicted, the only result would be the advent of another 100 next year, who would assert their rights and hold the fair. As there were 70,000 showpeople in the United Kingdom, it would take some years to exhaust by process of injunction the supply of the valiant fighters.

Then in a humorous passage he intimated that when the last of the brave band of 70,000 had been injuncted he himself, in the glory of a grand old age, as the last of his race, would open a show on the Fair-green, and that would be the grand injunction. He seconded, with all his poor powers, the resolution before the meeting.

Councillors Dr. De Caux, Bland, and Baker, and ex-Councillor J. Grange made telling speeches in support of the motion. The resolution was then carried with acclamation, not a single hand being held up against it.

On the motion of the Guild Chaplain, the Chairman, Mr. Councillor Dant, and the speakers were thanked, and the immense crowd dispersed.

A SHOWMAN WEDDING.

AT St. Thomas's Parish Church, Neath, on Wednesday morning, a pretty wedding was solemnised, the contracting parties being Mr. Charles Philip Stanley, son of the late Mr. Joseph Stanley, of the Black Lion Hotel, Abergavenny, and Annie Maud, the eldest daughter of Mr. John North The rector, the Rev. A. J. Evans, M.A., was the officiating clergyman. The popularity of both the contracting parties was shown by the large attendance at the church, which was crowded. The bride wore a white silk dress and a Napoleon hat with white ostrich tips and a gold watch brooch and pendant, the gifts of the bridegroom. She was attended by Miss Janet Stanley and Miss Lizzie North, whose dresses were white serge trimmed with pale blue and gold. Their ornaments were gold bangles, the gifts of the bridegroom. The bride's going away dress was a navy blue serge, with hat to match. She was given away by her brother, Mr. Charles North. The duties of best man were discharged by Mr. Arthur Bath, of Abergavenny.

After the ceremony the wedding breakfast was partaken of at 25, Windsor-terrace. Felicitous speeches were delivered by Mr. John North, Mr. Charles North, and others, a long and happy life being wished the newly-wedded pair. The bridegroom suitably responded. The happy couple left by the afternoon train for London, where the honeymoon will be spent, followed by the good wishes of a host of friends. Hundreds of useful and beautiful presents were received from all parts of the country.

DURING the present week, Messrs. Barker and Thurston's high-speeded racing motor-cars have been doing good business on the Market-square, Biggleswade. Mr. Chas. Thurston is also here, with his famous Royal cinematograph show, and is showing nightly some splendid up-to-date films, including pictures with human voices. Grand business is being done, the show being packed at each performance.

AT Mr. Pickard's American Museum, Glasgow, which adjoins the "Brit.," Tom Thumb is in the last week of a long and successful stay.

WE are pleased to hear from our Pietermaritzburg correspondent that Tommy Holder, known in the showman's world as "Funny Tommy," has arrived in Pietermaritzburg with a full company of variety artists, and is appearing nightly at the Central Music Hall. No doubt his many friends will be pleased to hear he is doing good business.

FILM GOSSIP.

Pathé Frères.

ONE of the most comical series of pictures we have seen is that entitled Our Band Competition. It would be difficult to describe it in anything approaching an adequate manner. In the first place we have quite a little regiment of men, grotesquely attired, and grotesque also from a point of view of their countenances, marching along the streets carrying all manner of common and uncommon musical instruments. The facial expressions of some of them are ludicrous in the extreme, and one cannot look at them without bursting into hearty laughter. The antics of this quaint band, as they rush hither and thither, in and out of restaurants and public places, upsetting chairs and tables, and generally disturbing everything, form a pictorial farcical comedy which cannot fail to become popular.

I'LL DANCE THE CAKE-WALK is the somewhat curious title of a film which is also of the amusing order. A gentleman, arriving home somewhat unexpectedly, finds his wife in the embrace of another man. Under a threat to shoot, the intruder signs a statement to the effect that he will dance a cake-walk whenever "Mr. Walker," the angry husband, desires him to do so. We next see the unhappy intruder about to take a seat outside a café. Up comes Mr. Walker, who promptly orders him to dance, which he does to the annoyance of everybody, and finally gets the order of the "boot" from the infuriated restaurateur. A similar thing happens when a visit is paid to a family, who are exceedingly shocked when their guest jumps on to the table and performs some violent evolutions. Eventually, however, the unwilling dancer gets a little of his own back on "Mr. Walker," for the latter discovers that he has mislaid his revolver, and is himself forced to do a dance with a pistol pointed at his head by his own victim.

TOMMY ATKINS MINDING THE BABY is also an amusing Pathé number. It shows how a soldier meets his sweetheart, a nurse girl, and undertakes to look after the baby she is carrying, and how he performs this duty. William the Poacher is a dramatic film; In Seville has its instructive side, in that it gives panoramic views of the town from whence come the oranges which are so largely employed in the manufacture of English marmalade; and in Easter Eggs we are treated to several pretty spectacles of coloured transformations. All these should find a ready market.

Charles Urban Trading Co., Ltd.

LOVE CONQUERS ALL is an intensely affecting and beautiful dramatic story. It opens with the dining-room in a prosperous doctor's residence. While seated at luncheon the doctor's little daughter complains of her throat. Her father casually examines the troubled spot and reassures her. Later a boon companion invites the medical man to spend a convivial evening, and the ensuing scene shows a sumptuous dinner table, pleasant surroundings, a plentiful supply of champagne, and the medico dining not wisely but too well. We are now taken back to the doctor's bedroom, where we see the child in its crib struggling in an attack of diphtheria, and the agonised mother nearly distracted. She dispatches a servant to find his master. The servant succeeds in his quest, but fails to make the doctor understand the seriousness of the position of affairs at home. Eventually the convivial party bring their carouse to an end, and the doctor drives home in an inebriated condition. He is soon brought to realise his daughter's danger, and the necessity for instant action; he bathes his face and head in water, gets his instruments ready, and carefully performs the delicate operation of tracheotomy; the little girl is immediately relieved, and subsequently acts as peacemaker between her mother and father.

THE AMATEUR SPORTSMAN, another Urban film, is of a most entertaining character. A Frenchman, thirsting for excitement, decides upon a day's shooting, and his experiences are comically depicted. Determined to do the thing thoroughly, he attires himself regardless of cost in garments suitable to the occasion. A worthless hound is palmed off upon him by a dealer as a perfect sporting dog, and the would-be hunter sets forth in search of game. His theatrical methods and numerous accidents, his comical mistakes in hitting the wrong object, and his efforts to induce the dog to stalk or retrieve, or to do anything but hamper its owner, are most ludicrous. The climax is reached when, after triumphantly producing the contents of a full bag (purchased from a dealer), his wife discovers the tickets denoting the price attached to the hares he had brought home as evidence of his skill as a sportsman.

SQUARING THE LANDLORD is another Urban comedy. An impecunious artist is painting from a model, when the landlord enters the studio and demands the rent. The artist retires to raise the wind, and model and landlord become acquainted, then friendly, then amorous. The artist quietly reappears and again withdraws, struck by a happy idea. He enters the landlord's rooms and persuades that worthy's wife to step upstairs to his studio. She does so, and is scandalised to find her husband embracing the artist's model. Recriminations follow, and the landlord beats a retreat, leaving the receipt behind. The Poacher's Daughter is a melodrama of intense human interest, superbly acted, and beautifully presented. It is amid lovely rustic scenes of forest and glade that this tragedy of defiance of game laws, illicit affection, detection, and vengeance is laid.

Vitagraph Company.

LIGHTNING SKETCHES is a film which the Vitagraph Company has just issued, and on which it rather prides itself. The story is this:—A cartoonist draws with wonderful rapidity a number sketches, the characters of which move just as if alive, although they are merely sketches in outline. An eagle is first drawn, with outspread wings, and then as soon as the sketch is finished and the artist moves away the eagle flaps its wings and then the sheet of paper rolls itself up and disappears. Next the artist writes "Coon" and "Cohen," then with a few strokes of his pencil dexterously transforms the word "Coon" into a sketch of a coloured gentleman with an expansive smile, and changes the word "Cohen" into a very good portrait of Mr. Isaac Cohen himself. A bootle, glass, and vichy syphon are drawn. The bottle pours out whisky, the syphon squirts vichy, and the high-ball is complete, even running over the glass a little, and still at all times it is not real liquid, not actual bottles and a glass, but only a charcoal sketch.

NEXT a portrait of a bald-headed man is rapidly sketched. The artist produces a large bottle of hair restorer, shakes it well, then rubs some on the bald head of the sketch and instantly hair begins to sprout, first short, stubby ones, then growing longer until the man's head is covered with a fine growth of long, curly hair. A gentleman is brought in, seated in front of the board, and the artist rapidly makes a very life-like portrait of the model. When both artist and model have gone away a cigar appears in the mouth of the sketch and is rapidly smoked, the puffs of smoke coming from the mouth of the sketch in a very absurd and realistic style. Now the cartoonist draws with bewildering rapidity a comical sketch of an elephant, and on the other side of the board a picture of a square trunk. The trunk slowly opens and a clown slowly climbs out, balances himself on the end of the trunk, then, by a double somersault, lands on the back of the elephant, which stands up on its hind legs and walks off the board. We understand that there has been a great call for this series.

A second commendable Vitagraph production is The Athletic American Girls. In a private gymnasium three sisters are exercising in various ways, boxing, fencing, wrestling, swinging dumbells and Indian clubs. They perform their exercises in an exceedingly graceful and charming manner. Next we see the girls seated on a park bench. A masher comes along and begins to flirt with them. At first they pay no attention to him, but finally he becomes too familiar, so one of the girls gets up and sails into him in a very strenuous manner, punching right and left. The girl then calmly seats herself, opens her box of candy, passes it to her sisters, and they nonchalantly eat their candy while the masher limps away. Next we see the three girls at home, sitting demurely in the parlour in evening dress. A timid-looking young man enters, and while they are endeavouring to entertain him, the maidservant rushes in, closely followed by a burly, drunken ice man, who carries in one hand a pair of ice tongs and a large lump of ice. The timid young man gets behind the piano. One of the girls takes the iceman by the back of the neck, teaches him a few tricks of wrestling, and finally they throw him through the window. An express wagon now backs up at the front of their house. The expressmen with great difficulty unload three or four large and heavy trunks, but, after they are on the sidewalk they find they are too heavy to carry in the house. Each one tries in turn, but fails to lift one up. The athletic girls, who have been watching out of the window, now emerge from the house, each one picks up one of the heavy trunks, hoists it on her back, and easily carries it up the steps and into the house to the great astonishment of the expressmen. In fact, no feat seems to be too difficult or strenuous for these young muscular women. Then a large automobile gets its rear wheels stuck deep and fast in the mud, and the efforts of the chauffeur and half a dozen men, with pole and beams, fail to extricate the machine. The girls, however, wave the men away, put their shoulders to the wheel, and with scarcely any effort, push the automobile out on to smooth road. The last scene shows the girls again in their gymnasium going through their exercises, each one proudly exhibiting her muscular development. Suddenly, in the midst of their exercises, a little mouse runs across the floor. Then their feminine nature asserts itself; one of them scrambles to the top of the piano, the second one goes into hysterics, and the third faints.

Mr. James Harrington, of the firm of Messrs. Harrington and Co., Sydney, has arrived in Town. He is in search of phonograph and cinématograph novelties, and will remain here for one month.

AMUSEMENTS IN AUSTRALIA.

SYDNEY, July 9.—Her Majesty's.—The Spring Chicken is drawing great houses to Mr. Williamson's theatre. Mr. George Lauri and Miss Florence Young continue to retain their lead as popular favourites.

"The Squatter's Daughter" keeps on satisfying Mr. William Anderson's patrons at the Criterion, all other dramatic houses being occupied by other forms of entertainment.

Town Hall.—Mr. Leslie Herries, the monologue artist, is doing well here, with his own work and some fine views of "Living Paris." Mr. Marshall Crosby, a pleasing baritone, sings several songs during each performance.

The Tivoli welcomed the Svengalis, who give a most interesting, puzzling, and altogether clever turn, and all the rest of Mr. Harry Rickards' large company is in the bill.

The Palace has Mr. Edwin Geach's collection of Empire Pictures. West's Pictures are at the Lyceum; Vaudeville fills the National Amphitheatre; the Victoria Hall has pictures and vaudeville; the Oxford accommodates the World's Picture Company; and the Haymarket Hippodrome gives its visitants strong melodrama.

Madame Albani will give one farewell concert during this month, preparations for which are being made by Mr. John Brownlow, of Paling's. Miss Mildred Jones, the contralto of the Albani company is slowly recovering from her late serious illness.

Miss Lillian Ormond, one of the chorus, has made a great name for herself by stepping into the breach, and singing the part of Senta, in The Flying Dutchman, when the leading lady in a visiting German opera troupe defected on the 6th. Loud cheers greeted the plucky young singer at curtain-fall.

Mrs. Bland Holt left for London yesterday by the Canadian liner Manuka. Mr. Charles Waldron, the "Squaw Man," went by the same boat, accompanied by his newly-wedded wife.

AMUSEMENTS IN SOUTH AFRICA.

DURBAN, July 20.—Theatre Royal.—Proprietors, Messrs. B. and F. Wheeler.—Wheelers' Gaiety company, after a very successful production of The Belle of New York, presented The White Chrysanthemum, at the Theatre Royal this week. This was the first production of the play in Durban, and large audiences attended nightly. The title-rôle was successfully taken by Miss Maimie Brickwell, and her songs and duets were exceedingly well sung. Mr. Frank Greene made a distinct hit as Lieut, Reginald Armitage, his singing and acting being much enjoyed. Miss Lottie Sargent, as Betty Kenyon, had a small rôle, but performed it well; Miss Alice Pollard, as Cornelia Vanderdeckan, the American girl, played cleverly; and Miss Mabel Medrow scored a great success with her "South African Girl" song, in which different types of South African girls are introduced. Mr. Bert D'Arcy, as Sin Chong, increased his already high reputation as a first-class comedian; Mr. Arthur Laceby gave a finished performance of Lieut. Belmont, and the other parts were all in efficient hands, the chorus work being all that could be desired.

A series of entertainments and firework displays was begun in the Lake Enclosure of the park grounds at the Alexandra Palace on Saturday. The band of the Royal Horse Guards (Blue), conductor Mr. Manuel Bilton, did admirable duty with their instrumental selections before and at the time of the display. The variety show was acted by the band of the Essex Imperial Yeomanry, conductor Mr. A. Cock. The entertainment consisted of an acrobatic speciality of considerable merit by Senor Levano, Professor Leeman (an agile gymnast and club expert), and a ballet tastefully arranged by that past master of his art, Paul Valentine. A somewhat novel feature was introduced by the exhibition of animated pictures in the centre of the lake, and, with the well-known pyrotechny of Messrs. James Pain and Sons, brought a well-arranged programme to a successful issue.

Mr. W. E. Poole, stage-manager of the Glasgow Gaiety, desires through our columns to acknowledge the kindness of the staff friends and artists of that theatre towards him in his recent bereavement, and the numerous wires and letters received.

"The Era" can be obtained at the principal bookstalls throughout the provinces.

SOLD AT "THE ERA" BUILDINGS,
5, TAVISTOCK-STREET, LONDON, W.C.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1907.
"The Era" Dramatic and Musical Annual for 1907 is up to its usual standard—in fact, it is, if possible, smarter than ever. There is an excellent budget of articles from the pens of Miss Ellen Terry, Miss Cicely Richards, Miss Pollie Emery, Messrs. Frank Cooper, Arthur Collins, Charles Collette, Frank Curzon, Edward German, Cliff Ryland, and many others. The illustrated obituary, the alphabetical list of plays produced in London and the provinces, and all the other valuable features of the Annual are as complete as ever, and make this handbook extremely useful not only to members of the profession, but to the infinitely wider circle interested directly or indirectly in the drama.—Whitehall Review.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1907.
"The Era" Annual deservedly ranks high as a record of the passing theatrical show. The new issue, in a comprehensive survey of the drama, mentions in proper order all the productions and revivals of the year, both at home and abroad and gives a list of the theatres and music halls of the United Kingdom, with the names of their respective managers. The lighter side of the publication, to which many well-known managers and performers contribute, is of exceptionally high literary merit.—Morning Leader, Jan. 21, '07.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1907.
Once more, stuffed with good things, "The Era" Annual appears from its office at 5, Tavistock-street. The edition for 1907 is as nicely got up as its predecessors, and, in addition to a calendar and other theatrical memoranda, contains two lists of the year's productions, one arranged under the names of the theatres and the other alphabetically. In addition there are a number of striking or humorous contributions by leading actors and actresses—Miss Ellen Terry, Mr. Frank Cooper, Mr. Frank Curzon, Mr. Arthur Collins, Mr. Charles Collette, Miss Alma Murray, and Mr. John Lawson are among those who have contributed bright experiences to this up-to-date shilling theatrical handbook.—Star, Jan. 22.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1907.
A compendium of great value to all interested, professionally or otherwise, in music and drama is "The Era" Dramatic and Musical Annual, the issue for 1907 of which has just been issued (London: 5, Tavistock-street, Strand, 1s.). Especially attractive are the stories told by some twenty artists, whose photographs and autographs are included.—Glasgow Herald, Jan. 31.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1907.
"The Era" Annual for 1907. 1s. "Era" Office, 5, Tavistock-street, Strand, W.C. Once again this useful publication comes out with its useful tabular information concerning things dramatic, such as the date of the production of new plays and important revivals produced at the London, provincial, and Paris theatres. In addition are many portraits and short stories given over the signatures of many prominent theatrical and music hall people, and a variety of other interesting matter.—Financial Times, Jan. 21 '07.

RE APPLICATIONS FOR ENGAGEMENTS

All applications by either Artists or their Agents must be made to the Head Office.

Lowest terms must be stated, and distinction made between salaries required for larger and smaller towns.

Vacant dates should be stated. If a list of existing bookings be sent, it will render selection easier.

Artists employing Agents should accredit one only at one time, as the friction arising when several Agents are employed at the same time, all expecting the one booking to go through each of them, often renders it expedient to avoid that booking altogether rather than give undeserved offence to several Agents.

New Acts seeking Engagements, or turns not rebooked (possibly because they have played a series of dates without introducing new business), will facilitate matters by having their acts seen by our District Managers. Their Districts and Postal Addresses are as follow:—

EDINBURGH, GLASGOW, NEWCASTLE, AND DISTRICT.
MR. S. GETHING,
Empire Theatre, Glasgow.

LEEDS, SHEFFIELD, HULL, BRADFORD, AND DISTRICT.
MR. T. GERALD MORTON,

LONDON DISTRICT.
MR. WILLIAM COLLINS,
The Empire, Shepherd's Bush, W.

N.B.—Mr. OSWALD STOLL or Mr. FRANK ALLEN can be seen by appointment on all matters arising out of the above, and for the discussion of entirely new Numbers.

All Artists or Agents who communicate with our District Representatives must have made definite applications, in accordance with above directions, to the Head Office, at the same time, or just previously.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1907.
Another book which calls for attention is that excellent and almost indispensable work of reference, "The Era" Almanack and Annual. In this handy shillingsworth one has a complete record of the past dramatic year, and the arrangement is so admirable that no time is lost in finding the desired subject, title of play, revival, or new production, and all that appertains to the drama of the year. The same remark applies to the information concerning the stages of Paris and Berlin; and I should like to see next year the American stage included, because it is becoming so intimately allied with our own, by reason of the production of plays, the interchange of actors, and the comprehensive interests of managers. In addition to the solid pages of facts, there are included short tales and stories by well-known actors and actresses, and altogether the book is one which should find its way into the hands of all genuine lovers of the drama.—Morning Advertiser, Feb. 23, '07.

THIS WEEK'S NOVELTIES.

I'LL DANCE THE CAKEWALK.

Code Word COLORIS.

An American has a quarrel with a Frenchman. Instead of fighting a duel, as the Frenchman would like, the American takes his revolver and makes the young man dance the cakewalk, here, there, and everywhere, until one day the American, leaving his revolver behind, the tables are turned and he has to dance instead. Screamingly funny.

297ft. The Subject, £4 19s.

PRIVATE ATKINS MINDS THE BABY.

Code Word, COLOSSAL.

Poor Atkins agrees to mind the baby while nurse goes and does some shopping. Baby screams, cries, and generally makes itself disagreeable. The Colonel comes along. What to do with baby? Quickly he must hide it. This he does; but to find it again is not so easy. Nurse approaches—what shall he do? He wildly seizes another mite from a pram. In the meantime the park-keeper has found the first baby, which he puts in Tommy's arms. Behold! he has now two babies—one in each arm. Tableau!

346ft. The Subject, £5 15s. 4d.

EASTER EGGS.

Code Word, CIMENT.

Simply perfect. A fairy, standing in a picturesque scene, holds out her arms and receives Easter eggs, which she opens one by one. Out come the tiniest of dwarf dancers. At a sign from the fairy they disappear; the eggs open again, and out peep the chubbiest of babies, holding out their dear little hands.

248ft. The Subject. £4 2s. 8d. colouring £3.

Code Word, CONCORDE.

Thrilling and pathetic story. A poacher and his little girl set out to poach. They are overtaken by the game-keeper, who shoots the poor old poacher. Now the poacher's elder daughter is in love with the gamekeeper, but notwithstanding the little girl tracks him down and shoots him. Very touching.

412ft. The Subject, £6 17s. 4d. Colouring, 8s 6d.

IN SEVILLE.

Code Word, COLLATION.

Delightful pictures of the people, streets, and doings of the country, ending up with "Holy Week." Processions, statues, &c.

577ft. The Subject, £9 12s. 4d.

THE FAIRY OF THE BLACK ROCKS.

Code Word, CHEVIOTE.

A sweet fairy story. A young man refusing to carry some wood for an old woman, who is really a witch, she plays all kinds of tricks with him; amongst others, makes water rush out of rocks over him, &c.; pretends to hang him, &c.; but he, being truly sorry, she forgives, and he rides away in a beautiful chariot.

280ft. The Subject, £4 13s. 4d. Colouring, 3s. 6d.

OUR BAND'S GOING TO THE COMPETITION.

Code Word. CONCOMBRE.

Amusing scenes of a local band going to a big competition. They arrive in anything but good style. In the excitement the bandmaster falls over the platform. They are awarded the "first prize for deportment." They get a little the worse for wear, and return to their village in sixes and sevens, but having gained the first prize. Very funny.

643ft. The Subject, £10 4s. 4d.

CAMBODIAN CUSTOMS.

Pretty and interesting scenes of life and customs in Cambodia.

264ft. The Subject, £4 8s.

THE ATHLETIC AMERICAN GIRLS

COPYRIGHT 1907 BY THE VITAGRAPH COMPANY OF AMERICA.

The picture opens with a view of a private gymnasium where three attractive young ladies are seen boxing, wrestling, fencing, &c. Scene changes to Prospect Park, where the same girls are seated on a bench, reading. A "Masher" tries to force his attentions upon the ladies and is put "down and out" by one of them. At home, while entertaining a timid gentleman, the housemaid suddenly enters, followed by a burly iceman, who endeavours to intimidate them. The timid caller hides himself—one girl routs the iceman. On the road an auto is stuck, and, where the men fail, the girls push it out of the rut. Two expressmen balk on carrying trunks into the house; the girls, observing them from the window, emerge, and easily make off with the bulky trunks.

ANOTHER HUGE SUCCESS.

LIGHTNING SKETCHES.

COPYRIGHT 1907 BY THE VITAGRAPH COMPANY OF AMERICA.

Marvellous. Bewildering. Laughable. Very Mystifying and Novel.

A cartoonist draws with wonderful rapidity a number of sketches, the characters in which move just as if alive, although they are merely sketches in outline, not living people. A bottle, glass, and vichy syphon are drawn, the bottle pours out whiskey, the syphon squirts vichy, and the high-ball is complete—even running over a little, and still at all times it is not a real liquid—not actual bottle and glass, only a charcoal sketch. A dude and a poster girl are drawn. The dude makes love to the girl, juggles with his cane and hat, and finally, being very short, stands on his silk hat in order to kiss the young lady. The artist now rubs out the centre of the picture, but the upper and lower portions continue to move.

Code Word, "SKET." Length 600ft.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENTS.)

ABERDEEN.—HIS MAJESTY'S THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Robert Arthur; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Adair Nelson.—Mrs. Russ-Whytal and company appear this week in Clancarty. Mr. Stratton Rodney plays impressively as King William; Mr. Acton Bond gives a skilful portraiture of Lord Clancarty; Lord Spencer is convincingly portrayed by Mr. J. J. Bartlett; and Mr. Charles Coombe artistically portrays the Earl of Portland. Mr. Harry J. Crane contributes a vivid sketch of the informer, Goodman; and Mr. Arthur Burne and Miss Mabel Knowles are successful as Lord Woodstock and Lady Betty Noel. Mrs. Russ-Whytal gives a delightful impersonation of Lady Clancarty, playing with particular charm in the lighter parts, and with great power and intensity in the more emotional scenes.

PALACE THEATRE. — Lessees, The United Theatres Co., Ltd.; Manager, Mr. Walter Gilbert.—Mlle. Claire Keary makes a great hit with her marvellously well-trained boxing cats; the Two Bees act cleverly in an amusing comedy scena, The Man in the Moon; Mr. Bob Hamilton is a creditable specimen of a Scottish comedian; Earle and Goodwin are good comedians; Cosgrove and Burns are excellently-matched comedy duettists; the Sisters Currie and Wally Scott are loudly applauded for their funny fooling; Mr. Barney Vox is highly gifted as a ventriloquist; and Talbot and Pearce are particularly pleasing in a Japanese musical duologue, Yo San. "The Little Orphan" Bioscope series is highly appreciated.

BEACH PAVILION.—Proprietor, Mr. David Thomson.—Mr. Scott Skinner continues to delight the audiences with his violin playing; and among the newcomers are the Maros, a pair of clever and original comedians and triple-bar experts. Mr. Thomson is rapturously applauded for his character study in The Handsome Widow; Miss Minnie Osborne is popular as ever; and Messrs. Jack Belton and Oswald Gray shine conspicuously as humorists. Miss Lottie Stewart is a skilful accompanist.

ABERTILLERY.—PAVILION.—Lessees, Messrs. E. and H. Tilney; Manager, Mr. E. Pryce.—Derenda and Green are very clever and amusing as juggling comedians; Onda and Leon contribute a splendid turn on the horizontal bars; Mlle. Yetta proves a decided success with her wire walking and dancing; Ivy Aberdare, with her coon songs and sand dancing, is heartily applauded; Alf. Corrie and Ethel Foote are entertaining in duologue; Alf. Bishop, known "as the Little Lump of Fun," makes everyone laugh; the Swift trio of cyclists are very good; Nellie Nora gives an excellent little musical turn, her playing being of exceptional merit; the Sisters Volbecque are delightful in duo songs and patter, their performance meriting the enthusiastic applause they receive. The orchestra, under the direction of Mr. W. Dexter (late Carl Rosa company), performs some pleasing selections.

ACCRINGTON.—PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. J. B. Ormerod; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. E. Barnes. — On Monday night Mr. Allan Wilkie opened here with an excellent Shakespearean company. Othello was performed with credit by Mr. Allan Wilkie; Mr. A. Marsh gave a scholarly reading of Iago; and Mr. Paul Lovett must be highly complimented for his performance of Cassio. Mr. Charles Kingsley was good as Montano; Mr. Edwin Beverly was at home in the part of the Duke of Venice; Brabantio was cleverly depicted by Mr. John Paley; Miss Carrie is an artist of more than ordinary merit, and was an ideal Desdemona; and Miss Mary Lovett deserves special praise for her performance of Emilia. The rest of the parts were in capable hands. During the week, The Merchant of Venice, As You Like It, The Corsican Brothers, The Sleigh Bells, Hamlet, and Richard III. are promised.

HIPPODROME. — Proprietors, Messrs. Willmot, Vandy, Potter, and Weisker.—Silbon's circus of ponies, dogs, and cats is clever and interesting; Miss Irene is a dainty comedienne; Burley and Burley are a smart pair of comedy acrobats: Arthur Goodman must be complimented for his clever turn; the Ottawas are very good in their act; Edie Grey and the Boys of Harmony, Madie Scott's company in the sketch of '98, and the Biograph, complete a good programme.

ALDERSHOT.—HIPPODROME.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Clarence Sounes; Resident-Manager, Mr. J. Gladwin.—The variety season at Aldershot Hippodrome concludes this week, and on Monday the house in question will again be called the Theatre Royal, and open with His House in Order. For the final programme Mr. Sounes is presenting a novel and attractive entertainment, mainly of Bioscope pictures. There is, however, a break in the sequence of animated pictures in the appearance of the Five M.P.'s, or Musical Palmers, and their vocal and instrumental efforts are highly appreciated.

ASHTON-UNDER-LYNE.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Owner and Manager, Mr. Chas Revill; Acting-Manager, Mr. Wm. Revill.—For the wakes holidays, the theatre was reopened on Monday evening with Mr. Frank Lindo and company in the domestic drama, Home, Sweet Home. Mr. Lindo sustains, with his accustomed strenuous manner and power of dramatic expression, the part of Stephen Armitage, the young fisherman; Mr. D. Lawrence Doyle acts with telling feeling as the old fisherman; and prominence is given to a minor part by Mr. Geo. Overs. Mr. Miles Hodgson as the villainous secretary is quite sufficiently cunning and unscrupulous; the heroine is sympathetic and winning in the hands of Miss Marion Wakeford; and satisfactory interpretation is given to minor female parts by Misses Daisy and Ray Rochefort, L. Carlton, and by Messrs. H. Gordon Ingram, Tom E. Lewis, Lionel Ray, E. A. Owen, and Capt. Gerald Gambier.

EMPIRE HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; Resident-Manager, Mr. W. Leech.—Milton Ray's burlesque company appear in a new version of the pantomime play, Don Quixote. The chivalrous Don of Mr. Fred Russell is a most eccentric personage, his lanky form, his long face and pointed beard, and wildly restless manner being all characteristic of the knight of romance. Mr. Arthur Milton makes Sancho Panza a highly laughter-provoking, satirical rogue. Mr. Joe English makes up excellently as Donna Betsiana; and the company generally do well. The swell comedian, Harry Leaton, is a good "turn," refined and clever; the Lovelaces appeal to many tastes with beautifully illustrated songs; Milsted and Bell (Emmie and Joe) introduce a musical comedy-scena, The Belle of Arizona; Geo. Young displays extraordinary skill in the fingering of the concertina, assisted by Mme. Louis; Tina Clements submits an interesting act; and Marguerite Ismay and her pic-chics in the charming scena, Kickapoo, is one of the prime features of the bill. The Bioscope pictures some daring cavalry feats.

ATTERCLIFFE.—PALACE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietor, Mr. T. Allan Edwards; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Lacy Lyne; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Bert Lester.—A popular turn is that submitted by Sergeant W. Mumford, who is making a welcome reappearance, and who, in full regimentals, gives an excellent display of lance, sword, and carbine drill, whilst keeping his balance on a telephone wire stretched across the stage. The vocal items, ably rendered by the Three Sisters Grosvenors, are a pleasing feature; hearty and well-deserved applause greets the efforts of Kenneth and Kane (Sid and Maude), whose comedy interlude is full of wit and humour; Miss Ena Compton is an acceptable comedienne; as usual, Mr. Clayton's "Attergraph" pictures are up to date; the Brothers St. Clair are both clever and amusing as trick cyclists, their football match arousing hearty laughter; the Brassos are a good acquisition to the bill as burlesque acrobats; and Mr. George French, comedian, also finds favour with the audience.

Central Hall.—Lessees, Jasper Redfern, Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. F. W. Holmes.—The Biograph pictures include A Trip to Switzerland, The Gipsy's Bride, Poor, but Honest, A Robber Robbed, Father's Quiet Sunday, and Lightning Sketches. Highly-appreciated variety turns are given by Mr. George Barnard, character vocalist; the Two Bronsons, duettists; and Mr. Pat O'Connor, Hibernian humorist and expert dancer.

AYR.—New Gaiety Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr. R. C. Buchanan; Acting-Manager, Mr. Harry W. Day.—Mr. William Greet's company in The Earl and the Girl opened on Monday. Miss Florence Wix as Elphin Haye was delightfully charming, and created a most favourable impression by her fine acting; Mr. Alfred Donohoe makes the part of Jim Cheese excruciatingly funny; Mr. Robert Hyatt as Dick Wargrave was particularly clever; Mr. Frank A. Wood played the part of A. Bunker Bliss particularly well; Miss B. Anderson gave a good interpretation of the part of Miss Shimmering Black; while the other members of the company gave first-class support, making the whole an outstandingly meretorious performance and most enjoyable. The piece was most completely staged.

BACUP.—New Court Theatre.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Frank Denman-Wood.—Mr. Frank Ayrton's company appeared here on Monday in The Power of Gold. Mr. George Lyttleton is conspicuous with a powerful performance of Hadgi Zambra; Mr. R. F. Stacy plays the part of Paul Judson with marked ability; Mr. Richard Harris gives a vivid picture of the rascalities of Mark Harley; Mr. Frank Ayrton as Sammy Smudge and Miss Madge Seymour as Norah Donnelly bring the humour of the piece into strong relief; and Mr. F. Holyoake as Dr. Stephen Saunders, and Mr. W. Victor as Peter Maguire fill their rôles satisfactorily; Miss Hettie Laytine is commendable as Sister Maria; Miss Amy McNeill distinguishes herself as Lady Brandou; and Little Prudence, as Paddy Blake, a street arab, adds considerably to the success of the production.

BARNSTAPLE.—Theatre Royal.—Proprietors, The Bridge Trust; Manager, Mr. Harry Ashton.—Enthusiastic houses greeted the appearance here of Mr. Charles Macdona's company in The Country Girl on Monday and Tuesday. The title-rôle was delightfully undertaken by Miss Blanche Lynn, her Devonshire dialect being intensely appreciated; Miss Gladys Christoe received a warm welcome and scored heavily as Marjorie Joy, the "Cooing" song receiving abundant recognition; Miss Poppie Dale made a hit as the jealous Princess; and what proved a special feature was the partnership of Mr. Arthur Staples and Miss Gipsy Touzeau, who, in their numerous "scenes," kept the audience in a constant ripple of laughter. Mr. Martin D. Pitts made a dashing Lieutenant; Mr. W. O. Billington an amorous Sir Joseph Verity; and Messrs. Bernard Vaughan, Davis Fisher, Fred Carrington, and Ernest Louis sustained their respective parts with distinction. The company is under the management of Mr. Richard Sullivan.

Evelyn gives a graphic picture of Gabriel Garth; Miss Kate Newton displays grace and charm as Gertrude Garth; in the difficult part of Lilian Garth Miss Violet Hammers is clever; and Mr. Howell Travis is a most effective Duncan Bly. Mr. Fred W. Graham is a humorous Mike Copplestone; and Mr. Kenneth Blake an amusing Ned Pennycomequick.

Tivoli Theatre of Varieties.—Lessee and Manager, Signor Pepi; Acting-Manager, Mr. G. Edgar Laban.—The Tom Davies Trio cause a great sensation with Motoring in Mid-Air; and Miss Daisy Dormer, comedienne, meets with much appreciation. Harrigan and Holt prove amusing comedians; and Arthur and May good singers and dancers. May Marton is a dainty comedienne; and Angeline a pleasing lady juggler.

Hippodrome.—Lessees and Managers, Mr. and Mrs. Calvert Routledge.—The British Animated Pictures are the principal attraction here, interspersed with songs by Little Doris, and a variety turn by Mr. Tom Anson, a tenor vocalist.

BARRY DOCK. — Hippodrome. — Managing-Director, Mr. Arthur Carlton; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. R. Horrocks.—The company this week is headed by the popular comedian, Fred Cary, a great favourite; Miss Fanny Humber, in her refined musical act, is another good turn; the Sisters Ada and Letta Poole are delightful society entertainers; the Ladderites are highly appreciated; Ted Waite, a rising comedian, and Prince Ismael, a smart illusionist, with the Zaracs, complete an excellent programme.

BATH.—Theatre Royal.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Egbert Lewis; Acting-Manager, Mr. Lewis A. Long.—This historic old house, looking spic and span after the restoring of the main frontage and cleaning, reopened for the autumn season on Monday, with Messrs. H. Armitage and Arthur Leigh's company, in East Lynne. Miss Julie Kennard enacts Lady Isabel with all her old power and effect; Mr. Alfred Beaumont renders good support as Archibald Carlyle; and Miss E. Hardacre and Mr. Cyril Hayward give clever impersonations of Miss Cornelia and Lawyer Dill. Mr. E. Maule Cole's Francis Levison secures the "compliment" of being soundly hissed; and a great favourite is Mr. Alfred Tate as P.C. Bullock, whose humour creates immense hilarity.

Palace Theatre. — Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Chas. Schuberth. — Mr. Macnaghten, who was himself present on Wednesday evening, must have been pleased with the reception accorded the various artists appearing this week. The marvellous feats of strength of Launceston Elliott, rightly termed the British Hercules, are watched with great interest; Marba and Verity display wonderful agility and skill as acrobatic dancers; the rapidity with which Satsuma performs his magical tricks is quite bewildering; Williams and Warden keep the audience in a perpetual state of merriment; Luigi Salvino is a youthful instrumentalist of ability; Three Sisters Kilner vocalise and dance with energy, and a great measure of acrobatic ability; Ada Martini is a dainty comedienne and dancer; and Raymond's Bio-tableaux sustain their high reputation.

BEDFORD. — Royal County Theatre.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. E. Graham-Falcon; Acting-Manager, Mr. Walter R. Wilson.—The Second Mrs. Tanqueray was presented on Monday and the two following nights. The title-rôle was played with fine dramatic power by Miss Violet Sterne, who was warmly applauded; Mr. Norman Macowan was inimitable as Mr. Aubrey Tanqueray, and Mr. Murray Hathorn won golden opinions as Mr. Cayley Drummle; Mrs. Cortelyon was well represented by Miss Mary Masters; and Miss Isabel Hathorn was a demure Ellean; Miss Lester Stephens did justice to the part of Lady Orreyed; and Mr. S. R. Palfrey infused some fun into the rôle of Sir George Orreyed. During the last three nights of the week A Fool's Paradise was announced to be played.

BELFAST.—Theatre Royal.—Managing-Director, Mr. Fred W. Warden; Acting-Manager, Mr. James M. McCann.—We are favoured this week with a visit from Mr. Louis Calvert's company, in the new comic opera, Amasis. The cast is a particularly strong one, and includes Mr. Rutland Barrington, in the rôle of Pharaoh, an impersonation providing the keenest enjoyment. Congratulations are also due to Miss Winifred O'Connor, who appeared as the Princess Amasis, and furnished a delightful interpretation, her singing being worthy of high praise. A most amusing interpretation of Sebak was furnished by Mr. Lauri De Freece; and Mr. Roland Cunningham, in his original part of Prince Anhotep, appeared to the utmost advantage. As Natis, Miss Mabel Burnege presented a dainty impersonation; and the rôle of Cheiro was undertaken by Mr. John Doran, whose rendering of "Prayed for Life" was in every sense excellent. Mr. George Fox was dignified as the High Priest; and a funny impersonation of Ptolemy was submitted by Mr. Arthur Watts.

Palace Theatre of Varieties. — Managing-Director, Mr. Fred W. Warden; General-Manager, Mr. J. de Freece; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Harris.—The chief attraction here is provided by Mr. R. A. Roberts, the smart protean actor, who appears with great success in his celebrated comedy, Ringing the Changes; Ike Scott and Son have gained much approval for their character sketches; and a novelty is submitted by the Olympian Lady Jiu-jitsu Troupe, who demonstrate with some effect the possibilities of the Japanese art of self-defence. The acrobatic feats of the Garganys are simply marvellous; and Miss Belle Harcourt is a charming comedienne and dancer. Mr. Johnny Worman, comedian; Miss Madge Daly, comedienne; and the Palace pictures, complete.

Royal Hippodrome.—Managing-Director, Mr. Will Sley; Resident-Manager, Mr. Henry T. Downs.—Miss Alexandra Dagmar, a delightful comedienne, is a raconteur of rare merit; and a hit of no small magnitude has been made by that smart comedy duo, Pete and Minnie Lee, in their sketch, The Scotchman's Visit to London. Mr. R. Cameron Matthew's comedy company produce a mirth-provoking sketch; the Dancing Gilberts provide a good exhibition of the Terpsichorean art; and also here are Mr. Mark Leslie, coon singer; Miss Ray Wallace; Martinette and Grossi, novelty artists; Mr. Fred Arthur, vocalist and mimic; and the Hipposcope pictures.

Empire Theatre of Varieties, Ltd.—General-Manager, Mr. Frank Allen; Acting-Manager, Mr. John A. Walker.—Mr. John Lawson and company head the bill, and produce with great effect his latest episode, The Unwritten Law, which has been successful. An old favourite here, Mr. Walter Munroe, the clever Irish comedian, has been loudly and deservedly encored; the Casselli Sisters furnish a skilful exhibition of the Terpsichorean art; and Morton and Bowman appear to great advantage in their comedy duologue, "She Loved a Policeman." Orpheus, the talented musician, returns; and Spry and Austin can always rely on winning admiration for their comedy act. Also here are Miss Josie Mooney, comedienne and dancer; and the Bioscope pictures.

New Alhambra Theatre.—General-Manager, Mr. Sinclair Neill.—The Alhambra Dramatic Company, under the personal direction of Mr. M. Montgomery, produce here this week the fine drama, The Human Spider, which has taken well. Miss Nina Blake-Adams, a clever emotional actress, furnishes a skilful impersonation of Millie Tresdale, her acting being worthy of high praise; Mr. Fred Terriss (the new leading man) would indeed be difficult to surpass as George Wintringham, his acting being all that could possibly be desired; a special word of commendation is due to Mr. Cyril Grier for his clever impersonation of Ahmi Khan; and Mr. Elmore Frith is undoubtedly irreproachable as Colonel Wintringham. Miss Alice Clarke, a great favourite here, delights all with her impersonation of Sal Lambcote; and Mr. Thomas H. Solly (who is also responsible for the stage araringements) is very funny as Jack Chignall. Mr. Wilford Cheetham is seen to advantage as Basil Mortimer; and Miss Mattie Crawford makes a vivacious Janey Jenkins. Mr. Ed. Smythe must be congratulated on his capital impersonation of Romulus Potter; and Mr. J. E. Davies is the butler Jennings to the life. The Alhambra Bioscope, under the direction of Mr. Hugh Beckett, exhibits an attractive series of pictures.

BILSTON.—Theatre Royal.—Lessee, Mr. Harry Battersby; Manageress, Miss Battersby; Musical-Director, Mr. J. E. Machin.—The Trail of the Serpent is being played here, and Mr. A. Campbell-Kelly proves himself very effective as Ralph Hammond. His company comprises Mr. F. Godfrey in the comical part of Higgins, Miss Jenny Risley as Rose Wilson, and Miss Nana Cameron as the gipsy Rachel. In the al fresco pavilion adjoining the theatre, a special exhibition of bioscope pictures has been given by the Anglo-American Animated Picture Company, under the management of Mr. Jack Barnes. The views included Cowboys and Redskins, The Fireman's Wedding, and A Drunkard Will Drink.

Fitzroy Bagley is admirably impersonated by Mr. Herbert Chown; Mr. Alfred Hall is well suited as James Rossmore; and Mr. Gordon McLeod is an efficient Jefferson Ryder. Mrs. Ryder is well played by Miss Maud Townsend; and other parts are, without exception, well placed.

Argyle Theatre of Varieties.—Manager, Mr. D. J. Clarke.—Mr. George Mozart is fulfilling a highly-successful return engagement, as also is Mr. Pat Rafferty, the well-known Irish comedian. Donaldson Brothers and Ardel, in A Zoological Comedy, meet with a great reception; and Mr. George D'Albert, comic and descriptive vocalist, is likewise a general favourite. A varied and liberal programme is contributed to by Miss Belle Oliver, comedienne; Mr. David Poole, ventriloquist; Miss Florence Schubeth, descriptive vocalist; and Brown's Royal Bioscope.

Olympian Gardens, Rock Ferry.—Lessees, Messrs. Adeler and Sutton.—This clever and entertaining pierrot entertainment continues highly successful.

The Tower, New Brighton.—Manager, Mr. William Holland. — Mr. Holland has revived John Tiller's pastoral spectacular ballet, Harvest Home; the Mersey Mites, in their pretty doll dance, "Mamma's Babee," renew their former success; Mr. Walter Watson's Village Idiot is as mirth-provoking as ever; and Miss Rene Howard makes a fine figure of a Squire. Miss May Sharples plays Eva with much humour.

BIRMINGHAM.—Theatre Royal.—Managing-Director, Mr. Tom B. Davis; Acting-Manager, Mr. Philip Rodway.—A Chinese Honeymoon is still a play to conjure with, as its success here with Mr. Milton Bode's company testifies. HASTINGS.—GAIETY THEATRE.—Manager, Mr H. W. Rowland; Resident-Acting-Manager, Mr Charles E. Scutt.—On Monday Miss Decima Moore and company performed Mr. Clyde Fitch's comedy, The Truth. Miss Moore played as Becky Warder with a buoyancy and grace that charmed her audience, and won its sympathies for her distress resultant from her many "taradiddles." She was ably assisted by Mr. Robert Minster in the rôle of her husband, Tom Warder, whose denunciation of his wife was powerfully enacted. Mr. Hugh Ardale as Fred Lindon supplied a forceful sketch of the unprincipled libertine; and Miss Maud Linden gave all necessary point to the unreasoning jealousy of Fred's wife. In addition, Mr. Harry Rogerson, the tired comedian, is highly diverting in his amusing vagaries and clever acrobatic feats and dancing. The Bioscope is of more than ordinary interest, showing some very effective and striking pictures of Niagara Falls and Rapids.

Charming songs and dainty dancing are interspersed with many humorous situations. Mr. Dickie Clare, who figures in a triple rôle, is a comedian of rare versatility, and whether as Silas Slim, the judge, or the French waiter, he is equally happy. Miss Madge Browne in the title-rôle wins all hearts with her singing and dancing, and her "business" with Mr. Dickie Clare is exceptionally good. Mr. T. W. Benson as Peter and Mr. J. P. Brovell as Paul score capitally. As Biffins, the gardener, Mr. H. A. Griffiths is a typical rustic; and equally good is Mr. A. W. Thompson as Barnaby Blatherwick.

LONDON & SUBURBAN THEATRES.

KING'S THEATRE, HAMMERSMITH.

On Monday, Aug. 19, the Comedy, with music by Paul A. Rubens, entitled
"MR. POPPLE, OF IPPLETON."

A hearty welcome was given on Monday evening on the return visit paid by Mr. Popple, of Ippleton by a crowded house, which thoroughly enjoyed the admirable fooling of Mr. Rubens's comedy, with its tuneful songs and choruses. Though lacking the services of Mr. G. P. Huntley in the character of Freddy Popple, Mr. Arthur Longley makes a perfectly efficient substitute, exhibiting a complete grasp of the part, and providing no end of laughter at his bucolic eccentricities. In addition, Miss Millie Hylton is engaged to impersonate La Bolero, and right well does she succeed, for the audience take to her immediately, and the evening is one complete success for her. Whether acting or singing, Miss Hylton presents a delightful picture, and causes regrets that her appearances on the regular stage in musical comedy are so few. Mr. H. Carnelly-Joye is an energetic Norman Popple; and Mr. Douglas Phillips sings pleasantly as Jacques Kenyon; Mr. James Stevenson and Mr. Sydney Courtney as Henry Doring and George Hennay cause amusement by their flirting propensities; Mr. Willie Kottaun is a smart Messenger Boy; and Mr. Louis Denver acts well as Alfred. A very humorous Platt is Mr. C. E. Paton; and Mr. Augustus Hammond is a lifelike Head Waiter. Miss Nellie Hodson is again a dainty maid Louise; she sings and dances to perfection, and establishes herself a warm favourite. A pleasing Violet Brinton is Miss Cora Lingard, who sings with much expression; Miss Alice Rene and Miss Edith Grenfell are the two neglected wives, Mrs. Doring and Mrs. Hennay, and both play efficiently. The chorus is an attractive one, and the augmented orchestra is ably controlled by Mr. Julian Rutt. The dresses are most elaborate and tasteful, and the scenery, by Bull, may aptly be described as beautiful.

THE MARLBOROUGH.

"A GIRL'S CROSS ROADS."

Entertainment of a sensational nature is again provided for the patrons of the Marlborough for the current week in the form of Mr. W. Melville's drama, A Girl's Cross Roads. This sucessful play has evidently lost none of its popularity, for on Monday and throughout the week the house has been full and enthusiastic. The drama is excellently interpreted, the company throwing themselves heart and soul into the presentment, with the result that every scene tells. Mr. Wilson Gunning's acting of the part of Jack Livingstone reaches a high point of excellence, being marked by much power and ability; Mr. Gerald Jordan's consistant study of that despicable scoundrel Cuthbert Lumley deserves unstinted praise; Mr. Charles Franmore as John Meadows speedily gets on good terms with his audience, and his impersonation of the jovial, good-natured old farmer is thoroughly sound; Miss Isla Garnet Vayne, as Constance Cornell, gives a pleasing portrayal fraught with emotional power and womanly feeling; Miss Fay Garnet Vayne makes a considerable success in the humorous part of Tilly Vane; as Dr. Weston Mr. Cyril Vernon gives a fine presentment, dignified, calm, and impressive; Luke Ramsden is admirably portrayed by Mr. Withers, who also merits much praise for his able stage-management of the play; Miss Florence Kelsey makes much of the part of Nellie Meadows, and the rôle could not be in better hands; the unthankful character of the "picture from life," Barbara Wade, is as skilfully portrayed as ever by Miss Hilda Beverley. The comedy element is in the hands of Mr. Fred Ingram, as Toby Turvey, and he makes all that is possible out of the assumption, and that possible is a great deal. The remaining parts are all in capable hands. The drama is well mounted. Mr. W. Melville's interests are well looked after in front by Mr. Frank Sutherland.

THE CAMDEN.

"WOMAN AND WINE."

Large audiences are visiting this theatre this week to see that thrilling drama of Shirley and Landeck, Woman and Wine, which is being played by a capital company, under the direction of Mr. E. Vivian Edmonds. The play is of the most exciting description, and the fight with knives between two women, which is the great scene in the play, roused the audience to a high pitch of enthusiasm. Mr. E. Vivian Edmonds gives a wonderfully dramatic and striking portrayal of Dick Seymour, the young student who falls to such low depths, and is eventually tried for murder of which he is innocent. Mr. Edmonds vividly delineated the gradual decline of the man's character, and the speech from the dock was capitally and forcibly delivered, and created a great impression. Marcel Rigadout, "the woman who didn't care," is played in a powerful manner by Miss Cissie St. Elmo. Miss Violet Sims is most charming as the heroine, Mary Andrews, a character which she plays with great sympathy; and the touching devotion to Dick's blind father, so admirably played by Mr. J. Milne Taylor, won the hearts of the audience. A striking picture is given of La Colombe by Miss Joan Percira, who greatly distinguished herself in the great fight scene. A quaint and curious character is Caliban, the hunchback, which is depicted in a most lifelike manner by Mr. Edwin Kirby. Miss Ethel Vinroy is smart as the lively little widow, Janet Marlow; while her two admirers, Professor Sauter and his son Charlie, are amusingly depicted by Mr. William Manning and Mr. Harry Harrop. Mr. Edward A. Ryleston is good as Phineas Collins; and Mr. Frank Thomas scores as Mark Parkins. The minor characters are in each case suitably filled. The play is splendidly staged, and the scene of the Bal Masque is most brilliant; and Miss Lottie Stone's troupe of dancers give much pleasure by their various dances. We are pleased to see that Mr. Wilfred Stanford, the manager of the theatre, is now back again after his holiday, which has been devoted to military life.

THE STANDARD.

On Monday, Aug. 19, the Drama, in Four Acts, by William L. Roberts and Ben Landeck, entitled,
"FOR HER SAKE."

The above piece contains all the points which go to the making of a good and successful drama, and as interpreted by the members of Miss Ida Molesworth and Mr. Mark Blow's company, the performance proves of much interest. The piece is adequately mounted and staged, and nothing pertaining to originality and effect has been left unattended to. Mr. Wellesley Draper acted with power and spirit as Prince Vladimer Walanoff, and succeeded in placing before his hearers a manly and effective portrayal. The villainy of Gregorvitch was clearly shown by Mr. Bernard Mervyn. He made his part stand out in bold contrast to the others, and, taking advantage of every opportunity offered, his performance was worthy of warm praise. Mr. Charles E. Johnson supplied a powerful and at times truly pathetic picture of Nicholas Nicholoff. His reading of the rôle showed the result of careful study. A quaint and droll delineation of General Pauloff was given by Mr. Millar Anderson; and Mr. Alfred Sinclair played with military bearing as Lieut. Rostow. A capital embodiment of Lord Chumley Hargreaves was contributed by Mr. Fred Beck. His humour was of a high order of merit, and his ability in the lighter portions of the play was much appreciated. Mr. Fred Hilliard did all that was possible with the part of Ivan, the evil nature of the serf being clearly and cleverly shown in his portrayal; whilst Mr. Sydney Benson supplied a characteristic exposition of Patrick, the Irishman, meeting with every success. A performance full of fire and spirit was that of Miss Doris Gilham as Princess Natacha Walanoff, and much praise is due to her for her excellent reading of the rôle. Considerable amusement was supplied by Miss Gertrude Netterville as Phyllis Gray; and Miss Maimie Randall proved exceedingly funny and worked hard and successfully as Amelia Jam. An embodiment full of emotion and intensity was that given by Miss Mabel Mannering as Olga. In parts her acting was filled with tenderness and feeling, and at times she delivered her more passionate lines with power and decided ability. All through she was a conspicuous success, and deserving of high praise. Minor rôles were adequately supported by Messrs. Henry Russell, T. Sharp, F. Leyland, Fred Scott, and C. Stevens.

THE CORONET.

"IN HOLY(!) RUSSIA."

Mr. J. Rice Cassidy's company is appearing this week in Lilian Clare Cassidy's lurid Muscovite melodrama, In Holy(!) Russia, and the meaning of the note of exclamation will be apparent to all who see the piece. Mr. Arthur Stratton is amusing, and enters thoroughly into the spirit of the piece as Uncle Dick (Col. Richard Forrest, of the Guards); the part of Micky Nolan is deftly handled by Mr. J. Rice Cassidy, who wins hearty laughter and commendation by his droll exposition of character as Uncle Dick's Irish servant; Mrs. J. Rice Cassidy acts with verve and ability as the daring Rénee Rubinoff, who escapes from Siberia, and goes through all sorts of dangers disguised as an American heiress, and strewing her path with the hearts of the victims of her charms. Mr. Frank Copeland does well as the manly and right-hearted Sir Harry Beresford, British Ambassador at the Russian Court; Count Gregori Petroski, the people's friend, is admirably enacted by Mr. Rolph Leslie; Mr. Carl Rovinelli gives a vigorous and virile embodiment of the rôle of Laurice Steragoff, a Nihilist leader; and Mr. Jas. Cuthbertson acts with impressive dignity as Baron von Pleve, chief of the Russian Secret Police; Mr. Frederick F. Loyd is remarkably good as the weak-kneed roué, Michael Nabolski; and Miss Florence Creagh is well in the picture as Cotska Lavotski, in the pay of the Russian police. Other minor rôles are satisfactorily rendered. Mr. Frank Copeland is acting-manager, and Mr. J. Rice Cassidy stage-manager and personal supervisor.

THE SHAKESPEARE THEATRE.

On Monday, Aug. 19, the Drama, in four acts, by Walter Howard, entitled "UNDER THE RUSSIAN FLAG."

Notwithstanding the long sequence of dramas at the Shakespeare Theatre, their popularity with local playgoers has in no wise diminished, and this week crowded houses have welcomed Mr. Jack Haddon's company (by agreement with Messrs. Paumier and Howard) in the successful play, Under the Russian Flag. An excellent company has been engaged, and their interpretation of the piece is in every way so successful that the interest of the audience is fully sustained throughout the performance. Mr. Jack Haddon's fine presence is well suited to the rôle of Capt. Demetrius, and he acts with earnestness and in the most finished manner, his delivery of the thrilling lines allotted to the part invariably winning rousing cheers. Mr. Charles Stafford plays in manly and straightforward style as Ivan Ramonoff, and acquits himself with success; Mr. Jerrold Ord capably sustains the rôle of the scheming Michael Romanoff; and Mr. W. Wilson does all that is necessary in the part of Colonel Souveroff. The humour of the piece is supplied by Mr. Templer Ellis, who enacts the part of Alexis Skopolopki. Assuming the accent and mannerism of a languid swell, Mr. Ellis keeps the house in roars of laughter; and in this direction he is well assisted by Miss Molly Hackett, who, as Ogarita, acts up to him in a manner deserving of the warmest praise. Mr. Hal Forde also contributes his share to the general merriment by a clever character sketch of Peter Poulski, a tramp; and Mr. H. Naylor Grimson gives a dramatically effective rendering of Wolf Marischla. The part of Luka Marischla is ably played by Miss Marie Rayner, who skilfully portrays the vindictiveness and passion of the jealous-minded adventuress, and delivers her lines with venomous emphasis. A sweet and winsome Vera Vassiloff is found in Miss Molly Hackett, who makes a charming appearance in the part, and acts with pleasing effect. The minor parts are all capably sustained, and the scenery leaves nothing to be desired. Mr. E. de Hague Body is the acting-manager for Mr. H. G. Dudley Bennett.

KENNINGTON THEATRE.

On Monday, Aug. 19, the Play, by Hall Caine,
"THE PRODIGAL SON."

The attraction this week at the Kennington Theatre is Mr. Wentworth Croke's company in the great Drury-lane success, The Prodigal Son. The popularity of this play is amply testified by large and enthusiastic audiences at Mr. Robert Arthur's convenient South London playhouse. The power of the story unfolded holds the spectator in its grip from the rise to the fall of the curtain, and played as it is by a most brilliant company, together with exquisite scenery and stage effects, makes it a performance that no theatregoer should fail to witness. Mr. Richard A. Greene is an admirable Stephen Magnus, Governor of Iceland; Miss Barbara Gott in the part of Anna does extremely well; Mr. Henry Watson as Oscar Stephensson and Mr. Hugh Montgomery as Magnus Stephensson both win for themselves repeated applause; Mr. J. Poole Kirkwood is seen to advantage as Oscar Neilson (The Factor); and great praise is due to Miss Margaret Murch as Helga Neilson, and to Miss Maude Stewart Drewry in the double rôle of Thora Neilson and Elin (Thora's daughter). The part of Margaret Neilson is cleverly acted by Miss Marie Harcourt. Mr. G. Montagu-Lane as the Sheriff, Mr. Chauncey Morris as Dr. Olsen, Mr. Charles A. Maynard as Neils Finsen, Mr. Philip Renouf as The Pastor, Mr. Frank Hill as Director of the Casino, Mr. Francis Emery as Eric, Miss Ethel Percival as Madame Tandher, Miss Margaret Brodie as Gudrun, Mr. H. Louis Wilson as Agent of the Bank of Denmark, Mr. Arthur H. Parkinson as The American Senator, Mr. Frederick Owen as a Croupier, Miss May Rosine as Marta, Mr. Harold Edwin as Jon Vidalin, and Miss Gertrude Rose as Lady Slingstone contribute largely to the success.

COUNTY THEATRE, KINGSTON.

"THE TRUMPET CALL."

None of the plays associated with the name of Mr. George R. Sims ever fails to draw the proletariat of the riverside town to the Royal County Theatre, and there was no exception to this rule on Monday night, when The Trumpet Call, written by the popular playwright in conjunction with Robert Buchanan, was presented there by a capable company under the direction of Mr. Charles F. Cooke. The audience followed with keen appreciation the varying fortunes of Cuthbert Cuthbertson and his young wife, Constance, parts which were ably portrayed by Mr. Charles Boult and Miss Helena Millais respectively. Mr. Cooke himself gave a refreshing picture of the breezy Irishman, Sergeant-Major Milligan, and was ably supported in the low comedy work of the piece by Mr. George Elliston, who acquitted himself well equally as the vacuous yokel and the light-hearted private of the R.H.A. Mr. John Dennys gave a fine impersonation of the polished villain, Richard Featherstone; and the show-woman, Astrea, found a capable exponent in Miss Lena Brophy. Others who deserve particular notice are Mr. Edward Mervyn as Professor Ginnifer, Miss Dot Selby as Lavima Ginnifer (his daughter), and Miss May Bowyer as Mrs. Wicklow. The play was admirably mounted, the special scenery being by J. Fowler Hogg, and the original music by Henry Sprake.

ELEPHANT AND CASTLE THEATRE.

"LADY GODIVA."

The story written around the famous legend, and as presented by the popular stock company at this theatre this week, is meeting with a warm reception from large and enthusiastic audiences. In the name-part of Lady Godiva, Miss Mabelle F. Barlow scores a decided success, acting with much force throughout; Miss Helen Walibran gives a delightful impersonation of Lady Aidyth; and Elfrida, the maid, is successfully portrayed by Miss Agnes Paulton. In the character of Leofric, Earl of Mercia, Mr. W. E. Holloway gives a capable rendering; and Mr. G. P. Polson is a sufficiently villainous Algar. He is assisted in his villainy by Mr. Chas. A. East, as Unwolf Unwolfson; Mr. Dan F. Roe is successful in the character of Robin Shakebolt, his song, "Oh, oh, oh," introduced into the second act being much appreciated; Mr. Edgar Coyne is consistent throughout as Edgar, the Foundling; and Mr. Julian Cross is to be commended on a powerful representation of the half-witted Tom o' Coventry. A point worthy of note in the production is the fact that the horse ridden by Lady Godiva in the celebrated ride is the same as that used by La Milo in the recent Coventry pageant.

THE GRAND, FULHAM.

On Monday, Aug. 19, the Drama, by Theo Kremer, entitled
"THE FATAL WEDDING."

Once again Mr. Bert Coote is paying a visit to Fulham with a powerful company in the above drama, and it is still as popular as ever. The part of Howard Wilson, a wealthy clubman, is ably taken by Mr. C. A. Melton; the character of Robert Curtis is admirably portrayed by Mr. H. W. Hatchman, who is ably supported by Miss Gertrude Harrison, as Cora Williams; Mabel Wilson, the wife of Howard Wilson, is a rôle that is excellently filled by Miss Ethel Kay; Miss Marie Wilson takes the part of Jessie, the little mother, delightfully; Mr. Frank Ashley, as the kind-hearted guardian of the law, O'Reilly, is all that could be possibly wished for; the comic element, which comes as a great relief in so highly an emotional piece, is supplied by Mr. Charles Locke, as Toto, the French butler; and Miss Ethel Sargient, as Bridget, the Irish cook, who both fill their allotted parts with great skill, repeatedly evoking roars of amusement; Mr. Cyril Melton, as Peter Schwartz, the janitor of the flat, also causes considerable hilarity. The little variety entertainment introduced into Act III. is highly appreciated. In this act the children of the company give some very good turns in the way of songs and dances.

THE BRIXTON.

"THE GIRL WHO LOST HER CHARACTER."

For the third week of the new season at Brixton the name of Melville remains in the bill, and it has acted in customary fashion by drawing crowded and enthusiastic audiences. This week it is Mr. Walter Melville, the more prolific of the brothers, by whom the play is provided, and he is represented by The Girl Who Lost Her Character, which is remarkable for the number of thrilling incidents it contains, all admirably sustained by Mr. Douglas Bruce's company. Perhaps the most sensational episode is to be found in the second act, when the heroine, awakening to the injustice of which she has been the victim, turns upon her betrayer, and after sending him off, makes a complete wreck of his drawing-room, which in the end presents a scene of absolute chaos. The interpretation of the character referred to is carried out thoroughly by Miss Ethel Bracewell, who possesses all the force and energy required for such a strenuous rôle, but has in reserve an amount of emotional expression that makes the more pathetic part very impressive. The evil disposition of Captain Caversham, who is responsible for the heroine's downfall, is laid bare ruthlessly by Mr. Frank Adair, who admirably indicates the cynical callousness and brutality of the personage. Mr. Charles Whitlock is the true-hearted lover, the Rev. Robert Everton, and sustains the difficult part with tact and care, delivering his lines in spirited fashion. Mr. C. W. Standing is a buoyant representative of Jack England, acting with ease and distinction; and a prepossessing appearance is made by Miss Joan Ellis as the young heiress, Rose Seymour. The unscrupulous nature of the "London mystery," Marian Franklyn, is admirably presented by Miss Lydia Mannington, who in style and appearance is aptly suited to the beautiful but depraved "women" of which the author has given so many specimens. Comeliness and comedy are admirably combined in Miss Daisy Meynard, who makes a captivating Isabella Jones, and causes no little merriment by her acting in conjunction with Mr. George H. Asquin as Dick Punch. Both artists have for some time been associated with the parts, and their efforts result in never-ending laughter. Mr. Asquin is a comedian of originality and varied resource, and his position in public favour is deservedly high. Mr. George Mitchell is a distinguished exponent of the repentant forger, James Sutton, playing with power and speaking with expression; Mr. Monson Thorpe gives a creditable study of the detective; and good work is done by Mr. Jack Clarke as a policeman, and by Mr. John Dixon as a street salesman.

THE CROWN, PECKHAM.

On Monday, Aug. 19, the Drama, by C. Watson Mill, entitled
"A WARNING TO WOMEN."

Mr. C. Watson Mill is an author of much originality and dramatic force, consequently the first visit to Peckham of his play, A Warning to Women, has aroused much expectation, which has not been disappointed. The scene of the piece is laid principally in "the Green Isle," and the central figure is that of Shaun, a wandering minstrel, a part played in very picturesque and convincing fashion by the author himself. The remainder of the company which is under the direction of Mr. Mill, give an excellent representation of the play, and their efforts meet with cordial applause from crowded houses. Miss Ruth Zillwood looks very handsome as the ill-fated Irish girl, Moira Kennion, and acts with great power and feeling, while her sister, Sheila Kennion, is brightly played by Miss Ada Barton; Miss Rosalind Tate supplies a powerful character sketch of the drunken hag, Hildred, "the woman who was"; Mr. Richard Vane enacts with grim earnestness the rôle of the wicked Dr. Marcus Dread, and Mr. William Vane is a manly young lover as Fergus McNaughton; Mr. W. Palliser Acock is very humorous as the eccentric Frenchman, Ferdinand de Joules; and Mr. Sidney Denton is amusing as the somewhat vacuous Lord Eversleigh; Mr. Henry Rutland makes a dignified Squire Kennion. The scenery and effects are very effective. Mr. W. Palliser Acock is acting-manager, and Mr. Henry P. Kennedy stage-manager, for the company.

BROADWAY THEATRE, S.E.

On Monday, Aug. 19, Shakespeare's Comedy, arranged in Four Acts,
"THE MERCHANT OF VENICE."

Mr. Louis Calvert has given lovers of Shakespeare an intellectual feast this week by reviving The Merchant of Venice. Mr. Calvert is seen at his best in the rôle of Shylock, a character to which his fine presence and rich voice are particularly suited. Mr. Calvert's elocution, which combines the best traits of the old and new schools, is a valuable lesson to ambitious students. Mr. Alexander Calvert is a finished and courtly Bassanio; Mr. Cecil Calvert, a humorous Lancelot Gobbo, Mr. Cecil Klein an excellent Antonio, Mr. H. Tripp Edgar is well suited to the part of Lorenzo, and a charming companion picture is the Jessica of Miss Kate Ruskin. The Duke of Venice is played with repose and dignity by Mr. Rex Grahame; Mr. Loring looks very picturesque and acts well as the Prince of Morocco; Mr. Reginald Davis is well placed as the Prince of Arragon; Mr. T. Norman Walter presents a capital study of old Gobbo; and Mr. J. Tisdale is good as Tubal. The light-hearted Gratiano is admirably represented by Mr. Eric Blind; Mr. Sidney Hallows (Salanio), Mr. Cecil Fowler (Salarino)), Mr. B. A. Streeton (Balthazar), and Mr. S. Pringle as the Clerk, all merit a word of praise for their conscientious work. Miss Beatrix De Burgh plays Nerissa cleverly and brightly; and Miss May Chevalia presents an interesting study of Portia. The dresses, wigs, scenery, and properties are all handsome and appropriate.

DALSTON THEATRE.

On Monday, Aug. 19, the Drama, by Frederick S. Jennings, entitled
"AS GOOD AS GOLD."

Mr. Samuel James is presenting at the Dalston Theatre this week the drama entitled As Good as Gold, the incidents in which are sufficiently engrossing to keep the audience well interested. Mr. Clinton Baddeley takes the part of Sir Richard Wharncliffe, an individual of the bold-bad type, who negotiates his villainy with a degree of precision and coolness which are provocative of the proverbial cold shivers. One of his victims is Lieut. Jack Stanton, of the Scots Guards, played by Mr. Horace Booth; another is Norah Williams, the daughter of a country gentleman, played by Miss Agnes Collier. These characters form the chief lovers in the piece, and the audience watch breathlessly their counter-plots against the villain. Mr. Jackson Hayes acts very well as Mark Williams, a country gentleman; Mr. Herbert Fuller creates fun as Horatio Spankes; and so does Mr. Joseph Rowlands as Timothy Nias, a bailiff's man. Miss F. Melrose Millett appears as Kate D'Arville, a prima-donna; Miss Elsie Dene is sprightly as Madge Merry, a lady's maid; and Miss Bertha Baker shows ability as the youthful son of Wharncliffe, known, on his introduction into the story, as "The Kipper." Other parts are ably sustained by Mr. Frank Litchfield, jun., Mr. Ernest Tresner, Mr. H. Spencer, Mr. James Johnson, and Mr. T. Simpson. The scenery is the work of Mr. Harry Drury, and the mechanical effects are by Messrs. C. Watts and J. Grant.

The latest play from the pen of Mr. Walter Howard, whose drama, Her Love Against the World, wooed back prosperity to the Lyceum Theatre, was brought to the Metropolis on Monday, when West Londoners enthusiastically endorsed the verdict of the Easter Monday audience at the Grand Junction Theatre, Manchester, where Second to None had its initial representation. The play, which contains many effective situations, and is interesting from first to last, opens in the hall at Greystone Manor, the home of Sir Reginald Greystone, V.C., on Christmas Eve. Sir Reginald has two daughters, May and Nell, the latter of whom, it is soon apparent, has lost her heart to young Harry Wilding, who, with his brother Frank, is expected home from Sandhurst. Sir Reginald is their uncle, and while he is naturally delighted with Frank for having passed his examination, his disappointment at Harry having failed is no less keen. He offers, however, to make a handsome allowance to his nephew if he will try his hand at some other business abroad, but this Harry refuses to do. He admits that he lacks cleverness, and is perhaps a bit of a waster, but he declines to be dependent any more on his uncle's charity, announcing his intention of entering the ranks of the Scots Greys—a regiment with which most of the male characters are connected. Harry has a rival for the hand of Nell in Captain Phillip Mannering, who soon finds a means of destroying the happiness of the young people. While Sir Reginald sits alone before the fire, pondering on Harry's determination to join the Greys, Sergeant Jack Horseman, a ghastly, broken-down figure of a man, enters. It transpires that twenty-five years previously Horseman and Greystone had been comrades in India, and that Greystone had left Horseman, who had been wounded by assailing tribesmen, lying on the field and galloped away with plundered jewels to the value of £25,000. During the intervening years Horseman had been a captive, but managed to escape with the fixed determination of seeking out his cowardly associate, whom he now confronts with a written document setting forth the circumstances which he compels Sir Reginald to sign. Captain Mannering, who has been an unseen witness of the episode, follows Horseman when he departs, and steals the paper, and thus obtains a complete hold on Greystone. He at once gets Sir Reginald's permission to marry Nell, but the lady quietly, but firmly, refuses him; and when he finds her heart is Wilding's he persuades Greystone to turn his nephew out of doors. Frank declines to stay where his brother is not wanted, and forthwith leaves Greystone Manor to join the Greys. In the next scene, Carchester Barracks, we find Harry persecuted almost beyond endurance by Captain Mannering, but Frank, a lieutenant in the same regiment, does all he can to comfort his brother. Mannering is awaiting a final decision from Nell, and eventually reveals her father's sin, and the power he has over him, with the result that the unhappy girl resolves to sacrifice herself to save Sir Reginald's name, a very pathetic scene ensuing when she announces her decision to Harry. Horseman again turns up in search of the stolen document, and half strangles Sir Reginald. Harry happens to be in the neighbourhood, and encountering Horseman, learns all about the fatal papers, and that Mannering is in possession of them. He is accused by Mannering of trying to kill his uncle, and a warrant is obtained for his arrest, but he manages to escape. In the third act Nell succeeds in abstracting the papers from the captain's desk, Horseman, who comes on the same errand, being shot by Mannering, who is arrested. Incidentally it turns out that it was Harry who passed at Sandhurst, a mistake having been made in the names of the brothers; but Frank is such a real good "pal" throughout that one feels sorry for the disappointment he must feel, but certainly does not show. There are further exciting incidents in the last act, but finally the way is made smooth for the nuptials of Harry and Nell.

The representation by Mr. T. Edward Ward's No. 1 company was excellent throughout, every part being admirably enacted. Mr. Jerrold Heather, in the arduous rôle of Harry Wilding, contributed a manly, finished, and most convincing impersonation throughout, his acting in the scene where he determines to have done with his uncle's charity, and also where Nell tells him she is going to marry Mannering, being especially praiseworthy. The success of this scene was equally shared by Miss Ward, whose depiction of Nell Greystone was marked by much power and refinement, her entire performance being one of decided merit. Mr. C. W. Spencer admirably realised the character of Sir Reginald, particularly in the episode where he is first confronted by Horseman, a difficult part that was done full justice to by Mr. J. G. Maine, who is to be complimented upon a most impressive and clever impersonation. Captain Mannering was undertaken in easy and convincing style by Mr. Alfred Brandon, who managed to convey an excellent impression of the sinister intentions of this scoundrel without the exaggeration so often encountered; and Mr. Clifford Rean is also to be praised for his virile and natural handling of Frank Wilding, his ability being especially evident in his scenes with Mannering. Some most amusing light comedy interludes were supplied by Mr. T. G. Vane as Lieut. Archie Ballater, and Miss Violet Ennis Lawson as May, the recital by the lady of her first experiment in house-keeping evoking hearty laughter. A humorous portrayal, too, was that of Joe Ruggles by Mr. Allan Carruthers, especially in his encounters with Private Flutter, his rival for the hand of the fickle housemaid Norah, the two last-named characters being amusingly rendered by Mr. Charles A. Preece and Miss Maudie Grayson. The play was well-staged throughout; and, judging by the decidedly favourable reception accorded it on Monday, should have a flourishing career.

GRAND THEATRE, ISLINGTON.

On Monday, Aug. 19, the Drama, in four acts, entitled
"WHY MEN LOVE WOMEN."

Miss Ellen Snow and her company fill the bill at this theatre for the week in Mr. Howard's romantic drama. The play, which is paying a first visit, is arousing great interest locally, doubtless owing to the great success that has attended this author's two productions at the Lyceum. It is sufficient to say that the drama fully maintains his reputation, and easily holds the attention of the audience. Miss Ellen Snow, as Violet, acts capitally, and her skill is admirably displayed. Miss Beatrice Shirley, as Mariel, gives an excellent performance; the Misses Nita Owen and Freda Vaughan, as Birdie and Baby, are well placed; and Miss Mildred Eversleigh, as Mr. Figgins, contributes with success to the amusement of the evening. Mr. Hilliard Vox, as Fielding, is responsible for an altogether admirable portrayal, renewing pleasant memories created on his last visit. Mr. Lionel Gadsden, as Staniloff, plays the heavy rôle in an accomplished style; Mr. Martin B. Pedlar, as Fitzherbert, is amusing; and Mr. Gerald Kennedy, as the Maharajah, both looks and acts the part well; Mr. Arthur Radford submits a good study of the Chaplain; and the smaller parts are in good hands. The scenery and mounting are both on a lavish scale, and everything possible seems to have been done to ensure success.

THE TERRISS.

On Monday, Aug. 19, the Drama, in Four Acts, by Fredk. Melville, entitled
"THE BEAST AND THE BEAUTY."

The reproduction of this play at the Terriss Theatre, Rotherhithe, has been eminently successful from every point of view. Indeed, the fact that a large playhouse has been packed every evening to witness the production of a sensational piece should be sufficient to discountenance the silly vapourings of the self-important irresponsibles of which most dramatic debating societies are composed, and who have been for some time past gravely informing us that "drama is dead and the public won't have it." The Melvilles can easily afford to smile in silence at such twaddle while their theatres are filling. And, indeed, one can well understand an audience discovering in such a play as The Beast and the Beauty much to interest it, for the story that is told is such that one feels compelled to follow it from incident to incident to its happy conclusion. Then, it is extremely well staged and acted in an undoubtedly efficient manner. Mr. Ashley Page is seen in the part of the hero, Jack Barrymore, and from this experienced actor we get a well-studied but natural realisation of the rôle. One could hardly wish for a more charming heroine than is found in Miss Marion Denvil. Possessing a most attractive personality, Miss Denvil makes of her "Beauty" a sweet and most engaging character. Miss East Robertson acts in subtle style as Delilah Vane, one of the evil geniuses of the play, who has an able confederate in crime in one Henry Denver, a part excellently played by Mr. J. C. Aubery. The character of the Earl of Loman is portrayed with conspicuous ability by Mr. Edward Thane, who is dignity personified; and Mr. Johnny Chippendale is exceedingly entertaining as Tom Chicken. Mr. Eric Campbell's sturdy build stands him in good stead as Ned Samson, a fighting man; and Mr. John Sargent as Dick Soans, a ruffian; Mr. F. L. Lawrence as a priest; and Mr. Frank Harrison as a lawyer, all give capital impersonations. Miss Maggie Lindsay as a French housemaid; and Miss Mattie Everett as a maid-of-all-work are also worthy of a word of commendation.

"A.U." AND "A.A."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—If when the Association was founded it had been proclaimed a trade union with for its chief object the establishment of a minimum wage, it would have been by this time in a position to enforce a minimum wage, and no need for another society would have arisen. The Association has moved gradually towards its logical goal; and now, side by side with the embryonic union, pirouettes on the confines of definite trade unionism. The youthful Union has endured sufficient tribulation to age it rapidly. Its committee—gentlemen elected irrespective of their views—issued a set of rules which elicited a volley of protests, were hastily withdrawn, and have never been heard of since. With bated breath I would inquire, "When may we see the new rules?" Can it be that the committee, having metaphorically "backed a wrong 'un," will now revert to the original programme, and advocate in the new rules the tenets of the A.U. Reform Party? If so, I will lay aside my pen to the probable relief of patient readers.

The bulk of the profession is nebulously conscious that its conditions can be improved by combination; but the following workable theory is rather in vogue with regard to the minimum wage, "If you don't understand a thing, grumble at it, vituperate it, throw mud at it, do anything, in fact, except study it."

A more satisfactory, and scarcely more expensive plan is to study the 1d. pamphlets issued by the Fabian Society, 3, Clement's Inn, Strand.

The A.U. members who support the reform programme are in no doubt as to what they want. They want a minimum wage established as soon as funds permit of enforcing it. The opposers of trade unionism want—What? I can't make out, and I doubt if they can. A feasible answer is that they do want trade unionism, only they don't know it yet.

I wish those soulful persons whose pulses slacken at the notion of trade unionism applied to the art of acting would explain how they propose to realise their artistic yearning while they accept starvation salaries.—Yours faithfully,

NORMAN TOWERS.

1, Cromartie-road, Crouch End, London, N.

IN our report of the meeting of the Actors' Union last week, the name of Miss Adelaide Grace was inadvertently mentioned instead of that of Miss Adelaide Gracey. Miss Grace is not a member of the society, and was not present at the meeting.

THEATRICAL GOSSIP.

The King honoured leading representatives of the English stage on Tuesday, when Sir Squire Bancroft, Mr. Beerbohm Tree, and Mr. Charles Hawtrey, who are taking holiday at Marienbad, lunched with His Majesty. In the evening the King again attended the local summer theatre, where Mme. Yvette Guilbert sang five songs in French, his Majesty leading the enthusiastic applause which was showered on the famous French artist at the end of each song. The second act of the Viennese operetta, Wiener Blut, by Johann Strauss, was then given, after which Mme. Guilbert sang two more French chansons and three songs in English.

Mr. John Hare begins his farewell of the provinces on Sept. 30, his tour opening at the Prince's Theatre, Bristol. Leeds, Birmingham, Nottingham, Liverpool, Manchester, Newcastle, Edinburgh, Glasgow, and Brighton will also be visited in the order mentioned. Among the pieces which the eminent actor has selected for his répertoire will be The Gay Lord Quex, Caste, A Quiet Rubber, and A Pair of Spectacles.

Mrs. Edward Terry has forwarded to the Press a valuable suggestion by means of which the sum required by the Lord Mayor for his Crippled Children's Fund might be raised. Mrs. Terry's plan is that every host or hostess entertaining large house-parties this autumn should ask to have sent to them a strong money-box, and see that it is securely fixed up in the entrance-hall, in a conspicuous position, and inscribed "The Lord Mayor's Fund for Crippled Children," so that many a guest would feel a kindly prompting to drop in a gold piece.

"A great many people of the present day," says Mrs. Terry in giving publicity to her kindly inspired thought, "hate anything that gives them trouble, and the mere fact of even writing out a cheque, addressing it, and sending it to the Lord Mayor would be for them an effort. But in this case the trouble would be nil. The open palm, as it were, would be outstretched, ready to receive the alms dropped into it. There may be some people who will say, 'But what a disfigurement to my hall!' Let those think for a moment. Supposing they themselves were crippled, or that one of their own children were stricken, would they not then feel what pity really meant?"

Mr. Charles Cartwright has returned to town, and is busy with rehearsals for his Dickens répertoire tour, which commences on Sept. 9. As before, Mr. Charles Collette will be the Micawber of the play taken from "David Copperfield."

Mrs. Kendal opened a lawn bazaar at the Manor House, at Gristhorpe, on Saturday, in aid of a fund for providing an organ in the village church. A beautiful bouquet of carnations was handed to the popular actress, who immediately began a brisk sale of the flowers at half-a-crown each. In the course of her opening address Mrs. Kendal told a story, which she explained she often related to members of her profession when they failed to speak audibly. A lady reduced in circumstances, she stated, bought a muffin bell, and went out to sell her dainties. But she was proud, and felt her position so acutely that she muffled the bell, and merely whispered "muffins" down the area steps! Needless to relate, this lady was not a success as a muffin-seller.

Mr. George Alexander, who has been taking an especially well-earned holiday, opens his six weeks' tour with Mr. Pinero's His House in Order, at Blackpool, on Monday, September 9. Visits will also be made to Manchester, Liverpool, Birmingham, Glasgow, and Edinburgh. Miss Irene Vanburgh will be included in the company.

Mr. Charles Frohman will put on in front of Brewster's Millions, which is to be transferred to the Duke of York's on Monday, a new one-act play, entitled A Little Japanese Girl, adapted from the Japanese by Miss Loie Fuller, the well-known serpentine dancer. Mr. John Crook has composed special music, the scenery is by Mr. Walter Hann, the dances have been arranged by Mr. Willie Warde, and Mr. Dion Boucicault directs the production. Miss Pauline Chase will be in the title-rôle, Miss Jane May and Mr. Edward Sass will play a Prince and Princess respectively, and Mr. Percival Stevens will also be in the cast.

The successful business woman is not altogether an unknown figure on the stage, as was discovered in The Duchess of Bayswater and Coralie and Co., but she has yet to be exploited in melodrama. Mr. Cutcliffe Hyne, the creator of the indomitable Captain Kettle, has chosen her for the heroine of his new novel, "Kate Meredith," which is to be published early next month; why, then, should not Messrs. Cecil Raleigh and Henry Hamilton, the collaborators in Old Drury's latest, write a play round the trading peeress, Lady Auckland, who has built up a prosperous business as a furniture dealer? What dramatic possibilities, for instance, lie in the character of a beautiful peeress shopkeeper, who not only attends to customers herself, packing up their purchases with neatness and despatch, but acts as her own commercial traveller!

The belated announcement of the marriage of Miss Denise Orme with Captain the Hon. John Yarde-Buller, which took place at the Registrar's Office, Kensington, on April 24 last, does not lessen the sense of satisfaction which is felt at the newest alliance between the stage and the peerage. Mrs. Yarde-Buller is a daughter of Mr. Alfred Smither, and an artist of rare accomplishments. At the age of fourteen she won the Wessely violin exhibition at the Royal Academy of Music, and three years later carried off the vocal scholarship at the Royal College of Music, Sir Hubert Parry when he presented her with the award stating that she was the youngest girl who had ever obtained this scholarship.

Miss Orme's first appearance on a London stage was at the Alhambra, where she sang and played the violin. Her services were then secured by Mr. George Edwardes for Daly's Theatre, where she appeared in The Little Michus and as Illyrine in The Lady Dandies. At the present time she is singing to her own accompaniment, both violin and piano, at the Palace Theatre, one of the items of her performance being her own song, "One Little Word," which she composed at the early age of sixteen. Miss Orme's musical talent is largely hereditary. Her mother, as Miss Jessie Morison, at the age of fourteen, appeared at the Royal Albert Hall, playing from memory Cusins's pianoforte concerto in A minor, and also had the honour of introducing Tschaikowsky's pianoforte concerto in G and Liszt's sonata in B minor to a London audience.

Captain the Hon. John Reginald Lopes Yarde-Buller is the eldest son and heir of the second Baron Churston. He holds a commission in the Scots Guards, and obtained his M.V.O. in 1903. Captain Yarde-Buller was A.D.C. to Lord Curzon of Kedleston while he was Viceroy of India, and served with distinction in South Africa in 1901. The mother of Captain Yarde-Buller—née the Hon. Barbara Yelverton—is a daughter of the late Admiral Sir Hastings Reginald Yelverton, G.C.B., and of the Baroness Grey de Ruthyn, widow of the second Marquis of Hastings. The estate, of some 11,000 acres, is at Brixham, South Devon.

Messrs. Murray King and Clark are having a record season at the Devonshire Park Theatre, Eastbourne. The first three nights of this week enormous crowds have flocked to see Miss Marie Studholme in My Darling, and for the Ellen Terry visit every seat has been sold for each performance.

Mr. Albert Chevalier has given a vivid description of the way in which he will play the part of a bookmaker in the forthcoming autumn drama at Drury Lane. "I am not going to shout '6 to 4 on the fi-eld!' in The Sins of Society," said Mr. Chevalier. "I am to be a retired bookmaker, who is struggling to disguise his past. I have studied the racing man on the course and in the sporting clubs, and one of my character-sketches at the Prince of Wales's Theatre when I appeared with Mme. Yvette Guilbert was that of a racing tout. The groom, the coachman, the bookmaker, retain a certain cut about their clothes long after they 'retire.' About the bookmaker there is a certain loudness in garments which he cannot resist, even in retirement, so I shall dress accordingly."

Mr. Seymour Hicks, who has been so long and conspicuously identified with the lightest form of dramatic art, contemplates an incursion into the realm of the serious play, and is, in fact, in collaboration with Mr. Cosmo Hamilton upon a dramatised version of the latter's novel "Duke's Son." The story concerns the lives of a young man of good breeding who systematically cheats at cards and the equally shady young woman to whom he is engaged. Detected in the act of manipulating a deal, the girl confesses her guilt to her lover, and at length, moved to despair by the degradation of their lives, they agree to die together. Fortunately, however, the attempt at self-destruction is frustrated, and in the end regeneration is happily reached.

Mr. Cyril Maude, to whose acquisition of a new play taken from the French and to be called Fido we referred last week, has provided himself with an equally well-fitting character in a new piece from the graceful pen of Mr. H. V. Esmond. Preparation for the production, which is to be entitled The O'Grindles, have already been made, but so well is the Earl of Pawtucket holding its own at the Playhouse that the new production may not be expected for some time to come.

Mr. Arthur Bourchier has avoided the threatened clash with the first night of The Hypocrites at the Hicks by placing the production of Fiander's Widow a day later. The new comedy at the Garrick will, therefore, see the light on Wednesday evening next. The new play, the cast of which has already been given in this column, will be preceded by Eden Phillpott's amusing comedietta, A Pair of Knickerbockers.

Miss Decima Moore, the charming young actress who has recently been winning all hearts as All-of-a-Sudden-Peggy, has scored another brilliant hit in The Truth, which has just started on an autumn tour. The enthusiasm of the audience has been evidenced in continuous cheering, Miss Moore obtaining five calls at the end of the second act, and the same number at the end of the piece.

Mr. Dudley Bennett, of the Shakespeare Theatre, Clapham, has sustained a severe bereavement in the death of his mother, Mrs. William Bennett, who died at Coventry on Thursday evening, the 15th inst. The deceased lady had for some time past undergone acute suffering, and her death, which took place during her sleep, must be regarded as a merciful release. Mrs. Bennett, who was much esteemed by all who knew her, was also the mother of Mrs. W. G. R. Sprague.

Referring to an article a few days ago in one of the daily papers on the subject of dramatic art in the provinces and its alleged decadence since the days of William Terriss, it is interesting to note that two companies are shortly starting on tour with the well-known "Terriss" pieces, The English Rose and The Harbour Lights. These pieces are being exploited now by Messrs. W. H. Savery and A. S. Pigott, two of the trusted lieutenants of Mr. F. R. Benson.

Mr. Richard Mansfield, who returned to America to re-establish his health, has, unhappily, not made any improvement. He is now staying in the Adirondack Mountains, and we regret to hear of his friends' belief that his prospects of performing again are small.

Mr. Charles Frohman produced at New York last week a couple of new plays, one of which is entitled The Alaskan, which, incidentally, presents a realistic and acceptable snow scene to perspiring audiences. A similar scene would probably not prove so welcome to English audiences—not, at any rate, until the summer comes.

"Beauty and the Barge" is to make its reappearance in the West-end of London next week, at the Coronet, and goes afterwards to the Camden and Fulham Theatres. This delightful play has lost none of its charm since it was first presented at the Haymarket Theatre some three years ago, and still continues to amuse crowded audiences all over the country with its novel situations and quaint humour. Mr. Blake Adams, who has been associated with the play since it first started its provincial career, will be seen in the part of Captain Barley, and he will be well supported by Miss Dido Drake and others of Mr. Arthur Hardy's powerful company.

The autumn season of the Crystal Palace Theatre commences on Monday, Sept. 9, when the melodious Veronique will be presented. Amongst the other attractions Mr. Bannister Howard has secured are The White Chrysanthemum, which will bloom on the 16th, with Sherlock Holmes, Mr. Popple, the Duchess of Dantzic, The Prodigal Son, The Geisha and other Daly's successes, the Moody-Manners Opera Company, The Bondsman, D'Oyly Carte's Opera Company, The Stronger Sex, and Florodora in uninterrupted succession.

A meeting of the Actors' Union is arranged for Tuesday afternoon next, at the Salisbury Hotel, Manchester. The chair will be taken at one o'clock.

The season of French plays at the Royalty is once more upon us, and will this year be presented in two series, the first of which will begin on Sept. 30, with Le Duel, in which M. le Bargy will appear. Among his supporters will be Mlle. Pierat, of the Comédie-Française; Mlle. Cecile Didier, of the Odéon; Mlle. Franquet, of the Bordeaux Theatre; and M. Marquet, of the Athénée. The second week will be devoted to Médor, La Famille Pont-Biquet, and Toto chez Tata. Mme. Sarah Bernhardt, to whose appearance additional interest is lent by reason of her recent appointment as professor at the Paris Conservatoire, will be seen in the course of the season.

A new theatre and assembly rooms are to be opened at Bromsgrove on Sept. 2 by Mr. Norman V. Norman. The building is situate in the main High-street, and has seating accommodation for 600, with a cosy balcony, seating 100. A suite of committee and other rooms are elaborately fitted up, and every part of the building is heated on the most modern system. The stage, fully equipped with scenery, &c., is 28ft. wide and 19ft. deep, with an opening of 20ft. A small band will be in attendance. The bookings are in the hands of Mr. Dayrell Vincent, who intends opening the theatre for the last three nights of each week.

Mr. and Mrs. Kendal commence their autumn tour on Monday, Sept. 2, at the Grand Opera House, Harrogate. Early in the tour, which takes in all the principal provincial centres, and includes three important suburban theatres, a new play by Miss Clotilde Graves, entitled The Other Side, will be produced. Novelties will certainly not be lacking in the course of the itinerary, for a new play by Herbert Swears will be put into rehearsal to follow The Other Side when a successor is required, and Mr. Kendal has also acquired the sole English rights of M. Emil Fabre's recent Comedie Française success, La Maison d'Argile—the English version of which will be entitled The House of Clay.

Dr. Joachim was laid to rest on Monday afternoon in the cemetery of the Kaiser Wilhelm Memorial Church, the body of the great violinist being laid beside that of his wife. The interment was preceded by a religious service in the High School for Music at Charlottenburg, which was attended by representatives of the Emperor and Empress, Prince Frederick William of Prussia, representatives of Prince von Bülow and the Ministry of Public Instruction, and deputations from different towns and art institutes.

The Kaiser and Kaiserin, the Crown Prince, and many members of other Royal families sent flowers and letters of condolence. From King Edward at Marienbad came a message of deep sympathy with the bereaved family, His Majesty saying how much he deplored the loss of the great artist, whom he had personally known for many years, and whom the Queen and he had heard play only last year.

Miss Beatrice Day, who, by dint of much arduous work, has gained an enviable position among the leading ladies of Australia, has concluded a tour of the Brough-Flemming company, and is now in London, taking a well-earned rest, after about three years of continual travel. Later on Miss Day returns to Australia, to again tour the cities there. During her tour of the antipodes, Miss Day has sustained such exacting parts as Lady Alethea, in The Walls of Jericho; Peter's Mother; Lady Gerania, in Dr. Wake's Patient; Mrs. Gorringe; Olivia, in The Vicar of Wakefield; and a long round of similar parts, in which she won unbounded praise. One enthusiastic playgoer who had seen Miss Day in many of the rôles mentioned, and who the night previously had visited the local pantomime, which was drawing crowds, thus expressed himself: "You were beautiful, Miss Day; I liked you better than Mother Goose."

Miss Olive Temple, who went to America under the management of Mr. Frank Curzon and Mr Jas. K. Hackett, to play in Mr. Hopkinson, has been chosen by Mr. Henry Arthur Jones to play Helen in America this autumn, under Mr. Charles Frohman's management. London theatre-goers will remember Miss Temple as being associated with Sir Chas. Wyndham, Messrs. Harrison and Maude, Mr. Edward Terry, &c., in this country.

The new Theatre and Opera House at Bridlington is proving a source of great attraction. Mr. Hague, the popular manager, takes his annual benefit on Monday, and has provided a double programme, to which a host of talent will contribute.

Messrs. Savery and Pigott have booked excellent tours for The English Rose and The Harbour Lights, to be sent on the road by them next spring. Liverpool, Manchester, Edinburgh, and Glasgow are among the important towns to be visited.

"The Midnight Wedding" will be cut off in the middle of its popularity at the Lyceum in order to make room for Mr. Hall Caine's re-written Christian, which will be produced by Mr. Ernest Carpenter on Saturday, Aug. 31. The run of The Midnight Wedding will be terminated on Wednesday, Aug. 28, and the two intervening days will see the theatre closed for the final rehearsals of The Christian.

We regret to announce the death of Miss Alice Edgar, which took place in Johannesburg, S.A., on July 25, from an affection of the heart. The deceased actress went out with Messrs. B. and F. Wheeler's Musical Comedy Company to South Africa in 1901, and subsequently toured Australia, New Zealand, and Tasmania with the Australian Opera Company. She returned to Africa about a year later, when she retired from the stage and settled down. Miss Edgar, whose private name was Mrs. J. Thorpe, was the eldest daughter of the late Richard Edgar, at one time well known in dramatic circles in this country.

Mr. Fred Mouillot's company drew crowded houses last week with The Greek Slave at Jersey. Miss Ethel Twitcham's sprightly dancing of the Tarantella was highly appreciated. Mr. Edward Carlton created roars of laughter with some smart gags levelled at the policeman who ran a visitor in for throwing a basket at him during the recent Battle of Flowers.

A great attraction will be provided at the King's Theatre, Hammersmith, on Monday, Sept. 2, when Mr. Wentworth Croke will present Hall Caine's stirring drama, The Prodigal Son, which comes direct from Drury Lane, with all new scenery, dresses, and effects. No expense has been spared in securing a first-class London company.

We include with regret in our obituary notices the name of Mr. Walter D. Hartree, for many years acting manager of the Bath Theatre Royal, who died in South Africa at the early age of 49. Mr. Hartree was apprenticed at the office of the Bath Herald as an engraver and draughtsman, and was very clever with his pencil. He became acting manager, under the late Mr. William Lewis, at the Theatre Royal, and successfully designed and produced many Bath pantomimes. After leaving the city, on the termination of his engagement, he was for some time associated with Mr. J. Pitt Hardacre at Manchester, and eventually went to South Africa a few years ago. Mr. Hartree leaves a widow and several children.

Mrs. F. Wybert Clive, whose tour of The Conscript and The Branded Woman has been so consistently successful, under the management of Mr. Walter Steele, has commissioned Mr. Charles A. Clarke, the author of The Prodigal Parson and A Broken Heart, to write for her a new play on domestic lines. Several important dates have been booked for the piece, and nothing will be spared in making the attraction as sound and complete as possible.

The establishment of a Jewish theatre in London became an accomplished fact on Thursday, when a syndicate at the head of which is Mr. Sigmund Feinman, reopened the Pavilion, Mile-end, with a Yiddish play. The theatre, which during the closure has undergone extensive renovation, was for some time previously devoted to performances in the Yiddish tongue, and met with such success that the promoters were encouraged to take a twenty-one years' lease of the house. The opening attraction was a four-act historical opera, entitled The Holy Sabbath, written by Mr. Feinman, with music and dances arranged by Professor Staub. The opera, which has frequently been given at the Pavilion, was well rendered by the company, which included Mr. Feinman, Mme. Epstein, and Mme. Keyzer, all of whom were enthusiastically received.

Mr. Martin Harvey was greeted by a crowded house, which included every visitor of note at present in Buxton when he opened his autumn tour at the Opera House on Thursday evening, The Only Way being received with tremendous enthusiasm. The fifteen special trucks which are used to accommodate Mr. Harvey's various productions were the object of much curiosity to the townsfolk, and at one time there was a crowd of several hundred people looking at the train, which, swathed in tarpaulins of curious shape, had quite an impressive effect. Mr. Harvey, Miss N. de Silva, and their company are at the Grand Opera House, Harrogate, next week.

Mr. Weedon Grossmith will go on tour in the autumn with his play, The Night of the Party, which has borne revival so well. The tour will open on Sept. 30, the places to be visited including Birmingham, Liverpool, Newcastle, Glasgow, Manchester, Dublin, and several of the suburban houses. Mr. Grossmith has been fortunate enough to secure quite a number of the same cast that accompanied him on his last tour of this screaming farce some five years ago. It is two years since this popular comedian last appeared in the country, when he was called upon to fill the vacancies left by the late Sir Henry Irving. At the finish of this tour Mr. Grossmith will once more settle down in London, his services having been secured by Mr. Frank Curzon for some considerable time to come. Mr. Richard Maynard, as usual, will be the business manager.

"The Likeness of the Night," the play by Mrs. W. K. Clifford, which was produced by Mr. and Mrs. Kendal at the St. James's in the autumn of 1901, has been re-written and translated by the author, in collaboration with Mr. Raymond Lauzerte, and its production at a leading Paris Theatre is being arranged. Mr. Lauzerte is a well-known member of the Théâtre Réjane.

Sir Charles Villiers Stanford has composed the incidental music for Attila, the new play by Laurence Binyon which is to form the autumn attraction at His Majesty's. Mr. Oscar Asche will appear in the title-rôle, Miss Lily Brayton will be Ildico, and the rest of the cast will be composed of Messrs. Fisher White, Godfrey Tearle, H. R. Hignett, R. Ian Penny, Alfred Brydone, Kay Souper, Fritz Russell, Caleb Porter, Gordon Harker, A. de Breanski, Mr. Ewan Brooke, and Master Cyril Bruce, and Misses Mary Rorke, Irene Rooke, and Leila Norris. The production is fixed for Wednesday, September 4.

The transference of Brewster's Millions to the Duke of York's Theatre on Monday will be marked by the return to the cast of Mr. Gerald Du Maurier. Other evidences of the close of the holiday season will be found in the resumption by Mr. James Welch of his part in When Knights Were Bold at Wyndham's, while Gaiety playgoers have already welcomed Mr. Edmund Payne back to The Girls of Gottenberg, in which mirthful production, too, Miss Gertie Millar will make her reappearance this evening.

Mr. Wentworth Croke has secured from Messrs. Fred Kitchen and Charles Baldwin a powerful and novel drama of modern life, entitled The Withered Hand, which he will send out in his usual lavish manner next autumn. Mr. Croke, it should be mentioned, recently copyrighted this piece at the Elephant and Castle Theatre.

The subscriptions received for the Arthur Verne Fund since the last announcement have been—Nettie Ware £1 1s., C. H. T. 2s. 6d., and F. T. (Preston) 2s.

A novelty will be found in next week's programme at the Lyric, where Mr. Hermann Löhr's new one-act opera, Sarenna, will be produced by the Moody-Manners Company on Friday evening in conjunction with Cavalleria Rusticana. Madame Butterfly, the English version of which has proved so popular, will be given twice, Monday evening and the Wednesday matinée being set apart for the melodious work. Tristan and Isolde and Tannhäuser will furnish the programmes on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings respectively, and Saturday morning and evening will be devoted in turn to Lohengrin and Aida. Additional interest will be given to the performance of Tristan and Isolde by the fact that Miss Enriquita Crichton and Mr. Charles Carter will make their début in the title-rôles.

Mr. Herbert Sleath has been selected by Mr. Cyril Maude in place of Mr. Richard Sterling, who is returning to America, to play the part of Arthur in The Earl of Pawtucket at the Playhouse, and will commence his duties to-day. Mr. Sleath, by way of embarking in a new enterprise, is also now looking out for a London theatre wherein to exploit his wife in a new play by Madeleine Ryley.

Mr. George Edwardes was a witness on Tuesday in a case against three men who were charged at Bow-street with conspiracy to defraud. Mr. Edwardes, whose name had been used by one of the accused, said that he had no knowledge of him, and had never advised him with regard to theatres or companies. Mr. Frank Curzon, whose name had been similarly utilised, was called on Wednesday, and said he knew nothing of either of the prisoners, and had never offered to assist them in getting theatrical companies down to Bognor or Herne Bay. The case was adjourned.

Mr. Arthur Applin has conceived a scheme for the reorganisation of the Actors' Association Agency, details of which are given in another column. The object of finding employment for actors and actresses who are "resting" is one which cannot but recommend itself to the profession in general. A committee of inquiry into the suggestion has been appointed by the Council, who invite opinions from all interested in the matter.

Mr. Harry Ward, having taken over the management of the Regent Theatre, Hackney, will be pleased to see old and new friends any evening. No one can dispute the fact that the enterprise deserves to be re-"warded."

Messrs. Abdulla, of New Bond-street, are kindly supplying Mr. Maundy-Gregory's Lights Out company each week with 100 of their best Turkish cigarettes for use on the stage nightly.

Mr. J. Maundy-Gregory will shortly add extensively to the sphere of his work both in London and the provinces. For the touring enterprises the firm is before long to be officially known as the Messrs. J. Maundy-Gregory, and by Christmas it is estimated that there will be five companies touring under that management.

Mr. Fred Granville (Granville Theatres, Ltd.), who controls the Liverpool Queen's and other places, has, it is stated, taken over the Metropole, Birkenhead, a drama house that has been closed for some time. After being thoroughly renovated the well-appointed theatre will be opened approaching Christmas.

Mr. Harry Brandreth, the manager of the Kennington Theatre, has this week introduced an innovation there in the form of an illustrated journal programme, which is highly appreciated by the numerous patrons of that popular place of amusement. The journal is admirably got up, and contains interesting gossip about things theatrical, as well as portrai's of several well-known stage favourites.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

Sir Arthur Annoyed.

An old correspondent writes:—I never saw that gentle-souled, mild-mannered man, Arthur Sullivan, lose his temper but once. It was during the run of the Merchant of Venice, for which he had specially written his celebrated "Masque" music, which he himself personally conducted during the first week. The cue for this music to start, pianissimo, is "Safe bind, safe find, &c.," with the concomitant locking, bolting, and chaining up of Shylock's door. At the end of the act he came to me and said, "Will you kindly keep the carpenters quiet during my music; they knock their iron braces about frightfully!" I professed that I had heard nothing, and promised that I would keep a sharp look-out the next night. And I did. To my intense surprise, he, more in sorrow than in anger, again complained of the noise of the falling braces. In vain and in vain did I assure him that nothing of the kind had happened; but he appealed to Alfred Cellier, who substantiated his statement. The next night I had people posted on both sides of the stage and in the "flies" to report the offender. That night he came from the orchestra real, right mad, and declared the noise to have been "worse than ever," and vowed that he would put down his bâton if it occurred again. The following evening Alfred Cellier conducted, and I asked Mr. Sullivan to come behind and watch for himself. The music commenced. "There it is!" he said, triumphantly. The mystery was explained; it was the noise of the chains and bolts used in fastening and safebinding the Jew's house.

Wanted His Cap.

I remember, at the Theatre Royal, Birmingham, writes an old actor, in rushing down the gallery seats to secure a front place, a man came to the front with such speed that he pitched himself right over the rail, fell, but luckily catching hold of a brass railing which ran around the front of the upper circle beneath, was forced, by the weight of his body, to loosen his grip, fell in a sitting position on the protruding pad of the dress circle, and from thence—facilis decensus est Averni—into the pit, his fall being considerately broken by certain of the audience there assembled, it being a case of house full and one over. He was promptly sent to the Infirmary in a cab, and visions of a coroner's inquest, damages, and litigation cast a gloom over me for an hour or more; when, who should I find waiting for me in the box entry but the man himself. He was received with effusive politeness, for I fancied I could see vindictive damages in his evil eye. With a faltering voice I asked him how he fared. He replied that he was all right, but could he have his cap, which he had dropped in falling; and would I mind him coming in another night to see the pantomime!

Getting Rid of Them Both.

John Henry Alexander, the well-known Glasgow manager, was much disquieted in his mind by the vagaries of his wife and a property man he had, who were continually muddling things up behind the scenes. On one occasion, at the fall of the act-drop on some dreadful, unrehearsed contretemps, he turned to his company and said: "Bear witness: Aw'l gie this misguided man and woman a hundred pun if they will elope thegither, an' never trouble me mair!"

Not to be Tricked.

A property man, though professedly a Good Templar, was a bad tippler, and was always more or less under the influence of Bacchus. Said Allick to him one day, when his fault was more apparent than usual, "Saunderson, you're fou the nicht." "No, Allick; s'help ma goodness, aw've no touchit the day—smell my breeth!" "Geet oot o' ma Pawlace, sir! Nane o' your peppermint dodges wi' me!"

An Actor's Escape.

High up in one of the hundreds of years old, thirteen-storied houses of Edinburgh lodged one John Gray, an actor. The chandler shopkeeper whose place of business was in the cellar of this fabric was, in common with his customers, very much annoyed with a timber beam across the doorway of entrance at the foot of the steps that led from the street. People were continually bumping their heads against it, so the chandler, with the aid of a sawyer, cut a large slice out of it, thereby considerably weakening its bearing properties. On the night of this happening John arrived late home with a pint bottle of stout, entered his ninth-storey apartment, where his frugal bachelor supper was laid, but could not find his corkscrew. So leaving his bottle of beer on the hob to take the chill off it, he went across the "land" outside his front door to a neighbour's, four doors off, to borrow one, and was easily prevailed on to sit down for a drink and a "crack" with some friends. While there a dreadful catastrophe occurred. The entire thirteen stories—John's room included—settled down with a run, leaving the houses on either side intact, in one of which John luckily found himself, nine stories in the air but safe and sound. Passing over this painful part of the story, let me relate that, the turnpike stairs having gone, the poor inhabitants were rescued by fire-escapes and ladders, and John was profoundly grateful for his providential rescue. It was a couple of days before he summoned up courage to visit the scene of desolation, but when he did he, to his surprise, saw, high up, his bottle of beer on the hob—which was a portion of the parti-wall of the next house—where he had left it. The said bottle became an object of curiosity and absorbing interest to the spectators, and John Gray was a greater hero than ever. It would take too long to tell how, in the process of shoring up, John's beer was recovered and the beer drunk in wineglassesfull by numerous friends, and how he kept the cork in his pocket as a memento of being saved from death. Of course everybody wanted to see this wonderful bottle-stopper that had saved his life, and many a "hauf yen" did John get for showing it. But, in an evil hour, funds being low, he sold it for half-a-crown; and John had to get another one—and he sold that; and report says that he never came out without a pocket full of old beer-corks, and flourished exceedingly.

Free Seats and Fruits.

If one were asked to believe that the appearance of a man laden with gifts could clear the centre arcade of Covent Garden Market of course he would not; but, nevertheless, this was an actual fact. The acting-manager of one of the large London theatres many years ago used to pass through this arcade on his way homeward West each afternoon, and would stop for a friendly chat with the shopkeepers. "Ah! good afternoon Mr. ——; I want you and your good lady to come and see the new piece at our theatre. Now, no excuses; you must come. Here are a couple of stalls. Now, don't forget! Any night except Saturday. Good afternoon." Then, stopping: "Dear me, what a beautiful pineapple! Very dear, I suppose? What? Oh, dear, no; I couldn't think of accepting it. Oh, well, if you insist, of course I must, &c." And he would go on his way rejoicing. This, with variations, was played daily on every shopkeeper in the market, until at last the sight of him became a holy terror, and when he was seen approaching from the east end of the avenue a shrill whistle was given as a signal, and the proprietors fled with such precipitancy down the side aisles that you could have played cards on their coat-tails, the shops being left in charge of their assistants.

Mr. Frank Curzon has had plenty of experience in hitting the taste of the public which patronises musical plays, and his latest production, The Three Kisses, is built on lines which have already been proved effective by previous experiments. The first scene of the new musical play is laid in Sorrento, on the Bay of Naples. Here we are introduced to Marietta, an orange girl, who is beloved by a handsome young fisherman called Andrea, whose indifference to another young peasant, Teresa, excites the latter's jealousy and hatred. A legend in Marietta's family makes it desperately unlucky for her to be kissed three times by her lover before their marriage. It is the aim of the artful Teresa to have this fatal kiss given, and she schemes to that end throughout the act. An elderly Italian invalid, Signor Garibaldi Pimpinello, a "general lover" of the ladies, is paying his attentions to a certain Contessa di Ravogli, the English widow of an Italian nobleman; and a young honeymoon couple, Harry and Ethel Trevor, who have run away together to evade the opposition of their relatives, also come on the scene. Round these characters plays a certain Mr. Gobbins, a pushing and irrepressible guide, tout, and officious assistant, who is enamoured of Teresa. By exciting Andrea's jealousy, Teresa induces him to obtain from Marietta the fatal third kiss; on which Andrea's boat is wrecked, and other misfortunes take place.

The principal characters assemble in the second act at the Contessa's villa, where Pimpinello, Harry, Gobbins, and the Contessa's servant, Crump, combine to frighten the fashionable physician, Sir Cuthbert, who is Ethel's stern parent, out of the house by pretending that it is haunted. The quartette work up the ghost business with "screaming" results, Sir Garibaldi appearing in a white Roman costume, and "alarms and excursions" of all sorts being freely indulged in. At last, when the Contessa is about to turn Marietta away as "unlucky," Andrea enters with the news that all the time she has been wearing an amulet in the shape of a necklace, which has preserved her from the influence of the spell. The efforts of the cast to keep things moving at the Apollo on Wednesday evening were both energetic and meritorious. Mr. Walter Passmore especially distinguished himself by his vivacity and various quaint inventions as Signor Garibaldi Pimpinello. Pimpinello is what is called an "original." He wears a curious suit of grey bound with black, has a solitary curl upon his forehead, and is wheeled on the stage in an invalid chair by his attendant, Ghi-Ghi. Much practical fun is extracted from this chair, which is finally stolen by the ever-alert Gobbins. Mr. Passmore's gags were many and amusing; and, with the assistance of Miss Ethel Irving, he scored highly in a skit on a taximeter cab-driver and on the performances of the Zancigs at the music-halls. He also, as usual, introduced some very brisk and clever dances; and took his full share of the fun. Mr. Charles Angelo, made up and attired as the "very image" of a fashionable London physician, contributed a polished and complete character sketch as Sir Cuthbert Bellamy; and his admirably distinct enunciation, his perfect repose, and his easy and natural bearing were employed with striking effect in his depiction of the wily "Wizard of Wimpole-street." Mr. Walter Hyde, as the young fisherman, Andrea, acted with boldness and freedom, and vocalised with real ability. His rendering of the two songs allotted to him was full of spirit and feeling, and he used his fine voice with all the necessary skill and vigour, besides looking manly and picturesque in his fisherman's costume, which became him extremely well. Mr. Hyde may be congratulated on a very firm and artistic embodiment, which did him real credit, and added to his already excellent reputation. Miss Ethel Irving scored a palpable hit in her song, "Nellie came to Naples," and her reading of the rôle of the Contessa di Ravogli had the delicate distinction and demure drollery which mark all that Miss Irving says and does on the stage. The part certainly did not supply her with many opportunities, but she took the fullest advantage of all that it gave, and endowed it with her own dainty charm and piquant personality. Mr. Lionel Mackinder, "clean and perfect" as the representative of frivolous good-breeding and alertly amorous youth, looked the young lover extremely well, and acted, danced, and sang with his wonted airy levity and elegant ease. Miss Coralie Blythe made a delightfully ingenuous and affectionate Ethel Trevor; and the brightness and buoyancy of her performance won for her the hearty approbation of the audience. Pretty, pleasing, and artlessly impulsive, Miss Blythe's young bride was an entirely charming conception, capitally carried out. Mr. William Pringle did excellent work as Crump, and Mr. Albert Le Fre as Mr. Gobbins not only created keen amusement by his restlessly effusive comicality, but surprised the house at one point by an acrobatic feat which was as startling as it was effective. Mr. Le Fre's modern Autolycus was a most diverting personage, and his oily audacity greatly contributed to the sum total of the evening's enjoyment. Mr. Willie Warde's quietly irresistible humour was displayed with striking success in the rôle of Ghi-Ghi, which he made amusing and effective without the least apparent effort. Miss Kitty Gordon as Teresa gave a graphic portrayal of a jealous and revengeful contadina, and sang "Woman's Love" and "Life's a Song" with real dramatic power and intensity, putting a great amount of expression into her rendering of these ditties, and simulating the vindictive impulses of the "woman scorned" with remarkable success. Miss Caroline Hatchard used her pure and strong soprano to great advantage as Marietta, her higher notes being particularly smooth and clear. Her treatment of the "Star of Sorrento" brought down the house; and she also won warm favour by her share in a duet with Mr. Hyde, her fine cultivation and sound training having most favourable results. Miss Hatchard also acted amiably and naturally, and made a personal success in the part. Mr. Joseph Harker's Sorrento scene was very picturesque, the colour being rich and intense, and his villa Ravogli was a very pretty set. Mr. Howard Talbot conducted his own agreeable and vivacious score admirably; and the costumes by L. and H. Nathan from C. Karl's designs were excellent. The Three Kisses had a hearty reception, the artists being called and applauded at the curtain.

"THE MIDNIGHT WEDDING."

All lovers of strong, thrilling, and romantic drama will deplore the fact that Mr. Walter Howard's stirring play, which commenced its career at the Lyceum Theatre on June 15, will shortly be withdrawn at the height of its success. Since its production, A Midnight Wedding has given delight to full houses for over three months; and the long queues which have been noticeable every evening outside the Lyceum doors have given ocular testimony to the value of Messrs. Henry Smith and Ernest Carpenter's system. The hero, Paul Valmar, is a "self-made man," labouring under injustice in his endeavour to achieve a honourable position in the regiment to which he belongs. Opposed to him, and typical of mean prejudice, brutal selfishness, and other objectionable qualities, is Captain Rudolph Von Scarsbruck. A personage much to be pitied in the piece is the Princess's brother, Eugene, who, having squandered her fortune, is in the power of Von Scarsbruck, and is obliged to do his bidding. By a happy invention of the playwright's, the villainy of the pair drives Astrea into the arms of a brave and chivalrous husband; for, in order to escape from their clutches, the Princess implores Valmar to go through a "midnight marriage" with her in the chapel of her palace; thus giving the name to the play, which is full to the brim of moving incidents, spirited combats, and broad and honest fun.

MR. NORMAN PARTRIEGE as an exponent of the brave, impulsive Paul Valmar has a magnetism, a heroically fervid method which carry all before them. So thoroughly in earnest is the actor that he has the audience with him from start to finish, their interest in Valmar's fortunes increasing from scene to scene, and from act to act, and culminating in an ebullition of enthusiasm at the conclusion of the play. There is something in the rôle of the swift and supple swordsman which suits Mr. Partriege exactly. Alert and active, clean-made, and what, in old-fashioned phraseology, was called "deliver," Mr. Partriege realises strongly the "master of fence" whose romantic fortunes form the staple of Mr. Walter Howard's drama. Equally admirable is his view of the histrionic requirements of the rôle. He treats it with a sincerity of purpose and a resolute energy which make an instant and irresistible appeal to a popular audience. Not only is the combative side of the character insisted upon; the tenderness, the sensitiveness, and the military ardour and ambition of the young soldier are indicated with a firm and practised hand; and the deep feeling, the sensitive pride, and the warm affection of Paul are shown in a manner which is certain to carry complete conviction. Mr. Partriege's emotional acting is very natural and effective; and his vivid animation, his high and chivalrous bearing, and his grace and skill with his weapon make him an ideal exponent of the character of Paul Valmar.

MR. ERIC MAYNE is able, by his fine personal appearance and deep, strong, and mellow voice, to make the villain of the play a possible personage, far removed from the caricatured criminal of cheap melodrama. It cannot be said of Mr. Mayne, as Dick Deadeye says of himself in H.M.S. Pinafore, that, from such a face and form as his, the finest sentiments seem like the black utterances of a depraved imagination. On the contrary, the "bold, bad man" in this case is remarkably good-looking. But, with the aid of his art, Mr. Mayne manages to make Captain Rudolph Von Scarsbruck so thoroughly detestable that, when he gets his quietus at the end of the last act, everyone in the audience accepts his death as a well-deserved punishment. Mr. Howard's villains are not the mere mechanical lay-figures of ordinary melodrama. Captain Rudolph Von Scarsbruck's nature is warped, to a certain extent, by his passion for the Princess; and, however cruel and unscrupulous may be his methods, we have some sympathy with his passion. Mr. Mayne's depiction of jealous malevolence and unsparing energy is intense and artistic. There are no half measures about this rapid and resolute rascal, who, with all his faults, is pugnacious, fearless, and almost indefatigable. The management of the Lyceum Theatre was fortunate in securing so able an interpreter of the villains of the dramas presented during the past season at this prosperous and popular playhouse.

MR. FREDERICK ROSS's representation of the Crown Prince Leopold is full of feeling, and he endows the character with a mild benignity and a noble dignity which are quite appropriate to that amiable, if misguided, monarch. The instinctive authority of the Prince is clearly and efficiently shown; and, altogether, the embodiment is sound, telling, and highly commendable.

MISS NORA KERIN'S Princess Astrea displays this earnest and able actress's ability at its best. The strenuous and sensational movement of the play develops the character very powerfully; and Miss Kerin rises to the occasion in every case with an intensity and emotional expression which thrill the audience to the core. Her depiction of passion is most impressive; and her delivery of the eloquent tirades contained in her part is worthy of the warmest praise. Miss Kerin has certainly added to her reputation in this exacting but effective rôle.

MR. RONALD ADAIR has an excellent idea of the weak if well-meaning Lieutenant Von Strelsburg, and carries it out with remarkable tact and skill, the embarrassment of the Lieutenant in his cruel position being effectively indicated.

MR. FRED GROVE is the essence of calm benevolence as Father Gerard, his few speeches are marked by clear enunciation, and acts the part with much discretion and good taste.

That comical trio, Sergeant MAX, Corporal Otto, and Private Bobo, must be bracketed for purposes of praise, so closely intertwined are their dramatic fortunes. Mr. GUS OXLEY as Private Bobo has all the best of the comedy business; but Mr. S. MAJOR JONES as the Sergeant, and Mr. HARRY BARFORD as the Corporal, contribute clever and distinct embodiments, which add greatly to the effect of the "comic relief."

Mr. HAROLD CHAPIN and Mr. HENRY ARMSTRONG do careful and useful work as Trooper Fritz and Trooper Ludwig.

MISS VALLI VALLI is delightfully arch and animated at Kathie. Attractive in appearance, an excellent all-round actress, and possessing a style which charms all by its sweetness, grace, and refinement, Miss Valli Valli plays the part with all the necessary humour, and with a keen perception of its possibilities.

Miss DAISY GWYNNE is seen to decided advantage as Rozel.

Mr. ERNEST CARPENTER deserves great credit for his production of the drama, his careful superintendence having a great deal to do with its success.

The scenery by Messrs. W. T. HEMSLEY and ERNEST W. MILLAR is on a liberal scale, and is thoroughly artistic and appropriate.

Herr RAIMUND PECHOTSCH is a thoroughly efficient and experienced conductor, and he has his fine orchestra well under the control of his well-wielded baton.

The costumes are a commendable feature of the production, Messrs. MORRIS ANGEL and SONS' uniforms being thoroughly well made; and Miss Kerin's dresses, furnished by Messrs. SWAN and EDGAR, being handsome, luxurious, and becoming. The floral decorations of the house by DICKSON and Co. have been a theme of general admiration, and Mr. W. T. CROWE's attentive acting management has added to the comfort of those in front.

In a play in which so much depends on lighting and scene-shifting, the services of Mr. F. B. FIDGE, the experienced electrician, and Mr. A. R. GEORGE, the able chief machinist, are especially valuable; and Mr. S. MAJOR JONES's assistance as stage-manager must not pass unacknowledged.

"MY WIFE" AT THE HAYMARKET.

The progress of My Wife at the Haymarket has continued uninterruptedly through the "dog days," and the 100th night has been reached in triumph. The piquancy of the French original is remarkably preserved in Mr. Michael Morton's adaptation, and the situations of the piece, supported by dialogue wittily and neatly turned, have appealed irresistibly to the humorous perceptions of the large audiences which have nightly assembled. No less responsible for the success which has attended Mr. Frederick Harrison's production is the artistic representation which it meets with at the hands of the superb company, at the head of which is

MR. AUBREY SMITH as GERALD EVERSLEIGH.—A sterling performance of the part is given by Mr. Smith, whose acting can always be recommended for its invigorating qualities. The picture of the dignified English gentleman devoted to his bachelor habits being gradually entangled in the silken meshes of feminine charm is drawn in all its varied shades, and the mingled feelings of perplexity, annoyance, and affection to which Gerald Eversleigh is by turns subjected are portrayed in the finished style upon which Mr. Smith's enviable reputation has been built.

MISS MARIE LOHR as BEATRICE DUPRE has gained a permanent hold upon London playgoers. She presents a fresh and fascinating portrayal of English girlhood, ingenuous, artless, and alert, but invariably charming. Her winsome wilfulness as the resourceful Trixie captivates all, while a moment of passion in the second act, when the insulted girl confronts her assailant with scorn, serves to reveal the dramatic power of which she is possessed. Miss Lohr's impersonation cannot be too highly estimated, and places her at once in a distinguished position among London actresses.

MR. A. E. MATTHEWS puts his talents as a comedian to excellent purpose in the part of the Hon. Gibson Gore. "Gibby's" words are few, but his actions speak with irresistible eloquence, and the house is kept in uncontrollable laughter by his drollery. The continuity of the story is constantly broken by the intrusions of the Honourable Gore, but Mr. Matthews's languid boredom, his dejection from loss of sleep, and his innumerable devices for obtaining mirth are eagerly welcomed.

MR. FRED LEWIS as M. DUPRE.—Fun of a more elaborate kind is made by Mr. Lewis, whose ripe abilities lend themselves admirably to the portrayal of the excitable French paterfamilias. Brief as are the appearances of M. Dupré, they are made memorable by the enjoyment of which they are the source, and add greatly to the fame of the artist.

Gallic eccentricity is also depicted in the Réné Falandres of Mr. H. Marsh Allen, who acquits himself with his customary credit. Mr. Allen's best work is done at the end of the piece, when he engages in the interview with Gerald Eversleigh, and his share of the responsibilities of that momentous episode is admirably sustained.

MISS MILLIE LEGARDE acts with elegance and refinement as Miriam Hawthorne, looking very fascinating in some beautiful gowns; Miss Gordon Walker talks and moves gracefully through the small part of Mrs. Denham Lane; and Miss Joy Chatwyn's prepossessing attributes are equally pronounced in the part of Mme. Dupré. Miss Adelaide Burt gives the needed simplicity to the character of the maid Marie.

MR. E. W. TARVER is the gentlemanly officer to the life as Captain Putnam Fuzby, and an infinitely droll rendering of the Swiss waiter lies to the credit of Mr. Philip Knox. Mr. H. De Lange gives a capital study of the optimistic Baron Granclos, whose wife is invested with the foreign characteristics invaluable to the part of Mlle. Marcelle Chevalier. The mellow voice and benign countenance of the butler Davies are artistically assumed by Mr. Holman Clark, whose representation is beyond praise. Other slight but significant impersonations admirably done are those of M. Valboure and M. Potin by Mr. Athol Stewart and Mr. P. Percival Clark respectively, and the cast is adequately completed by Mr. Patric Curwen as Gerald's valet. The pièce de résistance is still preceded by the one-act play from the same pen, entitled Charlie, the Sport, which is received with every evidence of pleasure.

CLUB FOR TOURING ACTORS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—I have read the interesting article in The Era referring to this subject; and beg to inform you that for some years now we have offered hospitality to male members of all touring companies who care to visit this club free of subscription; and that our rules are framed so as to meet the requirements of the law in such cases. We are also pleased at any time to arrange friendly matches at cricket, football, billiards, and skittles. The leading professional, London, and local newspapers will be found in the reading-room, and members need not purchase refreshments unless they like.—Yours faithfully,

JAS. SMITH,

REDIRECTING LETTERS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—I would like to call the attention of resident managers to a common complaint in connection with touring managers' and artists' letters. Having recently "written in" to a well-known touring proprietor for an advertised vacancy to a certain theatre in a certain town in the Midlands, my letter never reached him. Thinking there was something wrong, I wrote the said manager (a friend of mine) to the following town asking for the return of an enclosure I sent him, and got a reply stating he never received my letter. I could not make this out, and so let the matter drop for the time being. About two days ago I got my first letter returned from the Dead-Letter Office marked "Not Found." It had been delivered by the first post on the Monday after the company had gone from the town, and as the hall-keeper, or whoever looks after the letters at this particular theatre, did not redirect and post it on, evidently, after some days, handed it back to the local postman. This redirection is a thing resident managers might see attended to.—Yours faithfully,

STEWART D. WRIGHT,
Business Manager.

10, King-street, W.C., Aug. 19, 1907.

THE Prince of Wales and Prince Edward of Wales witnessed the performance of The Merry Widow at Daly's Theatre on the evening of the 16th inst.

A NEW play, entitled When Other Lips, written by T. Arthur Jones, will be produced at the East Oxford Theatre on Monday.

IN "Moods and Memories," a collection of poems dedicated to Mrs. Patrick Campbell, Mr. R. Henderson Bland has once more shown that he possesses in a marked degree the poetic as well as the acting faculty. Mr. Bland found ready acceptance for a previous volume of verse, and his latest series cannot but add to his reputation. The collection is a comprehensive one, and begins with a poetic apologia for the loves of Tristram and Iseult, very dramatically presented. Mr. Bland's muse turns overmuch perhaps to the idealisation of the tender passion, but patriotism and philosophy are by no means overlooked. His verses are well considered and intelligible, and never without rhythmic grace and picturesqueness.

ACTORS' ASSOCIATION AGENCY.

A plan for the betterment of the A.A. Agency was laid before the Council by Mr. Arthur Aplin at their meeting on Tuesday in the following terms:—

I beg to offer suggestions for the improvement of the agency department of the Actors' Association. That there is room for improvement no one will deny. In the first place it appears to me as if we had run our agency on any but business-like lines; we have sat down and waited for managers to apply to us for actors instead of applying to managers on the actors' behalf. And when managers have kindly and considerately come to us have we not—at a rough estimate—sent fifty per cent. of them empty handed away? We should not allow ten per cent. to go empty-handed away, or find their "goods" elsewhere; no, nor five per cent.

A theatrical agent, I take it, is in much the same position as any other agent—only more so. Any other agent, an insurance or a literary agent, for instance, does not sit down and wait for editors and publishers to apply to him for stories, novels, or articles. He writes to them, sees them himself, and discovers their requirements. Sometimes he makes it his business to know their requirements before they themselves have decided what they want. He suggests; he pushes his wares. He knows that so many works must be published, so many stories or articles must be supplied, and he makes it his business to supply them. And so should the theatrical agent. So many new plays must be produced in a season, so many tours start, so many actors and actresses be engaged. Before the manager starts to cast his play or fix the engagements for his tour, the agent should be in a position to do so for him. Fancy waiting for the manager to come to him. Why should the manager bother himself?

Or, as an alternative, abolish the agency department. If we do that we lose a great deal, for nothing appeals to a man more than his bread and butter; and why should not the Actors' Association be able to offer its members bread and butter, as well as golf at a reduced rate and medical attendance free of charge?

And so, first of all, I beg to submit that we should make the agency department of the Actors' Association a separate, distinct, and self-supporting department. Though we may not possess much space at present, we must find a room, or corner even, which can be used as an office of the agency, and used for no other purpose whatsoever. A manager should be engaged at a stated salary, and the agency department placed entirely in his hands, he being given absolute control, answerable only to the council of the Actors' Association. The salary must necessarily be small at first until results are shown, but the said manager will be allowed a commission on the profits produced by the agency. He will be judged by results and paid by results. This will do away with all fear of favouritism. His commission on the profits will be the largest possible incentive to him to do his best for the actor, for the manager, and for the agency. He will neither send a manager empty away, nor allow an actor to be on his list who is not earning a salary.

It will be his duty—and his pleasure—to be in touch with every London and provincial production; to see every new play that is produced in Town, and be ready to cast it for tour if necessary. He will study his clients, seeing their work whenever opportunity offers. Every pound he obtains of salary for them will be an increase of his own income; every manager he satisfies will be a future client—and a friend of the Actors' Association. At stated periods—weekly, monthly, or quarterly— he will produce his books for the inspection of the Council, who will be able to satisfy themselves of the progress made, and satisfy the members of the Actors' Association that the agency is being conducted for their general welfare and the welfare of the profession.

No engagements should be negotiated, the salary of which is under £2 a week. The agency office should be open from, say, 11.30 a.m. to 2 p.m., for those members of the Actors' Association who desire it to personally interview the agency manager or make any inquiries or suggestions re work they wish. The remaining hours of the day the agency manager should use without interruption in the conducting of his business.

Every member of the Actors' Association will be entitled to a card which he or she may fill up, giving particulars of line of business, last engagement, etc. Those who desire may attach an unmounted photograph to the back of the card for the guidance of the agent. These cards will be pigeon-holed in a case resembling a large letter-rack alphabetically indexed from A to Z. Only the cards of members disengaged will be placed in the rack and members must keep the agency notified, at least once every month, as long as they remain disengaged, or their card will be withdrawn. In connection with this disengaged card rack the agency will keep a ledger containing a list of all the members of the Actors' Association arranged under headings covering the various branches of the profession—comedy, character, juveniles, stage management, etc. Thus at a glance the agency manager can find any particular artist desired, and discover whether he or she is engaged or disengaged.

Every member of the Actors' Association should be sent a card and earnestly desired to fill it in. But if any fail to do this, it should not deter the manager from entering into negotiations for or with them, if occasion arises, as in the event of a certain manager requiring any particular artist, or the agency wishing to suggest a certain artist or artists for certain parts which he may have discovered are open or unfilled.

The agency manager would not, of course, place blind confidence in his disengaged rack. He would naturally follow, as far as possible, the work and movements of members of the Actors' Association, whose position places them prominently in the public eye. He would find, possibly, those members would not trouble to personally come or write to his agency; but he would nevertheless, be always on the lookout to book an engagement for them, and thus swell the agency banking account—and his own.

He would suggest names to managers—in short, he would play practically the part of an ordinary —or shall I say extraordinary?—agent. He would be as useful to the theatrical manager as to the actor—if he was of any use at all, I take it. He would be a buffer between the two. He would in course of time save the theatrical manager the trouble of reading and answering hundreds of letters asking for work, and save him numerous interviews; he would save the rank and file of actors and actresses much literary labour, postage stamps, heart burning, and fruitless visits, and eventually the theatrical manager would welcome him as a time and money saver.

The benefits of an agency to the Actors' Association run on business-like methods by a business-like man are obvious. It would double or treble our membership in no time. It would increase our income, our power, our prosperity, our popularity.

This is no more than a rough outline of a simple scheme which could be started at any moment at an outlay of about thirty shillings—a guinea for an alphabetical card rack and ten shillings for a supply of cards.

"A GOOSE FROM HAARLEM," a new play by Lewis Cohn, was produced for copyright purposes at the Coronet on Saturday, Aug. 17.

THE ACTORS' ASSOCIATION.

The Council of the Actors' Association held their usual meeting at 10, King-street, Covent Garden, on Tuesday, when there were present Mr. Kenyon Musgrave (chairman), Mr. Henry W. Mote (hon. solicitor), Miss Wynne Matthison, Messrs. Arthur Aplin, Cecil Brooking, C. F. Collings, H. Athol Forde, Fredk. Morland, and C. B. Elvington (acting for the secretary). The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed. The hon. solicitors reported they had had interviews with four members, and had advised them. They also reported that with regard to the claim of another member, an offer had been made and accepted.

The Agency Department was again before the Council, and Mr. Arthur Aplin read his scheme, printed in another column. After some discussion it was carried that a committee be formed to enquire into Mr. Aplin's scheme, and that the committee meet after the return of the secretary, in three weeks' time. It was further agreed that Mr. Aplin's suggestions should be sent to The Era for publication, stating that the Council would be willing to receive any opinions on the subject. As requested at the last meeting of the Council, the agency clerk submitted the statistics, which showed that from Aug. 1, 1906, to Aug. 1, 1907, 286 managers had applied, 127 had been supplied, and the number of engagements made had been 223.

It was agreed that a small committee should be appointed for the purpose of reporting on the question of holding a meeting at Manchester about the end of September or the beginning of October to further the interests of the A.A. Miss Wynne Matthison, Mr. C. F. Collings, and Mr. Fredk. Morland were appointed the committee, which should meet at an early date, and report to the Council next Tuesday.

After some discussion on the subject of letting the premises, it was agreed that the secretary should write to two agents, stating that they might put up boards on the premises. It was further agreed that a notice should be placed in the general office to the effect that "Members are requested to note that the appearance of house agents' boards on these premises will mean that the Council is endeavouring to let them to the general advantage and move into equally convenient premises."

The Chairman read a letter of thanks from Miss Lucy Sibley upon her election as a member of the Council of the A.A.

The Chairman also read a letter from Miss Betty Castle, stating that she would be pleased to interview Dr. Ferguson, of Douglas, with reference to his appointment as an hon. medical officer.

A letter was also read from Mr. F. Jerome Hart, in which he stated he was forwarding a copy of Miss Ina Rozant's book, "Life's Understudies," for presentation to the Actors' Association, and also asking for a copy of a recent list of members. The secretary was directed to write and thank Mr. Hart for his presentation of the book, which it was agreed should be handed to the hon. secretary of the Library Committee, and at the same time to enclose a list of members, and draw his attention to the fact that the list was not up to date.

A letter from Miss Lucy Sibley with reference to the adjournment of the social meeting on July 19 last, and enclosing communications from Mr. Robert Castleton and Mr. William Poel, was read. It was agreed that the secretary should thank Miss Sibley for her communication, and say that the Council were satisfied.

A member communicated with reference to his luggage, which had gone astray, and the hon. solicitors were requested to deal with the matter.

A letter from Miss Clare Greet resigning her seat on the Council having been read, the secretary was instructed to write to Miss Greet, stating that her resignation was accepted with extreme regret, and expressing the hope that she would be able to return at some future opportunity.

Jas. Benedict Butler, Alice Maude and Claude Fleming were nominated for election to the Association, and Maud Stuart and Edith Tasca Page were elected members.

"THE MASTER CRIME."

A novel in one volume. By JOSEPH LYONS and CECIL RALEIGH. CASSELL & CO., LIMITED.

In his collaboration in "The Master Crime," Mr. Joseph Lyons has devoted to literature the inventive power which he had previously bestowed upon business; and has shown that the practical faculty may as well be employed in the preparation of a thrilling tale as in the organisation of vast commercial enterprises. The practised pen of Mr. Cecil Raleigh and his skill in contriving climaxes is shown in every chapter of the book. "The Master Crime" does not describe the life of the stage, though one can imagine it forming the foundation of a very effective and sensational drama. It deals with moving incidents in connection with Nihilism, and a clear exposition of the Anarchist "attitude" is given in one of the earlier chapters. As "The Master Crime" is all action and incident, we will not spoil the enjoyment of the intending reader by describing the plot, which is of enthralling interest. It must not be supposed, however, that the book is carelessly written. On the contrary, it has much literary merit; as the following quotation will show. It describes the effect of an attempt by Peterhoff Kalytzin to break the credit of the Bank of England:—

"Peter looked at the sea of struggling figures and white distorted faces, and marked the reek of humanity that came up through the glare and dust of a scorching afternoon. He heard the shouts and indistinct roar of voices, when suddenly he noticed a new movement in the crowd—it packed for a moment more densely—then a ripple seemed to run backwards—the front ranks had stopped—what was the matter?—police helmets moved together—again the dense mob pushed and swayed—for an instant a flash of colour showed from the Bank porters' liveries behind the blue clump of constables—then the grim iron gates were seen to move, they came nearer and nearer together—a sort of long questioning sob rose from the crowd, and then everyone stood still—a flutter of white indicated that some notice was being exhibited—then the great gates came nearer—nearer—was it only to check the rush?—no—they came together with one deep clang—instantly the police distributed, trying to disperse the people—those who could not hear knew what the movement meant, and a deep moaning roar went up that echoed far away down the streets and alleys of all London.

"'The Bank's Broke—The Bank of England's Closed!'"

Those who want to beguile the time on a long railway journey cannot do better than buy a copy of "The Master Crime."

MISS MARY NEIL AND MR. GEORGE KIRK'S successful drama, Her Luck in London, established another record at the Prince's, Preston, last week. Before leaving the town Mr. Kirk signed a contract for next year, this making his sixth annual visit. Miss Neil will shortly appear in the provinces in a new play, written for her by Charles Darrell, entitled From Shop Girl to Duchess.

PLAYS in Esperanto, which is claimed to be a universal language, were last week given in the New Theatre at Letchworth. The first to be essayed was Maddison Morton's old farce, Box and Cox, which in the new tongue becomes Boks kaj Koks. The well-known scene from Dickens's "Pickwick Papers," which was also given, is rendered Bardell kontrau Pickwick.

THE ACTORS' UNION.

LONDON.

Mr. Cecil Calvert took the chair at the meeting of the Actors' Union, held at the Bedford Head on Tuesday afternoon. There was a fair attendance, others present being:—Messrs. Shirley Braithwaite, W. Ruddle Brown, C. G. Calvert, J. Collison, D. J. Murray, J. Milne Taylor, Jerrold Heather, F. G. Vane, H. Paulton, jun., H. Townley, E. H. Templeton, J. G. Maine, Clifford Kean, F. F. Lloyd, A. Stratton, Wentworth Fane, G. Merricles, Frank Gerald, Tripp Edgar, E. Y. Rae, A. St. John, J. Galbraith, Stafford Smith, Harwood Roberts, C. M. Davidson, J. G. Austin, Roy Barraclough, H. Trent Adams, and Misses Louie Adair, Mary Bessle, Alice Marsden, Kitty Marion, Kate Randolph, Nellie Howitt, Maudie Grayson, Florence Creagh.

The Chairman, in his opening remarks, stated that Mr. Frank Rawson, C.M.G., had agreed to become an honorary treasurer of the Union. Sir Gilbert Parker, M.P., had been approached, but had been unable to accept the position owing to the many calls upon his time, much as he was in sympathy with the objects of the A.U. At the Trades Union Congress, which would take place in September at Bath, the Actors' Union would be represented in the person of Mr. Frank Gerald. It would be the first time that anyone appeared at that congress on behalf of a theatrical calling. The trades unionists numbered six millions, and it was a big thing for the Actors' Union to have a voice in their deliberations. All the reports which were now coming in from the provinces were of a most encouraging nature, and affairs generally in the Union were progressing satisfactorily. Speaking of theatrical conditions in London, he (the chairman) thought that it was ridiculous and iniquitous that rehearsals, which were not paid for, should last six weeks. Such long rehearsals meant either that the producer of the play did not know his business or that he had incompetent actors and actresses. Hours, and even days, were wasted in the theatre which should be spent in the office or the studio. The Vedrenne-Barker management had proved that it paid to have good companies, and other managers would find the same thing if they only worked on a similar principle.

Mr. Frank Gerald spoke of the approaching Trades Unionist Congress at Bath, of which he had been appointed the representative of the Union. Mr. Pete Curran had asked him to congratulate the members of the Union on this step. He would point out to them that organisation under trades union principles was the best preventive of strikes, and one of the principal subjects to be discussed at the congress was a resolution affirming the principle of arbitration and conciliation, both voluntary and compulsory. After briefly referring to the Variety Artists' Federation and the late music hall strike, Mr. Gerald concluded by expressing his gratification at being called upon to represent the A.U. at the congress.

Mr. Harry Paulton thought they were in a very good position for so young a society. He would point out, however, that several members were behindhand with their subscriptions, and it was highly desirable that these be paid up as promptly as possible. Members would be well advised, too, to send in an odd sixpence for a possible deathlevy, although, of course, he hoped it would be a very long time before the money would be required for such a purpose.

Mr. H. Tripp Edgar expressed the opinion that they ought to feel grateful to Mr. Gerald for coming forward that afternoon and addressing them, and for undertaking to represent the Actors' Union at the Trades Union Congress.

Mr. Fred Loyd and Mr. Ruddle Brown also spoke, and several new members joined.

MANCHESTER.

A meeting was held on Tuesday, at the Salisbury Hotel, Oxford-road, Manchester, at which the following were present, among others:—Mr. Harry Paulton, Mr. Francis Chamier, Mr. E. S. Petley, Mr. Orlando Barnett, Mr. Wm. Macready, Mr. Chas. G. Norton, Mr. Crowle, Mrs. Macready, Miss Violet Chamier, Miss Phyllis Manners, and Miss Ida Mackay.

Mr. Harry Paulton was elected to the chair, and in opening the proceedings said he was glad to see such a good attendance. He informed his hearers that, despite statements to the contrary, the Union was being carried on in a spirit of absolute unity and not one of dissension. He urged his hearers to impress that fact upon all members of the profession at present outside the Union. He was certain that the reports of this supposed dissension emanated from one or two malcontents only. He advisedly said one or two, as in their efforts to spread these reports and thus throw mud at the Union they endeavoured to make themselves appear as numerous as possible, even to the extent of writing under noms de plume as well as their own names.

Mr. Paulton was followed by Mr. Macready and Mr. Chamier, who both spoke at length. Mr. Lionel Belmore was elected a member.

STAGE STAFF GOSSIP.

The staff of the Mansfield Hippodrome held their annual outing last Sunday, journeying by coach and rail to Cleethorpes, where a merry party sat down to lunch. Mr. George Cooper, the chairman, gave the toast of "The Firm" (Messrs. Darnley and Jennings), Mr. Tom Jennings, jun., responding in a capital speech. He regretted the absence of Mr. Herbert Darnley, who had wired wishing them a right royal time, but owing to pressure of business was unable to be present. The health of the ladies was proposed by Mr. Thomas Buckley, whose remarks highly amused all. After a most enjoyable day the party returned to Mansfield at midnight.

Mr. Editor,—Sir,—In your notice of The Nobleman of Nature Co. in this week's issue you refer to Mr. Whitmore Ledger's Co. I beg to say the piece is my sole property.—Yours faithfully, Hettie Jeffries.—Star Theatre, Swansea, Aug. 17, 1907.

EARLY PROMENADE CONCERTS.

Since the early days of promenade concerts, when the celebrated Jullien used to tour the English theatres with a fine orchestra, driven in coaches with postillions, the public taste for lighter music has made most astonishing strides, and the crowds that besieged the Queen's Hall on Saturday evening last, when Mr. Henry J. Wood started the off-musical season at Queen's Hall, would have surprised the genial Jules Rivière, who, in his day, did much for cheap concerts. "At Easter in 1875," he writes in his interesting "Recollections," "I gave a series of promenade concerts in Manchester, taking (in partnership with my old friend Joseph Higham, the celebrated brass instrument maker in the town) the Prince's Theatre for the purpose. This is one of the prettiest theatres in England, and, at the time I speak of, it was under the direction of the actor Charles Calvert. We had an orchestra of seventy musicians, besides the reed band of the 1st Manchester Volunteers, of which Higham was bandmaster, and an efficient chorus. The leader and solo violin was M. Vivien, a professor at the Conservatoire at Liège; Levy was the solo cornet, and several of the principal performers came expressly from Paris and Brussels. We had crowded houses, and the season was a big success. Once a week I gave Macfarren's Oratorio, John the Baptist. It was then new, and with Mme. Lemmens Sherrington, Miss Poole, George Perren, and Wadmore in the cast it was a great draw. As we were, I am sure, indebted for some of our success to the ability and exertion of my acting-manager, W. B. Healey, who is now a concert agent, I am glad to have the opportunity of making this acknowledgment to the old friend who was instrumental in enabling us to clear £400 by the season.

"The following year, at the same season, that is to say at Easter, Charles Calvert called to see me in London for the purpose of explaining to me his plans for another season of promenade concerts, his project being to undertake all the responsibility himself, and to pay me a good salary for my services. I fixed my price at £50 a week, and, these terms being accepted, I arranged for an orchestra equal to my own of the previous season, except that Levy, the cornet player, who in the meantime had gone to New York, had to be replaced by the best man I could get, and this was Mr. Chavannes, the French player, who, from that time till now, has held the position of solo cornet at the Monte Carlo concerts. The second season of promenade concerts at the Prince's Theatre was not a financial success, and yet an original idea that Calvert had of putting a dozen tableaux representing scenes from Shakespearean plays at the back of the orchestra, where visitors in promenading round could see them, was at once a novelty and an attraction. Where, however, I thought he went wrong was in doubling the prices as he did. Visitors to the promenade had to pay 2s. instead of 1s., and the same rule prevailed in other parts of the house. As a consequence, the concerts were badly attended, and though at the end of a fortnight a return was made to the old scale of charges, still the public was not to be wooed back, and the season resulted in a loss of £600.

"On returning to London in the autumn of 1877 I gave, at my own risk, four grand orchestral concerts at the Westminster Aquarium on four consecutive Saturdays. I enlarged the orchestra to eighty musicians, and engaged all the principals from Paris. Besides good singers, I secured the band of the Coldstream Guards, and the experiment, which was a distinct novelty, proved a success, 14,000 visitors passing the turnstiles for the first concert. The net profits of the four concerts amounted to £300, and I much regretted being unable to accept the offer made to me by the directors of the Aquarium to continue the experiment. But I was bound by agreement to conduct a four weeks' season of promenade concerts at the Queen's Theatre. It was at one of my Aquarium concerts that Miss Georgina Burns, who has since become famous, made her début in London by singing a little Scotch duet with her sister, Miss Cora Stuart. Colonel Mapleson, however, arranged to continue the Saturday concerts I had begun at the Aquarium, and the Italian opera season being over, he was able to have some of the star vocalists from Her Majesty's Theatre, with Signor Arditi as conductor.

"My experience at the Queen's Theatre made me still further regret having been unable to continue at the Aquarium, for it was altogether a disastrous affair for me in Long Acre. And yet the names of the four promoters of the scheme, including a City banker and a brewer, looked well on paper. Matters started swimmingly enough, and everything seemed to augur well for a good season. I engaged in my orchestra Cornélis, the professor of the violin at the Brussels Conservatoire, as leader, with Van Biene as principal violoncello, and amongst a host of clever musicians I had the late Alfred Cellier as sub-conductor, and Mlle. Ida Servais, a brilliant soprano, and a daughter of the celebrated Belgian violoncellist, as star vocalist. There was nothing to complain of for the first fortnight, seeing that the salaries were paid on Saturday at the regular time; but, at the end of the third week, only part of the money was forthcoming, and I was put off with a positive promise for the payment of the balance. The over-due account, however, was not paid at the beginning of the fourth week, and yet, for my own sake, I did not like to break faith with the public by stopping the concerts, so we went on. The last night, by arrangement, was set apart for my benefit, and with the kind assistance of several leading and favourite artists, I was able to advertise a most attractive programme. With a view, as I thought, of taking all necessary precautions, I had our book-keeper from Leicester Square to look after the receipts, and my old friend D'Oyly Carte volunteered to come and survey matters for me in front of the house. Disaster, therefore, seemed to be impossible, but it nevertheless came. I found the house quite full on my arrival for the concert, and I was moreover, put in good temper by the garlands of flowers I found ornamenting my conductor's desk, not to mention a handsome bouquet that was placed in front of my wife's box. The first part of the concert over, I naturally hastened round to the front to learn something about the figures, and was horrified to learn that the four worthy directors and managers had cleared out, taking care before their departure to pocket every shilling of the receipts. Nor was this all, for the brokers were in the building for rent, and among the things seized was an Erard's grand piano. I felt considerably discouraged, I own, but I made an appointment for all the musicians and vocalists who had taken part in the concerts to meet me on the following Monday afternoon. Meanwhile, I got together the necessary sum to pay everybody, and this amounted to nearly £600. I have never seen any of these four directors since, and all I have ever learnt of them was that the "city banker" was soon afterwards in the Bankruptcy Court for £40,000.

"I did not long remain discouraged after the events just related, for in 1878 I tempted Fortune once more by renting Covent Garden for five weeks from the Messrs. Gatti, for a series of promenade concerts, to commence on Oct. 5."

Mr. Cecil du Gue, who has recently been starring in the title-rôle of Mr. Walter Reynold's play, Mr. Smith, has been engaged by Mr. Chas. Macdona for the somewhat similar part of Dr. Wake in his Dr. Wake's Patient company.—Miss Dulcie Greatwich, whose work we have before eulogised under the F. R. Benson management, is again playing Stephanus in Mr. William Greet's principal Sign of the Cross company.

HERBERT FLEMMING IN AUSTRALIA.

Mr. Herbert Flemming, who may be remembered for his work in London at the Adelphi and Haymarket Theatres some years ago, has since created a most unique position as actor-manager throughout the length and breadth of English-speaking South Africa, also for a phenomenal pilotage of that recently deceased society entertainer, Mel. B. Spur, and more recently of a two and a half years' tour of the Brough-Flemming company, from Western Australia to farthest north Queensland, and the length and breadth of New Zealand, to the extent of traversing 53,000 miles of sea and land in accomplishing this.

Mr. Flemming is now due in London to engage new artistes and negotiate new plays for the Antipodes, retaining three or four of the present Australian members, returning in a very few weeks to open the Princess Theatre, Melbourne, on Boxing Day of this present year with a production of the late Sir Henry Irving's version of Olivia. Mr. Flemming is the first manager to lay before the public of Australia any of the Lyceum plays, having secured from the executors a considerable series of these.

That accomplished young actress, Miss Beatrice Day, appears in the name-part of Olivia, which she has already appeared in, when the play was launched in Sydney in May last.

Mr. Flemming, in conjunction with the late Robert Brough, opened the Australian season with a magnificent production of Beauty and the Barge, which scored success from the initial performance, and everywhere after. This was followed in sequence by The Walls of Jericho, Little Mary, Quality Street, Dr. Wake's Patient, Mrs. Gorringe's Necklace, Peter's Mother, What Would a Gentleman Do? revivals of Village Priest, Niobe, Sowing the Wind, and finally by a production of the most complete and perfect kind of Olivia, which was produced by Mr. H. W. Varna, who came to Australia to stage-manager and produced for Mr. Tree, when Miss Maud Jeffries and Mr. Knight combination was sent to Australia. Mr. Varna joined and continues with Mr. Flemming at the launching of Olivia, which was admitted by the entire Sydney Press to be the most perfect and artistic production and mounting Australia had seen, even the most captious of Australia's critics doffing the cap of cynicism to bestow the most genuine commendation.

It is also a noteworthy fact that three of the productions were produced and run concurrently with the London productions.

The son of the well-known Harry Paulton, Mr. John Paulton, has been assistant stage-manager with Mr. Flemming throughout.

Miss Beatrice Day is a leading lady who has completely won the hearts of the Australasian public in every city visited, and who has now attained the very premier position among Australian leading ladies, opening in the new Fleming season at Melbourne as Olivia, Dec., 1907.

Mr. Flemming arrives in London ex "Miltiades," in about a fortnight, having about six weeks to stay in London, after which he returns with his new company to Melbourne, to again cover more thousands of miles, hoping to beat his previous business record. Communications should be addressed to him, care of The Era office.

One of Mendelssohn's letters describes how Joachim took part in a musical charade at Felix Moscheles' house. The word chosen was "Gewandhaus," and Joachim represented the first syllable by a brilliant improvisation on the G string.

PROMENADE CONCERTS.

Queen's Hall was filled to its utmost capacity, and hundreds turned away, on Saturday evening, Aug. 17, the opening night of the promenade concert season, and although the price of season tickets for balcony seats has this year been raised, the demand was so great that Queen's Hall could have been filled every night by season ticket-holders; but as this would prevent large numbers of the musical public attending the promenade concerts, and as season tickets do not yield any great profit, it has this year been decided to limit the number. On taking his seat at the conductor's desk on Saturday evening, Mr. Henry Wood had a most cordial and enthusiastic greeting, which, considering the great aid this fine conductor has rendered to music, was warmly deserved. The concert began with the National Anthem, the huge audience heartily joining in the performance. Bach's third Brandenburg Concerto for strings was originally announced, but owing to the death of Dr. Joachim, Mr. Henry Wood gave in memory of the great violinist the funeral march from Chopin's Pianoforte Sonata in B flat minor, arranged for the orchestra by Mr. Wood. In this a part is included for the organ, and a beautiful trio for solo violin, admirably played by the leader of the orchestra, Mr. Henri Verbrugghen. The funeral march was also rendered additionally impressive by the audience standing during the performance. Great finish distinguished the orchestral playing of the famous "Peer Gynt" suite, and Boccherini's charming Minuet for Strings in A. The programme also included the William Tell Overture, and Tschaikowsky's "Casse-Noisette" suite, and the same composer's stirring 1812 Overture. Less familiar was Sibelius's fine symphonic Poem "Finlandia," splendidly played by the orchestra. The finished flute-playing of Mr. Albert Fransella in Godard's suite for flute and orchestra also greatly pleased the audience. In the vocal department, Mrs. Henry J. Wood was entirely successful in her singing of "Nobil Signor," and Mr. Frederic Austin in the "Templar's Song" from Sullivan's opera, Ivanhoe.

On Tuesday evening at Queen's Hall the first novelty of the present season was given. The new work, a Symphony in E flat, by Mr. Marshall Hall, a professor of music in Melbourne, also bears the title "An Elizabethan Comedy." The Symphony, which is in three movements, proved a pleasing and interesting composition; modern in construction, the new work shows ample technical knowledge, even if its composer does not display any specially original or individual ideas. The second movement of Mr. Hall's Symphony made the best impression, the music being expressive and flowing in character, but although brightly written, the final Allegro con Spirito did not prove entirely satisfactory. The Symphony was skilfully interpreted by Mr. Wood's fine orchestra, but was not received with any special warmth by the audience. Smetana's "Bartered Bride" overture, capitally played, was also included in the programme, and Herold's "Zampa" overture. Mr. Frederik Frederiksen was responsible for the solo violin in Mendelssohn's Violin Concerto in E minor, and the orchestra gave a delicate and refined performance of Schubert's Ballet Air in G (Rosamünde). Edward German's Three Dances from Henry VIII. also proved a very attractive feature of the concert. Bizet's "Suite Carmen" and the overture, "Prometheus," Beethoven, were given; and the vocalists, Miss Elsie Nicholl and Mr. Robert Radford, greatly distinguished themselves, Miss Nicholl singing "Softly Sighs" from Weber's Der Freischutz, and Mr. Radford Qui Sdegno from Mozart's Magic Flute.

On Monday last the programme of the promenade concert was with two exceptions entirely devoted to the works of Richard Wagner, the orchestra giving a fine account of the Prelude Die Meistersinger, "Forest Murmurs" (Siegfried), the overture to the Flying Dutchman, the prelude to Lohengrin, "Siegfried's Journey," Gotterdämmerung, and the overture and Venusberg music from Tannhäuser; included also in the programme was Wagner's "Kaisermarsch," Bizet's Suite "L'Arlesienne" and Auber's overture "Le Cheval de Bronze." The vocalists were Miss Jenny Taggart and Mr. Webster Millar.

Mr. Max Reger's New Serenade in G for Orchestra, Op. 95, was given at Queen's Hall on Wednesday evening, and the first two out of the Bavarian composer's four movements were played by Mr. Wood's orchestra. These were an Allegro Moderato and Vivace à Burleska. Mr. Max Reger, who is greatly influenced by the works of Bach, has dedicated the Serenade heard on Wednesday to Mr. Felix Mottl. Full of melodious music and graceful themes, the two movements made a most favourable impression on the audience, the composer securing some charming and novel effects by the use of two stringed orchestras, one muted. Although modern in his methods, Mr. Max Reger writes with delightful simplicity and originality. The last two movements of the Serenade will be heard next Wednesday. Most skilfully played under Mr. Henry Wood's direction, the audience warmly applauded the Serenade. Other items in an interesting programme were Mr. Camillo Ritter's brilliant playing of Max Bruch's Violin Concerto in G minor, and the orchestral performances of Mendelssohn's Ruy Blas overture, the unfinished Symphony No. 8 in B minor by Schubert, Elgar's Three Bavarian Dances, and Meyerbeer's "March Le Prophète." Tchaikovsky's Capriccio Italien and Debussy's Prelude "L'Après Midi d'un Fauni" also greatly pleased the large audiences. Vocal pieces were contributed by Miss Esta D'Argo and Mr. Webster Millar.

KATE VAUGHAN'S GRAVE.

Mr. George Rayne, whose brother, Mr. Leonard Rayne, was with the late Miss Kate Vaughan in her last days, denies that her grave is in a neglected condition, as was recently stated by a correspondent of a daily paper. The above photograph shows the present condition of the grave.

AMUSEMENTS IN SOUTH AFRICA.

PIETERMARITZBURG, July 10. — Scott's Theatre.—Lessees, Leonard Rayne Dramatic Co.; Manager, Mr. Grant Fallowes.—Mr. Leonard Rayne and his capable company occupy the theatre here in The Manxman. Mr. Leonard Rayne as Pete Quilliam brought out all the points of a fine study; Philip Christian was in the capable hands of Mr. Charles Howitt; the old hypocritical Cæsar Creegeen had an able exponent in Mr. E. Burton Seymour; Mr. Harry C. Paine was effective in the rôle of Tom, the postman; a capital delineation of Ross Christian was given by Mr. C. Hermann Pullen; Professor Manley was well accounted for by Mr. Fred W. Carter; Miss Annie Leaf gave a dignified rendering as Miss Christian; Miss Dorrie Roberts contributed a well-finished study as Nancy; the rôle of Kate Creegeen afforded Miss Gertrude F. Godart opportunities for fine emotional acting, and she made a complete success of a difficult rôle.

Carlton.—Proprietor, Mr. W. F. Isaacs; Manager, Mr. Ralph Brown; Musical-Director, Mr. Roy Dobson.—The star turn here is Miss Marie Corneille, whose captivating and irresistible manner evoke hearty applause. Miss Stella St. Claire is a very chic soubrette; Miss Blanche Sadie is a clever terpsichorean artist; and Dick Roderick, a Scotch comedian, takes well. Will Collins causes no end of merriment. Others in a talented company are Messrs. Danby Seaton, A. Harper, and Alf. Peto.

Mercer Simpson, the popular proprietor of the Theatre Royal, Birmingham, was a most amiable man, and prided himself on never using swear-words; not so much from a religious point of view as on account of their vulgarity. One day Mr. Simpson, who was always solicitous for the comfort of the artists, said, "What a dreadful down-draught there is in this prompt corner! Wherever can it come from?" The odd man, always anxious to oblige with information, said, quite seriously, and with the idea of imparting useful information, "I know, Mr. Simpson; I know where it comes from!" "Do you, Jones?" said the guv'nor, astonished at his possessing information of a thing that had long puzzled himself. "Where does it come from?" "It comes out of the street, sir!" Simpson looked at him for a second or so, and then, turning on his heel, said: "You—you dee fool—I know that!"

THE LAW OF COPYRIGHT FOR ACTOR AND COMPOSER, BY ALBERT A. STRONG, LL.B. (Lond.).

COPYRIGHT AS OPPOSED TO PERFORMING RIGHT.
Chapter II.
PERFORMING RIGHT.
Chapter III.
Chapter IV.
MUSICAL COPYRIGHT.
Chapter V.
INTERNATIONAL AND COLONIAL COPYRIGHT.

"The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer," by Albert A. Strong, LL.B., solicitor, author of "Dramatic and Musical Law" ("The Era" office), seems to be the one compendious and indispensable authority on the subject, as vexed as the "Bermoothes" and as tortuous as a Chancery suit, that has long been wanted. It is in every essential a text book for the perplexed layman, and no solicitor or barrister worth his salt ought to think of taking or appearing in "proceedings" without consulting its pages. It must suffice, after what has been said, to state little more than that the contents include five chapters, respectively named "Copyright as Opposed to Performing Right," "Performing Right," "Infringement and Remedies," "Musical Copyright," and "International and Colonial Copyright." The work, for all its precise authority, is not dry reading. The statutes, with the elucidatory notes, necessarily impose a task on the reader which takes some tackling, but they had to be there. The cases adduced, however, are full of interest. Certain of them might fitly find a place in the romance of copyright. There was the fight of Charles Reade with George Conquest over "It's Never Too Late to Mend," for instance, and the equally interesting conflict of Mr. J. A. Cave with Chatterton over "The Wandering Jew." The latter was a famous battle. Chatterton took it to the House of Lords, and was finally beaten, to the unspeakable relief of Mr. Cave, who is never weary of relating the story. Had the result been otherwise, it would have meant his ruin. I well remember meeting him on the day of his victory and "crashing a cup with him" in honour of the same. "The Law of Copyright" is dedicated to Mr. A. W. Pinero.—Sportsman.

Copyright confusion is, like the poor, always with us, and as it seems likely to remain so until at least the crack of doom, it were well for all concerned, or likely to be concerned, to take immediate steps to secure a copy of Mr. Albert A. Strong's new work, entitled "The Law of Copyright." Mr. Strong is already favourably known to the profession for his text-book on "Dramatic and Musical Law," which, like his latest production, is published at "The Era" Office. "The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer" essays to make clear to the non-legal mind what is—or, in some cases, what probably is—the law as to musical and dramatic copyright. The chapters on the Berne Convention and on the Chase Act, passed by the United States Congress last March, are full of interest.—Referee.

Mr. A. A. Strong has published a book on "The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer," which should be in the hands of everyone who is obliged to know about this perplexing subject. Dramatic copyright in England is in a particularly unsatisfactory state, and it is much to be hoped that ere long some more rational method of securing protection for a play may be devised than the slovenly and sometimes costly "production for copyright purposes," which is at present required.—St. James's Gazette.

THE ERA

SATURDAY, AUGUST 24, 1907.

PROFESSIONALS AND PUBLICITY

Mr. MAX BEERBOHM, in the Saturday Review, once made a sarcastic attack on the amount of space devoted in the illustrated newspapers and in the photographers' and stationers' windows to the sayings, doings, and personal appearances of actors and actresses. Mr. BEERBOHM was greatly scandalised by an interview in which a young actress who has returned to school gave her impressions of school-life. He was also moved to scorn by the good-natured efforts of actors and actresses to help the cause of charity by holding stalls at bazaars, and to assist by their personal efforts the cause of theatrical charity. "Much as we admire the actor," wrote Mr. BEERBOHM, "we may wonder whether his artistic merits would not be even greater than they are if professional ambition had not forced him to spend so much of his time in making speeches, being photographed, showing himself in places of resort, and doing the thousand and one other extraneous odd jobs that the British public expects of him. The average level of acting is admittedly lower in England than in France, or Germany, or Italy. . . . Elsewhere mimes are a class apart. Not one notes them outside the theatre. They are thrown back on their art. Nothing interests them but their art. They have no distractions."

The fault, if any, is on the part of the public. The British people are the most affectionate and enthusiastic in Europe; and the most admiring and adoring section is the young, light-hearted, and—occasionally—light-headed class which makes the production of musical plays, &c., popular. These happy folk are quite incapable of that detached, de haut en bas attitude with respect to their favourite "mimes" which is maintained by the "superior person" and the smart critic. The feeling which those with whom "cakes and ale" are customary viands have for the clever and amusing actor and the pretty and winning actress is more affectionate than critical. It is not the actor or the actress's fault that this is so. The fault, if any, is that of the section of the public already alluded to. The proprietors of illustrated and other papers merely comply with the public demand when they publish pictures of the vie intime of popular artists. It is not only the latter who are thus depicted. The spirit of the age is curious and inquisitive; but inquisitive in a kindly and sympathetic, and not an impertinent, fashion. Royalty, for instance, shares with the stage the fate of being universally photographed. The late Queen VICTORIA added to the love of her people by opening her heart to them in her description of her life in the Highlands. Our monarchs, our statesmen, and our soldiers do not do their work any worse on account of the desire of the people to possess their "counterfeit presentments," and to learn the details of their domesticities. And there is another reason for the sale and purchase of the photographs of artists. Most of them are worth photographing from artistic reasons alone. Physical comeliness is an important factor of the success of an actor or actress. It is as much for the sake of the picture as for the sake of the person that the carte is purchased and preserved.

The contention that the French actors and actresses excel their English brethren because the public knowledge of them personally is limited is absurd. Why, the leading French actress is a conspicuous instance to the contrary. Who has been more indebted to the réclame than Madame SARAH BERNHARDT? Who has been more caricatured, more paragraphed, and more photographed? And this, be it observed, of malice prepense and policy, and not in response to public demand or desire. Madame BERNHARDT, during the earlier part of her career especially, was self-advertised with a perseverance, an energy, and an ingenuity which were the wonder and admiration of the world. At one time it was her tame tiger that was talked of; at another it was the padded coffin in which she delighted to repose. Then she amused herself with painting and sculpture, and her achievements in these arts were honoured with much notice and serious criticism. She horsewhipped an actress who had published a scandalous story about her; she married M. DAMALA in London, and separated from him soon afterwards; she sold her jewels by auction to buy the Ambigu Theatre for her son Maurice. Yet all these "thousand and one extraneous" activities did not prevent her from attaining and maintaining the leading position on the French stage.

But it is quite unjust to select the stage as a special instance of submission to this spirit, when every calling and profession suffers—or rejoices—in the general reproduction of its votaries by means of the camera and the "process." The affectionate inquisitiveness to which we have alluded may not be very elevated, but it is very human. Delight in its is shared by the professors of literature as well as by the people of the boards. The former affect to despise notoriety; but one observes that they continue to sign their essays. Photographs of all our leading literary men may be bought in Bloomsbury; and the only reason why they are not exposed for sale in the Strand is because they would not sell, not because the originals object to their being exhibited for sale. GOLDSMITH and HAYDON were naïfs enough to confess to the universal weakness—the one when the people paid more attention to some acrobats than to him self; and the other when he was "jealous of Tom Thumb." Everyone likes to be known, and favourably known, to his fellow-citizens; and as long as the public demands personal details respecting actors and actresses, the Press, which is only the servant of the public, will continue to supply them.

THE MOODY-MANNERS COMPANY.

"MADAME BUTTERFLY."

Giacomo Puccini's opera, in three acts, founded on a magazine story by John Luther Long, dramatised by the author and David Belasco, and adapted to the uses of opera by Signori Illica and Giacosa, produced in Italian at Covent Garden on July 10, 1905. English version by Mrs. Elkin, produced for the first time in London by the Moody-Manners company at the Lyric, on Aug. 16.

The little house at the foot of Higashi, facing the sea-port harbour, enshrines Cho-Cho-San, who has been the plaything of a lieutenant in the American Navy, named Pinkerton, of the warship Connecticut. Gaily he had sailed away, leaving her with a present of money, and telling her he would return "when the robins nest again." Poor Mme. Butterfly! as he had called her, she takes her lieutenant much too seriously; and when the American Consul, Sharpless, calls on his behalf to tell her of his marriage and make some "arrangement," he is touched by her devotion, and is unwilling to shatter her conviction that she is legally married. Indeed, when a Japanese marriage broker, for purposes of his own, hints at the irregularity of Mme. Butterfly's union, and the illegitimacy of her little one, she takes him by the throat, and, in a tempest of passion, throws him to the ground and threatens to kill him. At length the warship Connecticut is sighted in the harbour. Mme. Butterfly, overjoyed, decorates the room with blossoms, and, with the help of her faithful Suzuki, rouges herself and twines flowers in her hair. As a suggestion of the weary waiting the child is called Trouble. Now he is to be Mr. Joy, and he has been taught to wave tiny flags bearing the Stars and Stripes in honour of his father. Pinkerton arrives and departs unseen by Cho-Cho-San, who learns the truth from the real wife of Pinkerton. The chord of despair is struck in the heart of poor Cho-Cho-San, and in the darkening shadow she blindfolds the child and kills herself. Such was the pitiful story of Madame Butterfly, a play, in one act, adapted by David Belasco from John Luther Long's tale, and produced at the Duke of York's Theatre on Saturday, April 28, 1900. The Italian adaptation, and the elaboration of the little tragedy into an opera by Giacomo Puccini, added considerably to that composer's reputation when it was produced at La Scala, Milan, in 1904. The score, it is generally admitted by musical critics, is more compact, more firmly knit, than that of any of his previous works, while its flow of melody, its richness in colour, and its emotional force are exceedingly striking. The treatment of the pathetic and even tragic incidents is thoroughly artistic and impressive. "The history of the opera," says M. Gustave Chouquet, "is a curious one. At its production it was hooted and hissed from the stage, and was withdrawn after one performance. No valid reason for this extraordinary phenomenon has been brought forward. On that occasion the second and third acts were played in one; but the displeasure of the audience began with the rise of the curtain. The temper of Italian audiences is notoriously difficult to gauge, and it is possible that the unfamiliar Japanese surroundings may have aroused the hostility of the conservative Milanese public. At any rate, when the work was performed in a revised and shortened form at Brescia, a few months afterwards, it was received with tumultuous applause, and the brilliant success of its performance, in 1905, at Covent Garden, where it has become a perennial favourite, completely effaced the memories of an unlucky start."

The addition of the work to the ever-increasing répertoire of operas in English was a wise stroke of policy on the part of Mr. Charles Manners, and at the production on Friday, the 16th, a house crowded in every part completely justified the impresario's enterprise by a reception both hearty and enthusiastic. The opera was beautifully mounted, the scenery being exquisite, and the representation generally shed lustre on the company. Miss Fanny Moody has shown us in her Marguerite what command she has of intense pathos, and her Cho-Cho-San, always interesting and sweetly tender, sounded a depth of tragedy in the final scene that was moving and heart-searching. A triumph, indeed, for this gifted lady, and one that must be intensely gratifying to the lovers of English lyric art. Pinkerton does not appear to be quite so mean a hero in the opera as in the play; and Mr. Joseph O'Mara made him the irresponsible, careless officer that is intended. The music of the part is very grateful, especially the impassioned love duet of the first act, and here Miss Fanny Moody and Mr. O'Mara shared a brilliant success, both singing finely. Mr. Lewys James, whose versatility and readiness make him an exceedingly valuable member of the company, was seen and heard to advantage as Sharpless, the American Consul. Miss Toni Seiter is invariably "safe" in any character given to her; but her rendering of Suzuki, poor Cho-Cho-San's faithful maid, reached beyond the confines of conventionality in its power and pathos. Goro, the marriage broker, who is brought on in a palanquin, found an intelligent representative in Mr. W. Bailey; Master Edward Garrett, who played the part of the child at Covent Garden, repeats his success at the Lyric; Miss B. Weir lends adequate service as Kate Pinkerton; Mr. F. Rowe is a characteristic Prince Yamadori; and effective aid is given in other parts by Messrs. W. Anderson, E. Renshaw, R. Carter, J. Mawdesley, Misses M. Scotson, Brown, and M. Dennis. Prior to the production, Puccini was specially approached on the subject of tempi, and his ideas have been faithfully carried out by Signor Romualdo Sapio, who conducted the performance so admirably.

This new and exciting drama, which was produced on Monday before a crowded and critical audience, was generally allowed to be a distinct "cut above" average melodrama. Mr. David Muskerry, in framing his work, has risen superior to mere sensationalism. All his situations are cleverly led up to and justified in the sequel, and the subject cannot fail to appeal to popular audiences. Produced after a week's trial at Longton, the play went smoothly, being devoid of all those rough edges and redundances incidental to a first performance.

The story is that of Nancy Lee, a mill girl, who has strayed from the paths of rectitude at the suit of Robert Denham, heir to the present Lord Denham. Fearful of offending the lord and thus injuring his own prospects, Robert cajoles the girl into temporary quiescence; but the secret becoming known to her family, she leaves her home, and lives under her lover's protection, trusting to him to make an "honest woman" of her in his own good time. Lord Denham having been gathered to his fathers, Robert succeeds to the title, and Nancy begins to press for reparation—that is, marriage—which the new lord, however, delays. Nancy, in despair at her dishonour, threatens his life. The malignant influence of Ernest Sylveston, Robert's cousin, and heir-presumptive, is now at work. Hoping by the removal of the one and the death of the other (his cousin) to succeed to the barony, Sylveston insidiously instils the poison of jealousy into the mind of the weak-minded Robert. In this scheme he is aided by circumstances which, though they bear the look of guilt, are in themselves purely innocent. Will May, a former sweetheart of the girl, has, by his mate, the irrepressible Jim Jakes, sent her a handkerchief in token of his continued loyalty and friendship. This incident the rascally Sylveston, like another Iago, turns against Nancy, and Robert, spurred on by Sylveston's lies, refuses to marry her or to have anything whatsoever to do with her. The woman, rendered desperate, stabs her betrayer, and flies from the scene.

Sylveston, who has been an unseen witness to all, is now rejoicing in the removal of his obstacles, when, to his chagrin, he finds that his cousin still lives, though wounded sorely. But there is the incriminating handkerchief, which he turns to yet further account by throttling the peer with it. Will May, who has just arrived, is seized for the crime. Nancy, however, confesses, to save Will (whose good qualities begin to draw her hitherto diverted love), although now she knows she did not "finish" her paramour. She is sentenced to death; and next we have a thrilling scene recalling the Babbicombe horrors, albeit toned down to a vision dreamt by Will May. Three fruitless efforts are made to hang the hapless woman, and she is at length put back into prison for life. The villain sets to work anew to divert suspicion from himself, and resumes his former persecution of Will May. Playing on Nancy's feelings by means of a mutilated letter of Will's, he causes her indirectly to set the law on her faithful lover's track. Numberless escapes are made by the hero, and the villain Sylveston suffers much discomfiture thereby. Nancy, who secures her liberty, swears a sort of vendetta against mankind, and, becoming a leader of the demi-monde, lures men to destruction out of sheer devilry. But Will, with proofs of his guiltlessness and protestations of his love, seeks her out, and in a moving scene strives to rouse her from her profligacy. He is, however, disturbed by the police, who are still on his track, but he manages to evade them. Sylveston's troubles are now thick upon him, and Nancy happening on him, draws a complete confession of his crimes, and he, being arrested, pays the penalty. Everybody else becomes deliriously happy. Will May's love and generosity are rewarded by his union with Nancy Lee, who is also happy again in the love of her parents. Thus is "a girl redeemed from sin."

Mr. Geoffrey Fulton's company leave nothing undone to make the success perfect. Miss Olive Fulton is entitled to full praise for her clever delineation of the erstwhile mill girl, Nancy Lee. Her quiet moments revealed much art, while in the full force of her passion as the outraged, disappointed woman she rose to great heights, and quite electrified the audience. Mr. Joe Monkhouse as Will May, the hero, bore himself with excellent dignity and manliness, the nobility and faith of the true lover being fully realised. Mr. William Burgess wrought a great amount of excitement with his finely-acted deeds of villainy as Ernest Sylveston, and never resorted to any but the best means to gain success. Mr. Walle Spinner was very successful in portraying the vacillating lover, Robert, later Lord Denham; Mr. William A. Parkes acted with much impressiveness and no little pathos as the broken-down old man, Samuel Lee; Miss Nelly Waddington was very good and successful as the faithful wife, Mrs. Lee; Miss Gertie Pawle as a landlady with alcoholic tastes (Mrs. Mac) proved a clever character actress; Mr. G. M. Benson supplied an amusing study of the dude, the Hon. Bertie Boys; and the comic relief generally was provided by Mr. Harry C. Momber, who was the life and soul of the piece as the irrepressible Jakes; and Miss Ada Oxley, who, as Peggy Grey showed comedy gifts of a most promising order, making one of the successes of the production. Other parts were successfully played by Mr. M. Partridge as Rundle, Mr. Herbert Rayne as the Rev. Arthur Quex; and Mr. Joseph Turpin as the prison governor.

AT the Royal Theatre, Tonypandy, Mr. Samuel James's company is this week appearing in Saved from the Sea. Mr. David G. Noble submits a fine piece of acting as Dan Ellington; Jim Weaver is well portrayed by Mr. Geo. Wallace; Mr. Frank Litchfield as Peter Scalcher and Mr. C. R. Percy as Richard Fenton are well placed; Mr. Will Skelton and Mr. Geo. Ashley as Billy Snooks and Jenkins are the cause of considerable fun; and are supported by Miss Elsie Walton as Polly Blake. Miss Marie Auckland acts in sympathetic style as Nancy Ellington.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

PARIS, THURSDAY Aug. 22.—A couple of weeks ago, apropos of Le Mariage d'Agnès, we gave here some interesting reminiscences of M. Bergerat, at the time of the Franco-Prussian war. To-day it is M. Frédéric Febvre, the great actor, during thirty years a member of the Comédie-Française, who relates his souvenirs of the days when the house of Molière was turned into an infirmary. M. Febvre, Coquelin, in fact all the actors of the house, were then fighting for their country. Morning and afternoon they were on the ramparts of the besieged city, and in the evening they interpreted their rôles. Artists and public soon became accustomed to that state of things. One night, as the curtain rose on the fourth act of Mademoiselle de Belle-Isle, a formidable explosion was heard, and people looked at one another. "It's only a German shell!" somebody called out in a loud voice; "and it has not fallen on the house!" The announcement was received with laughter, and the performance continued. But before going home every artist made it a point to pay a visit to a captain, who was lying dangerously wounded in the long foyer of the Comédie-Française. Mme. Madeleine Brohan, the famous actress, was his chief nurse, and, although she also busied herself with the other patients, the "captain" was her favourite. He really was everybody's favourite, on account of his pluck and cheerfulness. There were also Sisters of Mercy to tend the wounded, and M. Febvre tells us that when, in between two acts, some of the actresses came to pay a visit to their sick in—as it often happened—a rather decolleté dress, the sisters stared very hard and sighed. But this sigh was not a manifestation of pruderie. Far from it. "How beautiful they are!" they would whisper to one another; "but how those ladies must suffer from cold!" Madeleine Brohan was much chaffed with her "captain." But the epilogue of the affair was even funnier than could be foreseen. The captain having to undergo a painful operation, the doctor wanted to administer chloroform, but the old warrior would not hear of it. "Let me smoke my pipe," he said; "and I promise to keep quiet." He smoked his pipe and kept quiet, but he became very weak and restless. Madeleine Brohan, however, came to the rescue. She told him anecdotes, and chose them as "peppery" as possible to keep him amused. After a while he was able to leave the hospital, and wished Mlle. Brohan good-bye. In a voice husky with emotion, he said: "My dear lady, I don't know how to thank you for all your kindness, which I shall never forget. Alas, I am not rich. But what I value most is my pipe. Will you do me the honour to accept it as a souvenir?" When Mlle. Brohan returned to her dressing-room her eyes were filled with tears. But the poor captain's pipe was placed on the mantelpiece in her drawing-room, where it remained till her death. Many of us remember having seen it there, but few knew its history.

ON the 15th of next month the Vaudeville will start the rehearsals of Patachon, the new piece by MM. Hennequin and Duquesnel, wherein Mlle. Marthe Regnier will play a very important part.

I UNDERSTAND there is a movement in England to induce the State to subvention one or two theatres, like it is done in the principal Continental cities. The pros and cons have been so often discussed that it is not necessary to point out the advantages or the error of such a proceeding. But it may be interesting to state the sums granted by the different Governments. The Royal Opera in Berlin heads the list with £45,000; next comes Paris with £32,000; then the Vienna and Dresden Opera each with £24,000, Carlsruhe with £15,000, and Munich and Darmstadt each with £12,500. It should, however, be remarked that, as regards the Vienna Opera, if there is a deficit at the end of the year the Emperor makes up for it out of his private purse. One of the objections raised against a State subvention is that a theatre receiving it loses its independence, and that it opens the door to an ugly system of favouritism for the benefit of those enjoying the protection of a member of the Government.

DURING the summer months, when the playhouses are closed and no novelties are produced, we in the theatrical world have no other resource than to glance back, and busy ourselves with queer events that happened long ago. Thus, the name of Mlle. Alphonsine, brought up incidentally the other day, has evoked some strange reminiscences. Visitors to Paris know the Boulevard du Temple. But how many are aware that for a quarter of a century it was called "The Boulevard of Crime"? Was it because so many murders and burglaries were committed there? Not a bit of it. The witty Parisian christened it so because the playhouses in that popular thoroughfare had only one speciality: the melodrama, with at least two murders. But there were a few exceptions. Thus, the little house Le Petit-Lazari had nobler aspirations, and produced comedies. The manager, a shrewd man, had a wonderful gift of detecting "new talent," and his house—every trace of which has now disappeared—has proved the steppingstone to fortune to many men and women in the profession. Among them was Mlle. Alphonsine, who in later years made a great name for herself at the Variétés. But when Mlle. Alphonsine made her début at the Petit-Lazari she was young and giddy, and between her and her manager there was constant feud about salary. For, alas! the pay, even that of the leading members of the company, was ridiculously small. Ernest Blum, the veteran vaudeville writer, tells us that one night, happening to pass the establishment, he saw the manager and two other officials run excitedly to a fashionable restaurant on the opposite side of the road. After a while they reappeared, and, the manager gesticulating wildly, called out: "She refuses to come. She has to appear in two pieces, and I shall fine her forty shillings—the highest fine ever inflicted in my establishment. And the public shall know all about it." Then, scratching his head, he added: "I can understand that Alphonsine prefers to remain with her friends and enjoy a fine menu; but we must maintain discipline." The following night, when Alphonsine made her appearance before the public she was received with catcalls. But Alphonsine did not lose her presence of mind. She walked up to the footlights and, making a speaking-tube of her two hands, said in a loud whisper: "If you only knew what a splendid dinner I had last night!" Roars of laughter followed, mingled with cries of "Why did you not invite us?" She had won the battle. But I cannot find any trace as to whether the lady paid the "record fine." Probably she did not. It would have been unlike Alphonsine.

AT the Grand Pavilion, Ventnor, Isle of Wight, Mrs. Dane's Defence was capitally performed on Monday. Mrs. Walter Maclean as Sir Daniel Carteret acted to perfection; the character of Mrs. Dane was faithfully represented by Miss Claire Hamilton; Mr. H. Montague Love as Lionel Carteret was quite a success; Miss Muriel Godfrey Turner as Lady Eastney was charming; and Mr. David James as Canon Bonsey was much appreciated.

AT the Alhambra Theatre, Stourbridge, Messrs. Travis Green and Arthur Hinton's company are appearing with Home, Sweet Home. Miss Leila Zillwood as Joan is winsome; Little Dolly Turner gains the sympathy of her audience in the part of Dora; Mr. Arthur Hinton played the manly part of Stephen Armitage in a characteristic manner; and Mr. Travis Green undertook with distinction the heavy rôle of Lucas Lyle.

JOHN COLEMAN AND MACREADY

It is scarcely possible, says Mr. John Coleman in "Fifty Years of an Actor's Life," to convey even the approximation of an idea of what we, the youth of that day, gained by being brought into contact with Macready at rehearsal: He poured forth treasures of knowledge in reckless, never-ending profusion. Our only difficulty in following his directions was that sometimes they were given sotto voce and in a growl. In rehearsing the last scene of Werner, he said to me, "Sir, will you be good enough to—err—to do me the favour when I say—err—err—to stand—err—err—and don't move hand or foot till I lift my—err—err—— You understand?"

"Not quite, sir."

"Good God! Am I not speaking the English language?"

"I presume so, sir; but as it is my misfortune—not to clearly understand, if you will kindly tell me intelligibly where I am to stand when you say, 'err—err'—I won't move hand or foot till you lift your—err—err——"

He looked at me dubiously, and even angrily, for a moment, then repeated the direction with clearness and precision.

Apropos of the remarkable vocal eccentricitics to which these refer, Mr. Murdoch, the eminent American actor (whom I remember with pleasure to have seen act young Mirabel in The Inconstant, at the Haymarket), in his interesting book, "The Stage," accounts for them by a very ingenious hypothesis. He says:—

"The ordinary current of Macready's articulation was marked by a certain catching of the breath preceding the utterance of the initial syllable of certain words. A sudden catch of the glottis, which caused a short cough-like sound to be heard previous to the articulative movement of the voice, was a distinctly marked characteristic of the elder Kean's utterance. This peculiar organic act is the result of a dropping of the jaw and consequent depression of the larynx; it gives strength to the muscles which are called into play, and controls the organs of vocality, thus enabling the speaker to execute the vowel sound from what may be called the carduous parts of the mouth—that space which includes the roots of the tongue, the glottis, and pharynx. This power, when joined to the guttural murmur or deeply-aspirated quality of the voice, is a strong element of expressive force in the suppressive utterance of passionate language in the drama. . . .

"In his youth Macready possessed a voice of great clearness, compass, and beauty. His performances, however, lacked the so-termed originality of effect which brings an audience to their feet and makes them hoarse with approving plaudits. Disappointed in his hopes, and comparing his acting with that of other tragedians who were more successful, he accepted in due time the idea so prevalent that what is popular must be perfect. He therefore remodelled his style by degrees, though, it may be, without intending imitation, and acquired some of the peculiarly expressive traits of certain distinguished performers then masters of the situation in London.

"In consequence of this change of base, his acting became more theatrical or stagey. His fervour and impulse were not in the least abated, and were still influenced by taste and good judgment, which it was not in his nature to lose sight of; but his effects were produced more in conformity with the fashion of the times, and were at last pronounced brilliant manifestations of artistic skill. Thus he established a reputation of increased pecuniary worth, and finally became the embodiment of what was ultimately termed the highest development of genius."

If Murdoch's theory be, as it seems to be, correct, it is a lamentable conclusion to arrive at. It appears to be certain that Macready's "voice lost its clear ring and other attractive qualities of tone, and became harsh, and was at times repulsive; this, in addition to his strongly-marked peculiarities of speech, became as much the nature of the actor as if it had been born with him."

When Macready condescended to be colloquial, he was most gracious and fascinating. I recall with pleasure an occasion when he confided to me how he came to improvise a sublime "gag" in the last scene of the gloomy play of Werner. He acted the part for the first time in the Bristol theatre. In the last scene, carried away by the excitement of the moment, he rushed down to Charles Kemble Mason, who played Gabor, and demanded, "Are you a father?" Then he growled sotto voce, "Say 'No.'" Whereupon Gabor shouted, "No!" while in a burst of paternal emotion Werner rejoined:

"Then you cannot feel for misery like mine!" and the pit "rose at him."

It was under exactly similar circumstances that he introduced the famous line:

"Oh, for one hour of youth!"

in the fourth act of Richelieu. Apropos of which, of all his performances I venture to think this was the greatest and most perfect creation. I had seen Forrest before him; I have seen all the great actors since; I have myself enacted the part frequently; but I have never yet seen anyone approach within measurable distance of Macready in this wonderful impersonation. His smile, when Julie de Mauprat sat at his feet, irradiated his grim face with angelic beauty. His "business" with the sword and the pen in two moments took the auditor back two ages: one moment he was the mail-clad warrior smiting "the stalwart Englisher to the waist" at Rochelle; the next, he was the feeble but mighty statesman, wielding a weapon more potent than the two-handed falchion of Charles Martel. The famous "Never-say-fail!" speech thrilled through one like a trumpet-call. His tenderness to his orphan ward contrasted in strong relief with his scornful denunciation of the traitor Baradas, while his love of country dominated over all. In the last scene, when, awaking from his simulated trance, he leaped up, and, dilating to preternatural porportions, exclaimed, "There, at my feet!" he realised a picture once seen never to be forgotten. When, in this situation, he floated down the stage, I protest he always suggested to me the Divine image grown grey and ghastly through the efflux of the ages and once more gliding over the Sea of Galilee!

For subtlety, intellectuality, and vigour his Macbeth has never been approached in our time; and he was the only possible Lear I have ever seen. He galvanised the dull and dreary abortion of Werner into life, while his Virginius—— But words are feeble to describe this matchless creation. In Edinburgh he wore a bald wig, which made him hideous; in Bristol he wore his own beautiful and abundant iron-grey hair curled, and certainly looked superbly handsome. His Lord Townly appeared to me affected, lachrymose, and tedious; but his Henry IV. was of the highest order of excellence. His Othello, which I saw him act in Edinburgh, was to me the least satisfactory and impressive of his Shakespearean performances. I may here remark that he was the only actor I ever saw "make up" for the Moor with an entirely black face—a face, in fact, black as a Christy minstrel. Possibly his comparative failure in Othello may have arisen from the fact that he never liked the part—so, at least, he assured me.

Actors are not always just to each other; but Vandenhoff once said to me, "Except Macbeth and Iago, I never cared for 'Mac' in Shakespeare. But I have acted Richelieu and Virginius hundreds of times; I have seen others—good actors, too—try their hands on them; but in these two parts we are none of us in the same century with him."

MR. N. A. KNOX, the Surrey fast bowler, will study singing under Jean de Reszke in Paris at the close of the cricket season

VARIETY GOSSIP.

The new Willesden Hippodrome is to open in September, and in this building, which marks another departure in suburban enterprise on the part of Mr. Walter Gibbons, will be found a finely-designed structure by Mr. Frank Matcham, whose transformation of the old Royal into the Holborn Empire did so much for an already high reputation. Mr. Percy H. Gallagher, who has been so ably assisting in the acting-management of the Prince's, Poplar, since its change of entertainment, has been appointed manager.

Mdlle. Adeline Genée, after a brief and much-needed holiday, has returned to the Empire to delight the patrons of that beautiful house with the witchery and charm of her impersonation of Dolly, the heroine of Sir Roger de Coverley.

About the middle of September the arena of the Hippodrome will echo back the rhythm of the ranz des vaches to be heard in the valleys of Switzerland, where Mr. Frank Parker, the ingenious stage-director, has been picking up, at the foot of Mont Blanc, lofty notions for the next production. The incidents will circle round that famous snow-capped peak, the counterfeit of which will rear its head in the flies of the house in Cranbourn-street.

An important engagement at the Hippodrome is that of Signorina Fatima Miris, who was secured in Italy in June by Mr. Fred Trussell, acting as the emissary of Mr. Oswald Stoll. The young lady, who is just over twenty-four years of age, is termed a protean prodigy, and is said to be able to present the whole of the characters in The Geisha inside of a very few minutes. The female Fregoli will open in London on Oct. 7.

Mr. Percy Percival, who succeeds Mr. John Christie as resident-manager of the Hackney Empire, has been both a singer and an actor. After singing at St. James's Hall he became an actor, appearing with success at Terry's and the Royalty Theatres, touring also in comic opera and musical comedy. He was for six years associated with the management of the Grand, Wolverhampton, and at one time was in the front of the house at the Adelphi.

The services of Mr. Charles Wilson, the clever producer of ballets, have been secured by Mr. Oswald Stoll, who has long recognised the importance of special productions of scenas and one-act pieces, musical and otherwise. Many manuscripts are sent in to the head offices at Cranbourn-street, and in many of these there are clever ideas shadowing forth possibilities that would only occur to the imagination of a born producer such as Mr. Charles Wilson undoubtedly is. Mr. Wilson's appointment will not in any way affect the position of the popular Mr. Bertie Shelton, producer of Trilby for Mr. Beerbohm Tree. Mr. Shelton, who is a personal friend of Mr. Wilson's, will still be the chief consultant in all matters appertaining to the stage.

It was a representative gathering that bade farewell at Euston on Thursday at noon to Mr. and Mrs. Gus Elen and Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Romaine, who were departing for America to fulfil lucrative engagements across the "Pond," and it was an enterprising firm of photographers that obtained a splendid negative of the dense phalanx of well-known hoarsely-cheering men and handkerchief-waving women.

As the train moved off, and the mother of the Misses Marie, Alice, and Rosie Lloyd was pulled into a position of safety, Mr. Elen did the "hat trick" by dexterously catching a new piece of sea tackle brought by an old admirer from Deal, a precious piece of manuscript music from the English musician whose "Waiting at the Church" sent New York crazy, and a bouquet composed of sprigs of London pride grown in Bethnal Green, lavender from Mitcham, and rue, bearing the legend, "That's for remembrance, Gus. The Surrey Side and the East End say, 'Come back soon.'"

It is understood that Madame Katti Lanner will not take part in the production of the new ballet that in the course of time will take the place of Sir Roger de Coverley, as she has decided on taking a rest. Born in Vienna in 1831, Katharina Lanner made her début as a dancer at the Court Opera in 1845, being trained as a dancer under the Imperial Court ballet master Campilli. Among those who encouraged the then youthful Katti were Fanny Elssler and Cerito. The débutante afterwards took lessons under Isidore Carey in dancing and pantomime, afterwards sustaining the leading rôle in the ballet El Toreador.

She next went to Munich, and later spent four years at Hamburg, where she was appointed mistress of the ballet at the Opera. In 1858 she formed a children's ballet in Hamburg, and gave forty-six performances in Paris with great success. She came to Drury Lane in 1875 as maîtresse de ballet and principal dancer, and established the National Training School of Dancing in 1876, becoming its directress in 1877, when she performed for the last time on the stage

Mme. Lanner must have been inspired with the rhythm of the waltz in her earliest years, for her father, Joseph Franz Karl Lanner, may be considered the founder of our present dance music. He conducted at the Court balls in Vienna, alternately with Strauss, who originally played the viola in his orchestra, and as a mark of distinction was appointed capellmeister of the second Burger-regiment. He died in 1843.

Mme. Lanner has done much for the art which she loves, and of which she was so artistic an exponent, and besides her work as an arranger she has also written several admired ballets. That she maintains a high standard of dancing may best be judged by the excellence of the fine corps de ballet to be found at the Empire. At the advanced age of seventy-six she naturally feels the need of a rest; but let us hope that it will only be temporary, and that her skilled arrangement of scenarios, which have done so much for the Empire productions, will still be available for the directors, who have always set a high value upon her services.

Miss Jean Aylwin is to appear at the Palace Theatre on Monday, Sept. 2. Miss Aylwin recently made a great success with her rendering of Scotch character songs, and it will be as a Scottish comedienne that she will make her first appearance on the variety stage. As Mr. Alfred Lester and Miss Kate Cutler did a little time ago, Miss Aylwin will each evening divide her artistic efforts between the Palace and the Gaiety, where she is playing the part of Minna in The Girls of Gottenberg.

Miss Denise Orme (Jessie Smither), whose marriage in April to the Hon. John Yarde-Buller has been made public this week, made her first appearance on the stage of the Alhambra as violinist and vocalist in 1905. Her mother is a professional pianist, and Denise had an excellent musical training at the Royal Academy of Music. She is fulfilling the last week of her engagement at the Palace, where she has been overwhelmed with congratulations.

The Alhambra, Edinburgh, which has been closed for a short vacation, reopens on Sept. 2. The bookings are in the hands of Mr. Ventom Swift.

Mr. Harry D. Blunt, late of Gillespie Brothers (accountants to the Moss' Empires), has been appointed assistant-manager at the New Cross Empire.

Another addition to Sunderland's places of entertainment is promised. Mr. Ralph Pringle contemplates erecting a "picture palace" in the centre of the town, and the site has already been obtained. The seating accommodation, according to the plans which have been prepared, will be on the amphitheatre principle, and the building will be specially adapted for the class of entertainment to be given it.

The Morecambe Tower Buildings and Pleasure Grounds, a valuable freehold property situate in one of the best parts of Morecambe, is for sale by private treaty. The place has a frontage of 315ft. to the Promenade and sea front, and possesses a six-days' provisional licence for nine bars. The land forming the site of the buildings, shops, tower, and gardens, contains an area of 9,432 square yards. For particulars and plans, with cards to view, apply to Mr. S. C. Platts, chartered accountant, York Chambers, Scarborough.

Mr. James Wright, the courteous theatrical traffic agent of the London and North-Western Railway, speaking recently to an interviewer, says that in the year 1902 "we booked at the stations on our system 150 first-class and 6,753 third-class music-hall artist passengers. In 1906 these figures had increased to 630 first-class and 15,481 third-class. The numbers refer only to the members of the Music-hall Artists' Railway Association, who are entitled to a rebate on their fares."

Mr. Alfred Graham may now be numbered among the most enterprising managers in the North-Eastern districts. Besides running the Oxford Palace, Middlesbrough, and the New Hippodrome, Hull, on the twice-nightly plan, and with up-to-date ideas, he is exploiting that popular little comedian, Harry Pleon, in an exciting musical and dramatic episode, At Large—a great success—in which is presented a screaming burlesque of the famous drama, Macaire, associated in the early years of the nineteenth century with the fame of Frédéric Lemaître. Mr. Pleon as Devil Macaire is a sight for the gods and pit, and incidentally the stalls. Mr. Graham's companies also include the Premier Juveniles, who have been booked for the Barrasford, the Broadhead, and De Frece tours.

Mr. Lechmere Sheldon, son of Mr. Ernest Sheldon, late proprietor of the Palaces, Aberdeen and Dundee, died of typhoid fever at Stalybridge on Sunday morning last, aged 29 years. Mr. Horace Sheldon, his brother, had the body conveyed from Stalybridge to Sunnyside, Kensington Hill, Brislington, Bristol, the residence of his parents, and the funeral took place at Arnos Vale Cemetery, Bristol, on Tuesday. The deceased was for the last two years conductor at the Hippodrome, Hull, and only recently undertook a similar position for Mr. Jas. Fioni, at Stalybridge.

Dr. Walford Bodie, who has been having a well-deserved two weeks' rest at his beautiful Highland home, The Manor House, Macduff, travelled with his staff from Macduff to Swansea last Saturday. It is one of the longest railway journeys in the British Isles. The party left Macduff on Saturday at 5 p.m., arriving in Swansea at 8.15 on Sunday night. There were thousands assembled at the station to meet the doctor, and he had a right loyal Welsh welcome. Opening at the Albert Hall, under the management of Mr. Coutts, of the Star and Palace Theatres, Dr. Bodie has been playing to packed houses twice nightly.

Dr. Bodie attended the procession on Tuesday from the Guildhall to the Cwmdoukin Park of the Gorsedd, or crowning of the Bards, being the preliminary to the great Eisteddfod now being held in Swansea. He accompanied the Mayor, Corporation, and the Breton delegates. The Cambria Daily Leader, reporting the procession, says:—"One of the most striking and picturesque figures in the Gorsedd procession was Dr. Walford Bodie. Being a Scotchman, he wore his Highland tartan, and 'reet weel' he looked."

The interim injunction which was granted in the case of Moss's Empires v. Williams last week in the Vacation Court, by Mr. Justice Pickford, restraining defendant from excavating in such a way as to endanger the safety of plaintiff's premises at Summer Hill-road, Birmingham, expired on Wednesday. Plaintiff applied for its renewal, but was satisfied with an undertaking entered into by defendant not to excavate within 15ft. of the boundary between the two properties. An order was made accordingly.

Mr. J. D. Hunter, entertainment manager of the Hastings Pier Pavilion, takes his twenty-eighth annual benefit thereat on Thursday next.

Mr. Henry Kemble, who so successfully managed the Palace Theatre, Cork, and was the first to make it pay, was compelled to relinquish his position there on account of his successful agency occupying all his time and attention. However, we are pleased to state that many of our popular artists of to-day will see Cork through his agency, as the directors have at all times placed the greatest confidence in his judgment and discretion. Mr. Kemble was none the less sorry to leave Cork, the past three years having been the happiest period of his life.

The New Hippodrome, Peterborough, which is announced to be opened on Sept. 2, has been built by Mr. Sylvester and a syndicate, and will seat upwards of 1,200 people. It will be run on the two-houses-a-night system. Mr. Mason has been appointed resident-manager and Mr. Keyford assistant-manager. Cathedral centres are never promising theatrically, but Mr. Sylvester may be able to work a revolution in the city of the Fens.

The staff of the Cardiff Empire had their annual outing on Sunday, when they journeyed to Llantwit Major in breaks. Luncheon, which was provided at the Swan Hotel, was presided over by Mr. C. H. S. Dring (manager), who submitted the toasts of Mr. Oswald Stoll and Mr. John Christie (the newly-appointed district manager), which were enthusiastically received. During the afternoon an enjoyable time was spent in visits to several places of interest, after which tea was served at the Swan Hotel. Subsequently the return journey to Cardiff was made after a most enjoyable day.

Mr. Allan McAskell, the comedy conjurer, is at present managing the Hippodrome, Spennymoor, for Mr. Leoni Clarke, and takes up a similar position at Temperance Hall, Bolton, on Sept. 2nd, for Mr. Ralph Pringle, of animated picture fame.

Mr. Percy Boucher, the originator of modern dramas being played twice nightly in Liverpool, has opened the Roscommon Music Hall with a well-selected stock company, and has met with immediate success. There is no reason to doubt a continuance of this success, as Mr. Boucher intends every week presenting the best dramas available.

Mr. Manny Warner, of Messrs. Somers and Warner, in reply to the urgent summons of a cablegram, started last week for New York, where he is now arranging business in connection with the establishment of the Klaw and Erlanger Circuit.

Mr. Ted Marks, who has been busy on this side securing artists for the other side, sails to-day for New York, and Mr. Feiber will arrive in London during next week to transact business in connection with the American music hall boom.

The Committee of the Actors' Union have appointed Mr. Frank Gerald, late the secretary of the Variety Artists' Federation, as their delegate at the Trades Union Congress, which opens at Bath on Monday, Sept. 2. The testimonial dinner to Mr. Gerald takes place on Sept. 15—not the 5th, as was stated in a contemporary.

The dinner is to be held at the Criterion Restaurant, and tickets (6s. each) may be had from either the hon. sec., Mr. Geo. Reeves, or the hon. treasurer, Mr. Cecil Raleigh, at 29, Wellington-street, Strand. The chairman has not yet been decided on, but he will be a very prominent music hall favourite. On the committee are Messrs. Will Crooks, M.P., Charles Jesson, William Johnson, Jas. O'Grady, M.P., Frank Smith, of the L.C.C., Ben Tillett, George Chirgwin, George Gray, Dr. Distin Maddick (of the Scala), Charles Coborn, Gus Elen, Bransby Williams, Pat Carey, Leo Dryden, S. Major Jones, and Dr. Stamford Reid. An illuminated address and a cheque will be presented to Mr. Gerald.

Miss Lil Hawthorne met with a rousing reception last week at Her Majesty's Theatre, Walsall, the audience not being contented until she had sung four of her latest successes.

Mr. Worland S. Wheeler, the secretary and treasurer of the Paragon, has composed a delightful number, entitled "Grand Schottische de Concert," which is being played this week by the Paragon orchestra, having been arranged for that purpose by the conductor, Mr. Arthur Grimmett. A previous composition of Mr. Wheeler, "The Suspense Symph-funny," also found favour with East End audiences some weeks ago. Mr. Wheeler, by the way, is an ardent politician—"unattached" at present—and his name has appeared under many extremely well-written contributions.

Henri Helme, announced as the Chanteur Basque, has been engaged by the Alhambra management, and will appear on Monday, Sept. 2. This is not the singer's first appearance in England. It is some years since, however, that he made his London début at the Palace.

Mr. Edward John Macdermott, the new manager for Mr. George Dance at Richmond Theatre, has been associated with the stage since his earliest years, and is the eldest son of the late G. H. Macdermott, the singer of the famous "Jingo" song which had such a tremendous vogue in the late 'seventies. Mr. E. J. Macdermott's mother also had a successful career on the halls under the name of Annie Milburn, and his grandfather, Mr. J. H. Milburn, who is still a favourite at variety theatres, is now acting at the Hippodrome.

From his parents young Mr. Macdermott inherited a love of the stage, and at the age of five nightly appeared at Sadler's Wells and the Bedford. He was the baby in Our Lads in Red, which had a very good run in those days. Then, when he was fourteen years old, he was cast for the title-rôle in The Dumb Man of Manchester, and he also ably filled a comedy part in The Corsican Brothers.

The elder Macdermott was at that time proprietor of the Foresters' and managing-director of the South London, and Mr. Macdermott was his father's right-hand man in the numerous sketches produced at those places. He also assisted in Mr. Percy Murray's pieces, and was very successful in the part of Charles Ingot in David Garrick. In 1901, on his father's death, Mr. Macdermott temporarily resigned his connection with the stage to be articled to a chartered accountant, in order to obtain a thorough acquaintance with business affairs. He then undertook the management of his father's variety agency, and, finally, in the early part of this year, he joined Mr. George Dance, who appointed him to the County Theatre, Reading. He will fill the managerial position at Richmond at the age of twenty-four.

Mistinguette, a Parisian dancer and singer, who, with Miss Lawler, has scored a success in the Revue at the Moulin Rouge, and whose style is somewhat reminiscent of the entertainment presented some years ago by Anna Held, is coming to the Palace on Monday. Mistinguette's speciality is entitled "Pi-Ouit," and it is expected to be not only sensational, but a great draw. In Paris the artist is popularly known as "La Jolie."

The following letter is from La Milo to Mr. Willie Clarkson:—"The wig was a great success, thanks to your capable and experienced management. In the hands of others less experienced than yourself it might easily have proved a disastrous failure. After a journey of nine miles, covering some six hours, it never lost a crease. It was admired by all. I owe much of my success to it."

Miss Jessie Preston has been scoring heavily during the week at the Hippodrome, Crouch End, occupying the stage for fully thirty minutes nightly with three new songs—"I can't forget Auld Reekie," "Will somebody see me home," and "I love a laddie"—the audience insisting upon numerous encores. Next week Miss Preston will appear at Collins's. All the songs are from the pen of Mr. J. F. Lambe, and Francis and Day are the publishers.

Mr. F. W. Purcell's company commence an autumn tour on Monday with the successful sketch adapted from Arthur Morrison's story in "Tales of Mean Streets," entitled That Brute Simmons, by Arthur Morrison and Herbert C. Sargent, which was specially produced by Mr. Purcell for Mr. Oswald Stoll, and at once secured for the entire Moss and Stoll tours.

"The Price of a Hat," a new comedy sketch by Alicia Ramsey and Rudolph de Cordova, will be produced on Monday under their own management at the Shepherd's Bush Empire. The scene is laid in one of the most modern residential clubs, and the characters include Charles Hammond, to be played by Mr. John Richter; Alice Hammond, in which part will be seen Miss E. Nolan O'Connor; and William Davies (a burglar), to be represented by Mr. Frederick Morland. Miss Ramsey and Mr. de Cordova have done so much dramatic work for the Hippodrome that there should be every chance of success for their new venture.

Mr. Herbert Darnley is about again after a nasty fall some six weeks since from a hammock in his garden. The branch of a tree to which it was attached suddenly snapped, and the genial writer, who is no light weight, suffered a grievous hurt, which, coming so soon after a recent severe illness, would have effectually placed a less vigorous man hors de combat for good and all.

Miss Mayme Cannon, after a successful tour, opens in town on Monday at the Canterbury and Paragon, where no doubt her attractive style will be quickly noticed by numerous managers. Youth and beauty must, with talent, tell its tale.

Mr. Hilton Frances will produce at the Empire, Camberwell, on Monday, a new sketch, entitled Pawnbroking. New scenery has been specially painted for the production, and a first-class company engaged. The sketch is fully protected.

Mr. Francis O'Flynn, the accomplished young banjoist whose playing created a sensation recently at the Middlesex, is recording further triumphs. On Monday last he gave a private recital to Mr. Fred Miller at the Canterbury, and was immediately engaged to appear each evening during the current week at the above establishment. Bookings on the Syndicate halls are now being arranged.

Miss Marie Empress, whose charming style and winning manner stamps her as an artist of the first rank, opens on Monday at the Holborn Empire. This will be the last week we shall see this lady on the English boards for a while, as she is sailing for South Africa under engagement to Messrs. Hyman, on Sept. 7.

The regular meeting of the Chelsea Lodge of Freemasons was held at the Town Hall, King's-road, Chelsea, on Friday, 16th inst., the Lodge being opened by Br. Albert Le Fre, who, taking advantage of the luncheon interval during the rehearsals of The Three Kisses, motored down in order to perform that duty in the absence of the W.M. Serpentello, whose business at Barrow-in-Furness prevented his attendance, and also that of Br. James W. Mathews, who was journeying from St. Petersburg.

After a notice of motion, which stood in the names of Br. J. W. Mathews and himself, to alter one of the bye-laws, Br. Le Fre vacated the chair in favour of Br. Wolfe S. Lyon, the promoter and Treasurer of the Lodge, who had the pleasure of initiating his second son, Mr. James Simon Lyon, solicitor, into the mysteries and privileges of Ancient Freemasonry, in addition to the following vaudeville artists: Messrs. Joe Robins (of Robins and Collier), Herbert Kisby, and Victor Kelly (of Kelly and Agnes). Before vacating the chair Br. Lyon advanced Brs. Harry Kato, Ted E. Box, and Monte Bayly, and then retired in favour of Br. Arthur Bray, who further advanced Brs. Andie Caine, Ian Colquhoun, and C. H. Burton, giving the Traditional History in a most impressive manner. Before closing the Lodge Br. W. S. Lyon thanked the members of the Genesius Club, viz., Brs. Arthur Bray, F. Louis Schneider (who acted as organist), and T. W. Rumball (who ably filled the office of S.W. when Br. Henry Coutts was compelled to leave), for their kindness in attending and rendering assistance.

The members present were Brothers Albert Le Fre, I.P.M., Harry Coutts, S.W., W. H. Hitch, J.W., W. B. Wolfe S. Lyon, Treasurer, C. J. Doughty, Secretary, Harry Bawn, S.D., G. H. Dyball, acting J.D., Douglas White, acting I.G., and L. S. Sharpe, Leo Tell, Fred Neiman, W. Doust, Harry Kato, R. E. Wilding, Dan Lipton, Monte Bayly, C. H. Burton, Eric Farr, Ted E. Box, Fred Keeton, Ian Colquhoun, Andie Caine, G. H. Hill, Frank Hardie, Geo. Graham, and Ernie Chester.

There was a large and influential attendance of visitors, including Brs. C. C. Cruikshanks, P.A.G., Standard Bearer, S. Meech, P.P.G.P., Arthur W. Bray, L. Schnieder, J. D. Burnett, and T. W. Rumball, S. R. Baker, H. W. Williams, N. S. Lyon, A. Hullamore, A. E. E. Von Hopen, J. Hunt, and A. L. Culler, the latter hailing from Mexico. Subsequently the Brethren adjourned for refreshments, at which the abridged toasts, for which this lodge is noted, were proposed and replied to by W. B. C. C. Cruikshanks in his usual characteristic manner, and Brs. Arthur W. Bray, James S. Lyon, H. G. Kisbey, and Victor Kelly. Before the assembly parted an impromptu entertainment was given by Brs. Ian Colquhoun, Andie Caine, and the Tally Ho Trio.

Swan and Vesta, in a new show, have been "spotted" by Will Oliver, and they will no doubt have the usual luck that follows his selections.

The Simms have stood the test of Stoll's Empires, and have been secured for a long term. They go to Mr. J. Elliston for pantomime.

The employees of the Pavilion, Glasgow, held their second annual picnic on Sunday last. The success of the excursion last year suggested a more extended tour this time, and the "bonnie, bonnie banks of Loch Lomond" were again the destination. Starting from the Pavilion at 7.30 a.m., the party, seventy in number, drove in brakes to Balloch, which was reached about ten o'clock. They then embarked on steam launches for the trip on the loch, and had a splendid view of the impressive Highland scenery during the sail to Tarbet.

On reaching there the party was joined by Mr. Samuel Lloyd, the general-manager of the Pavilion, Mme. Lloyd, Mr. Howard W. Galpin, conductor, and Ex-Bailie Connell, who had motored from Glasgow. Lunch was served at 12.30, and appreciated with the keen appetites given by an early start and an exhilarating atmosphere. After lunch it was intended that the trip should be continued to the head of Loch Lomond, but as a "Scotch mist" of a particularly aggressive type was descending over the locality, this part of the programme was modified, and the time spent in the vicinity of the hotel. After tea the company again embarked for the sail down the loch to Balloch, which was reached at nine p.m. Unfortunately, the rain increased, but it takes a good deal to damp the enthusiasm of a music-hall staff when on their annual beano, and despite the weather fun and good humour prevailed until the finish of the trip, Glasgow being reached a few minutes after midnight.

"The Fatal Letter," written by Brien McCullough will shortly be produced in town by Fred Southern, who holds the sole rights. McCullough has also written a sketch for Arnold Bell, and John Lawson is looking over one. So Mac's pen is pretty busy just now.

Edgar Bateman has concealed himself for a fortnight in a small boat with two sea rods "where the ocean meets the sky" near Brighton, after vainly endeavouring to ascertain from the Admiralty for how much per hour he could hire the "Dreadnought" as a tender to hold his prospective "catches." Even now it is said that Ananias is preparing to turn over and lie on his other side.

Mr. J. T. Taylor, late carpenter for Miss Annie Bell's Sapho company, has been appointed stage-manager to the Hippodrome, Oldham, and he commenced his duties on Monday.

The latest quotations for music-hall shares are as follow:—Alhambra, 29s.; Canterbury, ½; Empire, 15s. paid, 1⅛, 10s. paid, 1½; London Pavilion ordinary 4½, pref. 5; London Coliseum, 1-16; Metropolitan, ½; Moss Empire 4½, 5 per cent. pref. 3⅞; Oxford, 6⅜; Palace, 15s.; Tivoli, 5⅛; Variety Consolidated Theatres, 14s.

Many of our readers will have pleasant recollections of the turn of Messrs. Goggin and Davis, comedy acrobats, who made their first appearance and an immediate success at an Oxford anniversary a few years ago. We learn with regret that Mr. Goggin is lying dangerously ill at his home in Washington.

Miss Alexandra Dagmar has been appearing with great success at the Hippodrome, Belfast, this week. Her songs and stories are keenly enjoyed.

Owing to the thousands of people who were unable to gain admission to Derby Castle, Douglas, I.O.M., during Miss Vesta Tilley's engagement last week, the management arranged for her appearance in the Palace Ballroom—the largest ballroom in the world—and this immense hall has been packed nightly with audiences averaging 10,000, who have stood on the dancing-floor packed like herrings whilst Miss Tilley has sung six and seven songs to a running accompaniment of cheers and applause. Miss Tilley's hold on the public is nothing short of phenomenal, and her popularity increases year by year.

Mr. Fred Willmott, of Liverpool, gave all the managers engaged at the many places of amusement of which he is director of entertainments a treat on Sunday last by taking them in a number of motor-cars for a drive to Llangollen. The party numbered about forty, and the weather was delightful. At four o'clock in the afternoon a most appetising dinner was provided for the merry company, after which several "group" photographs were taken. The party arrived back safely in Liverpool about 9.30 p.m. During an interval in the dinner Mr. Walter (Warrington), on behalf of a number of friends, presented Mr. Willmot with a pair of motor driving gloves and Mrs. Willmot with a pretty motor veil. Speeches were made by Mr. Welsker and Mr. Marks.

There will always be a hearty welcome for such a gifted trio as the Meers, who have been appearing at the Empire during the week in their cleverly devised mixture of fun and funambulism. The comedy-merchant has a broad view of his responsibilities, and has the goodwill of the audience directly he comes on the stage. The feats, too, that he and his partners accomplish bristle with difficulty, but so deftly is everything done that there is absolutely no sense of strain or effort.

Mr. Harrison Brockbank will, in October next, produce a new dramatic and musical sketch, in three scenes, entitled Robin Hood, in which thirty artists and chorus are to take part. The Typhoon, in which he has been playing, has proved during the last four weeks the biggest success of its kind ever introduced to the Liverpool Olympia, and after it concludes a month's stay at Manchester, where it commences a fortnight hence, Mr. Brockbank will be free to embark on his new venture, which will occupy his time until Christmas, when he goes to Drury Lane pantomime.

At the Avenue Hotel, Whitley Bay, a few evenings since, a large crowd of residents and visitors assembled to witness the presentation to Mr. "Medley" Barrett, of Catlin's Pierrots, of a gold-plated horseshoe decorated with white heather, a solid silver cigarette case, a gold cigar-cutter, a silver bâton, and other articles, tokens of admiration and esteem subscribed for mainly by Newcastle folk who have been entertained by the well-known comedian during the season. At the evening performance by Mr. Catlin's justly celebrated "crowd" on the date in question, the entire souvenir programme was made up of Mr. Barrett's compositions, he himself delighting a huge concourse with his Home-made hunting," "Tommy's Christmas pudding," and the great song he wrote for Mr. Harry Randall, "I'm not a bad sort, am I?"

The Portobello Tower Pavilion is quite up to date, and the company engaged is a very strong one, including that quaint comedian and actor-vocalist, Jimmy Forrest, Tony Freedman (coon vocalist), Tom Packer (comedian), Miss Elaine Cliff (contralto), and a strong picture show.

Mr. Fred Kitchen and Mr. Frank Lister are producing a new sketch at Walham Green on Monday, entitled The Sundowner. Their No. 99 sketch has been rebooked at every hall at which it has been played.

Mr. George Bastow ("Varmer Giles"), who was unable to fulfil his engagement at Drury Lane last Christmas in consequence of lung trouble, and has been undergoing treatment since last November, is now very nearly himself again, and will, it is hoped, resume work in September.

Mrs. Fred Ginnett collected at the Water Rats Up-river Outing on Sunday the sum of £2 1s. for the Music Hall Ladies' Guild. She was also handed 4s. by Wilkie Bard and one of the Brothers Egbert, the proceeds of a game, and a further sum of 6s. by Wilkie Bard and Harry Tate, the result of a guessing competition.

Mr. Walter C. Kelly, who will enter upon the last week of his engagement at the Palace on Monday, is one of the most prolific of story-tellers in the country. Chatting recently, the artist mentioned that the South American nigger is one of those who view marriage and divorce with a happy haphazard which would hardly be commended in this country. On one occasion a nigger drifted into the Judge's Court in Warwick County, and asked the Judge to marry him that day, incidentally mentioning that as times were hard he was "skinned out," but that he had a good string of fish he would exchange for the ceremony. The Judge agreed to the barter, and the marriage was duly settled. About two weeks afterwards the nigger returned with a forlorn expression, and opened up. "Well, Sam," said the Judge, "howy're doing?" "Sar," replied the nigger, "can you let me have my fish back, and I'll give you that flat-footed coon who is calling herself my wife?"

Mr. Douglas White occupied the chair at the 525th meeting of the Executive Committee of the Music Hall Artists' Railway Association, held at the offices on Wednesday, when he was supported by Messrs. Charles Coborn, A. Borelli, Charles Gardiner, Harold Finden, Fred Neiman, Jack Collinson, J. Alexander, Fred W. Millis, Lieut. Albini, and C. Douglas Stuart (secretary). To Mr. Stuart for his summer vacation the Committee made a grant of £10. The weekly statement showed an amount of £37 4s., and thirty-five new members had been enrolled during the week. Mr. A. G. Epps, the Railway Hotel, Maidstone, was appointed agent in that town, and the agency at Gloucester was transferred to the Bull Hotel.

Miss Mabelle F. Barlow, who has been specially engaged by Mr. John F. Preston for the part of the Duchess in Rogues of the Turf, to be played on his forthcoming tour with Moss Empires, opens at the Ardwick Empire on Sept. 2. Miss Barlow's greatest success has probably been in the rôle of Lady Godiva in Max Goldberg's play of that name. Miss Barlow was recently presented while on tour with an old Coventry halfpenny bearing the City Arms and the figure of Godiva on the horse.

LONDON VARIETY THEATRES.

LONDON PAVILION.

Something fresh and novel and of the highest quality is always to be found in the programmes presented at the London Pavilion, which is so excellently managed by Mr. Frank Glenister, and from the opening number until the strains of the National Anthem give the signal for departure not a dull moment has to be endured. The latest addition to the bill is the startling turn of the Three Röhrs, sensational cyclists, who, not content with exhibitions of wheeling inside a globe-shaped palisaded track, allow the globe to be turned while one of them, without in any way losing his equilibrium or his nerve, urges on his mad career as coolly as if he were on terra firma. This is a very genuine shocker to audiences, who watch with breathless interest while these well-set up young men accomplish their difficult task.

Kartelli, who is not altogether new to London, is a wonder on the slack wire, and it is an interesting study of the triumph of mind over muscle to see him, with one foot on the wire, whirl a hoop on the other, while deftly juggling with a number of plates. Another trick of extraordinary difficulty is presented when Kartelli, balancing a bicycle on the wire, and without for a moment endangering his own equilibrium or that of the machine, squeezes himself through the frame, and regains his position on the saddle.

Early in the bill is to be found that perennial favourite of audiences at the London Pavilion—Mr. Charles Collette, the evergreen. A true disciple of Charles Mathews is this actor, if we have any regard to his alertness or effervescence, his breezy style, his overflowing good spirits, and his wonderful readiness of speech. He is able to exhibit all these qualities in what is termed a "roadside" episode, Pyjamas, by H. C. Sargent, whose story concerns the ruse devised by Ethel Fane to escape from a matrimonial alliance arranged by her elders. Miss Joan Derry plays this part with considerable charm. We have also a hilarious time with Mr. Louis A. Simon, Miss Grace Gardner, and company in the successful farce The New Coachman, the gentlemen being responsible for some exceedingly funny business with a pair of steps; and Mr. Mark Melford and company, in the farcical sketch, Only a Wedding, add to the amusement. Mr. Tom Costello tells the story of "The ten-bob rise" with the admirable humour that enables him to score with a really original song; Mr. Hal Forde sings of the "Girls," and a Gibson and a Sandow girl very attractively clinch his "argumenis" in their favour; the dry quaintness of Dale and O'Malley should not on any account be missed; Tom and Marie Motramo are again welcome; and the same remark applies to the Gotham Comedy Quartette, with the now familiar American mixture of horseplay and harmony. Mr. Edwin Boyde does not give us anything new, and apparently does not require it. Mr. Kit Keen's bone playing and dancing are excellent. He could do with some better patter; Miss José Collins, a pretty daughter of the famous Lottie, sings very daintily and with much chic a song of Spain; Miss May Henderson, the dusky comedy queen, retains all the energy and go that have made her such a favourite here; and Mr. Harry Ford, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Finden, and Nipper Lupino-Lane are also in the bill, which is being ably supervised this week by Mr. W. W. Cobbett, Mr. Frank Glenister's able lieutenant. Mr. Bond Sayers's orchestra keeps up its high reputation.

ROYAL STANDARD.

"Stands Scotland where she did?" There is a fine new act-drop at the famous Pimlico theatre which brings Caledonia into unenviable prominence, inasmuch as it plainly intimates to all and sundry that Scotland is now a dishonoured country. It can be at once admitted that this act-drop is a very pretty specimen of theatrical scenic art, and the painter, Mr. Fredk. Munns, has done his work exceedingly well from the purely technical point of view. But very serious objection can be taken, for Mr. Munns, in his pictorial representation of the Royal Standard, chooses to depict Scotia in disgrace by making the Lion of Scotland face sinister instead of dexter, and omitting entirely the double tressure and the lilies, which are of the utmost significance.

Leaving act-drops and heraldry alone for the moment, and coming to the programme, Mr. Herbert Shelley treats us to a most interesting romance of the period of George IV., in which he himself sustains five characters. The little piece is called Dan, the Outlaw, and in it Mr. Shelley appears at one time as a miserly doddering old postmaster, at another as a cheery watchman, the third time as a bellicose and swashbuckling dragoon, the fourth as a spectre, or "Banshee" as it is known in Ireland, and the fifth time as the gay and gallant hero. Such a varied range of characters give Mr. Shelley ample opportunities for his versatility as an actor, and most admirably does he take advantage of them, the production finding great favour with the audience. McKie and McKay are seen and heard in a very entertaining comedy act; Miss Queenie Dell can lay claim to much charm and ability as a comedienne; the Zampas present a particularly laughable comedy act; and Mr. Kit Keene, the coon comedian and dancer, submits a turn which is mirth-provoking from first to last. Mr. Harry Maxam is another merry eccentric, who contrives to be exceedingly comical. His song, "He's only just found it out," greatly tickles the fancy of his hearers. Miss Annie Laurie, appearing in a handsome boy's costume which befits her exceedingly well, tells of her ambitions, or of the ambitions of the person she is supposed to represent. "I'd liko to be a sailor," she sings, and by the enchanting manner she renders the words, one judges that there must be something very alluring in a sailor's life. Her other item goes equally well. Miss Nell Cotter gives a pleasing account of herself as a comedienne, her songs about a "Sunday girl" and "My old man" being loudly applauded. Then there is Mr. Fred Earle, of "Seaweed" fame, who causes one's risible faculties to be put in operation by his quaint interpretations of ditties such as "Tiddley-a." Miss Clorinda Thurtell, the Anglo-Spanish songstress, also furnishes an attractive act, in which she sings and dances in "taking" fashion; and Mr. Percy Hannan, the American baritone, uses an exceptionally fine voice to good purpose in such songs as "The Zuyder Zee" and "Dear little shamrock." Duncan and Godfrey furnish some really exquisite comedy acting in the Coster sketch, Me and 'Er, which is considered one of the best features of the programme, and appeals irresistibly to the galleryites. Mr. Jack Collinson and company treat us to a host of absurdities in The Cook's Guest, Mr. Collinson's ludicrous burlesque of Nero creating roars of laughter. Some interesting films are projected by the Edisonograph. Mr. Maurice Volny attends, in his usual able and courteous manner, to the comfort of the audience.

CAMBERWELL PALACE.

Among the most attractive items of the bill presented to excellent houses by Mr. P. A. Lennon is a sketch rejoicing in the title of When the Clock Went Wrong; or the Tale of a New-laid Egg. The trifle, which is ingeniously written by Mr. E. C. Matthews, is largely governed by the "Green-eyed Monster," and chiefly concerns a difference of opinion between husband and wife with regard to the age of an egg. A heated dispute takes place, and the wife leaves the house in a "pet." The husband interrogates an old Irish serving-man as to the whereabouts of his better half, and the Irishman, thinking he is referring to a clock which he has taken to be repaired, and to which he alludes in the feminine gender, gives him a circumstantial account of "her" departure with another man in order to be renovated, going into minute details as to the nature of the operations to be conducted in "her" interior. The confusion thus created may be imagined, and it is worked for all it is worth. The husband is furious, but his consternation is allayed by the return of the young wife, and reconciliation is attained when she announces that she has been to find out if the eggs were really fresh. The effect of the sketch, which is run through to the accompaniment of roars of laughter, is heightened by the natural way in which it is interpreted by the performers. Mr. E. C. Matthews, the veteran comedian, gives a racy rendering of the Irish servant, his humour being rich and spontaneous. As the jealous husband, Mr. Vernon Cowper, whose stalwart figure is peculiarly adapted to the part, works himself up into a state of frenzy that is very ludicrous, and the abortive efforts of the young man to control his feelings while listening to the harrowing account of the catastrophe which he imagines has befallen him are so naturally assumed as to add greatly to the effect of the production. Admirable support is rendered by a young lady whose name is not given on the programme, and the sketch is received with every token of favour.

Artistic contributors to the current bill are found in Diamond and Beatrice, the former of whom enters carrying a harp almost as tall as himself, and dancing in agile fashion to his own accompaniment. The lady then plays a solo in superb style on the clarionet, and afterwards joins her partner with the harp in a duet, which arouses enthusiastic recalls. Miss Hetty King includes in her refined and highly-finished male impersonations that of a sailor, and adds a hornpipe that has so many added graces as to make of it quite a saltatory achievement.

The light fantastic is also agreeably exploited by Miss Ray Maskell, whose high-kicking and fan dance, with which she supplements her song of "I'm so fascinating," carries out the refrain in its entirety, and obtains well-merited approbation. Mlle. Ameda does many wondrous feats of bending and foot equilibrism; and the songs, dances, and eccentricities of Billy McClain's sextette, which includes Madame Cordelia, are quite bewildering in their variety. Vernon's Bioscope has many films of humorous interest, the most diverting being the adventures of the drunken motorist; and the programme is contributed to by the old-renowned Edgar Granville; Mr. Harry Taft, whistling comedian; the De Breans, sciographists and jugglers; and Miss Effie Stuart, Scotch comedienne and dancer.

THE FORESTERS'.

The management of this admirably conducted hall well maintains its reputation for being quite up to date, for this week a special Limerick competition is held, the writer of the best last line of a verse supplied by Mr. Wal Pink with the programme being awarded 10s. Needless to say, the competition is proving a great draw. Mr. Lew Lake and his clever company are giving that mirth-provoking sketch, Bloomsbury Burglars, in which Messrs. Lake and Morris are seen to great advantage as Jerry and Nobbler. The finale is as exciting as ever, the tumbling of the policemen and principals from the house tops creating a sensation. Messrs. Edwards and Dacre, a talented couple, in the duologue What a Life, combine some clever dancing, comedy, tumbling, singing, &c., much to the admiration of an appreciative audience. Miss Leoni Dixon, a dainty comedienne, sings a pretty little song, "Mamie dear," which concludes with some neat steps, and her second item is a well-executed clog-dance. Miss Jennie Johns, the popular soubrette, gives "In the Isle of Anglesey" and "The Seaside Girl" in capital style, her powerful voice being greatly admired.

The Bros. Adderley supply a good number in The Officer's Servant, which consists of some capital singing and specialities, the imitation of a cornet as well as of an automatic piano being decidedly clever. Miss Lilian Lowe, ballad vocalist, renders in fine style "Oh, take my place" and "The song that reached my heart," her excellent voice and distinct articulation gaining for her a round of applause. Jerry and Leo provide a smart ventriloquial act, in which some witty jokes are cracked; while the singing of "Rocked in the cradle of the deep" at the finale is certainly clever. Miss Cissie Sinclair, an attractive descriptive vocalist, has a couple of pretty songs in "Just across the bridge of gold" and "Love me the same as in days gone by," which she sings admirably.

Flockton Foster's Sketch Company, in Ferdie's Ma-in-Law, is very entertaining. The story deals with the usual troublesome ma and henpecked husband. The son-in-law arrives from America with a wonderful animal freezing invention. His great ambition is to try it on human beings, but he experiences difficulty in obtaining a subject. The ma-in-law is eventually induced to submit herself to the freezing process, being told that it will cure her neuralgia. She, however, overhears the scheme for her extinction, and exchanges the fluid for water. After the preparation has been administered, the lady shams unconsciousness, during which time the father and son indulge in drink and cigars, which have been forbidden them before. After a time the husband thinks he would like his wife back again, so obtains two pails of hot water with the object of "thawing" her, but great is his consternation when he returns to find the subject quite herself again. The piece is highly amusing and well played. The bill is also contributed to by Raymond's Bio-tableaux, an interesting film being that of The Magnetic Man.

THE PALACE, EAST HAM.

Mr. Arthur J. Barclay is presenting here this week a programme that worthily maintains the reputation of this popular place of amusement, the several "turns" being exceptionally good and highly entertaining. Mr. Frederick Maxwell and his company in the sporting episode, Lord Harkaway, are received with unstinted applause. Mr. Maxwell depicts the title-rôle with a cheery manliness which quite wins the favour of the audience; Mr. Gerald Blake acts impressively the part of the unfortunate gambler, Richard Deane; and Mr. Charles Levey is eminently successful as Stuart Langdon. The character of Isaacs is made very diverting in the capable hands of Mr. Sam Harcourt; and a painstaking rendering of Grace Deane is given by Miss Louise Biddulph.

One of the prettiest turns seen at the Palace for some time is found in The Garden of Girls, submitted by Haley's selected company of juvenile vocalists and dancers. Some excellent statuesque dancing is witnessed, whilst descriptive songs and cake-walking are also to the fore, "Good-bye, dear old Scotland" being especially well applauded. The scenic effects of the production are brilliantly elaborate. Professor R. Dunning provides a very interesting performance of ventriloquialism, interspersed by several good witticisms. A notable feature of his entertainment is the song sung by one of his dolls in a box, the lid of which is continuously opened and shut, the sound of the voice being varied accordingly.

Mr. George Bendon, the white coon, quite catches the favour of the audience with his songs, "Lola" and "I won't be a white coon's slave." Some excellent dancing is provided by Miss Dolly Golden, her step dancing being very clever. The conjuring and second-sight performance of Kahn and Kahn are really wonderful, and prove highly interesting to their audience; and Billy French, the popular dancer, comes in for his usual warm reception. The singing of Miss Ida Brophy is well worthy of mention, the audience showing their hearty appreciation of her songs, "Alice, where art thou going?" and "I wish I were you." The entertainment concludes with some striking animated pictures by Ruffell's Imperial Bioscope.

AT THE ALBERT HALL, SWANSEA.
MODERN MIRACLES.
EXCITING SCENES.
A TRULY MARVELLOUS PERFORMANCE.

Truly wonderful was the verdict passed upon the hypnotic and magnetic exhibition given by Dr. Walford Bodie at the Albert, Swansea, on Monday evening. Never has anything of the kind been witnessed here like it previously. The whole performance is truly marvellous, and thousands will be attracted to the hall during the week. At the first "house" on Monday, Dr. Bodie operated upon a young man named Brinley Griffiths, twenty-two years of age, who had suffered from paralysis of the left leg, it was stated, since he was a year and four months old. When the subject was brought on the platform by the attendants, his leg, withered and lifeless, was exposed to the audience. It was explained that, with the aid of irons, he could only get along with the greatest difficulty. Ten minutes after his arrival on the platform Griffiths was enabled, after undergoing Dr. Bodie's magnetic treatment, to leave the stage unaided, exclaiming, with much delight, "I can now move my toes, a thing I could never do before." The audience, who were apparently astounded with the effect produced, cheered and applauded in the wildest manner. . . . It is really a marvellous performance, which we have no hesitation in again asserting will be attended by thousands this week. Of course, the doctor gives numerous other very remarkable exhibitions, amongst them being incarcerated in a cage with a death-dealing electrical voltage, and he offers anyone £1,000 who will remain in it for half a minute! He is one of the most brilliant of conversationalists, keeping his audience in the best of humour the whole of the time he occupies the platform, and is responsible for peal upon peal of laughter.—The Cambrian Daily Leader, Aug. 20.

PARALYTICS TREATED AT THE ALBERT HALL.
DR. WALFORD BODIE'S WONDERFUL DISPLAY.

Outside the Albert Hall, Swansea, this week are placed rows of weird-looking objects suggestive largely of an inquisitorial chamber of the Middle Ages. They are the straps and irons of once-paralysed "incurables" who have been successfully treated by Dr. Walford Bodie, and who have discarded their "implements of torture." This remarkable man has been engaged for a week by Mr. William Coutts, and after Monday's extraordinary performance the hall should be provided with elastic walls to hold the multitude in. Dr. Bodie, who is known as the "British Edison" and the "bloodless surgeon," is a personage of striking presence, and his appearance alone suggests the hypnotic expert he claims to be. Mr. Coutts is running two performances nightly, and Monday's attendances augur well for the week.—The South Wales Daily Post, Aug. 20.

"A WOMAN OF PARIS."

A Dramatic Sketch by Roy Milton,
Presented at the Middlesex Music Hall
on Monday, Aug. 19.

Vernon Black .....MR. ROY MILTON
Harry Hartley .....MR. D. G. MURRAY
Phédèle Lemoine .....MISS HELENE FOREST

This sketch was first produced at the Tivoli, Manchester, on July 4, and was there received with considerable favour. It certainly met with a good reception at the Middlesex on the evening of our visit. The plot tells of a starving young English student (Harry Hartley) in Paris, who has given way to the evil drug habit. Vernon Black desires to bring about the death of Hartley, in which criminal enterprise he hopes to obtain the assistance of Phédèle Lemoine, his mistress, and a woman apparently dead to all sense of decency and honour. Black, by threatening to disclose the particulars of a murder he alleges against her, compels her to agree to bring about Hartley's destruction. In the subsequent interview she discovers that the latter is her son, whom she had not seen since he was a baby. Her nobler motherly instincts are revived within her; she refuses to carry out the evil designs of Vernon Black, who dies suddenly as the result of heart-strain during an exciting quarrel. Miss Hélene Forest understands the art of the tragedienne, and enacts the rôle of the Woman from Paris with wonderfully realistic dramatic fervour. Mr. Roy Milton is a forceful villain, and Mr. D. G. Murray sustains in able fashion the quieter character of the young student.

THE thirty-third annual open-air fête, held under the auspices of the Shropshire Horticultural Society, took place in the Quarry Grounds, Shrewsbury, on Wednesday and Thursday. Mlle. Ada Marjutti contributed a graceful and accomplished pedestal bending act; the Brothers Webb, musical clowns, were clever and vastly amusing; the famed Prodeanie Family gave a most attractive, smart, and clever cycling turn; the Ergotti and King Louis troupe of acrobats worked hard and received well-merited plaudits; Lanos and Montes, acrobats, fully justified their place on the programme; the spirited and wonderfully agile Mohamed troupe of Souasa Arabs were exceptionally good; the three Decars and their donkey provided plenty of fun; the Brothers Horn gave a very comical boxing act; the Bounding Patterson's bar performance was one of the very best ever witnessed here, though not for the first time at this fête; Zaid Orienta and Hassan gave a very acceptable contortionist and gun drill display act; W. H. Hill on the high rope (with an evening performance amid fireworks) was a popular turn; and the Leo Tardy troupe of flying gymnasts were highly trained and exceedingly skilful.

VESTA TILLEY AT DERBY CASTLE.

HUNDREDS TURNED AWAY.

That Vesta Tilley is the most popular artist on the music-hall stage—or at least one of the most popular—was evidenced by the reception she received last night at Derby Castle. No other artist, and the best of them have been at Douglas, can draw the people like she does, and shortly after nine o'clock the turnstiles were closed, the huge Pavilion and Opera House being crowded. There are many attractions at the Castle, there being dancing from half-past seven, an excellent programme in the variety theatre commencing at eight, but it was Vesta Tilley whom the people had come to hear and see, and so eager were they indeed that half an hour before her turn in the ballroom they commenced to crowd round the stage, and the Lancers, which was the dance immediately before she appeared, could only be danced at the two ends furthest from the stage. The galleries were full, and the pavilion floor was one mass of people. She had a remarkably enthusiastic reception for her first song, and it was several minutes before she could proceed with it. Miss Tilley's first number was a new one, "When the right girl comes along," which promises to become as popular as any of her others. It is tuneful and tricky, and given in a style such as she alone can give it. Vesta Tilley has imitators, but none of them are anything approaching the original. The chorus of the song reads:—

When the right girl comes along,
Whether she's the girl from Anglesey, gay
Paree, or Zuyder Zee,
When her sweet lips you taste,
And your heart goes pom pom,
It does not want a mother to tell you what to do
When the right girl comes along.

Not much when read, it must be confessed; but when sang by Vesta Tilley it takes on wonderfully, and the audience soon picked it up and helped in the repeat chorus. "Jolly good luck to the girls who love the soldiers" followed. The song gives opportunity for some capital acting, and another burst of applause followed it. The "Seaside smile" was amusing, and a beautiful bouquet and a handsome basket of flowers were handed on to the stage. The audience were, however, by no means satisfied, and, as an encore, the popular song, "Following in father's footsteps," was given. Still the cry was "more," and, as another encore, "the favourite" of Vesta Tilley's songs, "The Piccadilly Johnny," was given. "Algy" has retained its popularity wonderfully, and a loud burst of applause followed it, and the artist was recalled several times. To sum up, a record house gave a record reception to, in the words of the advertisement, "Everybody's Idol." The management are going to have a grand week at the Castle.—Isle of Man Daily Times, Aug. 13, 1907.

THE PALACE.

For the last two seasons the management of The Palace Co. have arranged that Miss Vesta Tilley should appear at Derby Castle; and, the accommodation there not being so great as at The Palace, the consequence has been that many people have been unable to see this lady. This week the management decided to allow Miss Tilley to perform in The Palace. No one ever anticipated that The Palace would be crowded. Last night our representative arrived at The Palace about 7.30. On walking into the pavilion at that hour he was surprised to see the place as crowded as it is about ten o'clock on an ordinary night. On returning to the pavilion about nine-thirty he found the place packed. The gallery in the front, for which there was an extra charge, was evenmore so. The sides of the circle were the same, and the floor, more than halfway across, was also packed, dancing being almost impossible. There must have been near ten thousand persons present, all to see and hear their idol,

MISS VESTA TILLEY.

Miss Tilley is a young lady who has made "man" her special study. The "dandy" is not by any means her particular choice. She is equally at home in any costume that men wear. There are many so-called imitators of Miss Tilley, but there is only one "Tilley." The others are wretched imitations beside her, and they sink into significance. The management had large notices up requesting the audience to remain silent, but when she walked on the stage there was one huge cheer from such a crowd as, I feel sure, Miss Tilley had never faced before. She stood still and smiled, and the cheer died away, and there was a silence. To her it must have been a moment of most perfect happiness to see a crowd of ten thousand waiting and watching for her; and she deserved it. "The idol of two hemispheres" is the way in which the bills describe her; surely "The Tilley of the World" would be better. Her first costume was evening dress, with the latest of overcoats, everything perfect, neat, and refined. She sang "When the Right Girl comes along." Her walk, her actions were those of a boy just learning that he is a man. Time after time the people sang her chorus. In her next song she came up to perform she was a "soldier." It would be folly to attempt to describe it. Her acting as a "Tommy" was superb, splendid, whilst the chorus was sung twice by the audience. Her soldier song should be missed by no one; it is a piece of acting that there is no one able to attempt, much less imitate. Then she sang "Seaside Smile," in a white lounge suit. This song is meant to take the place of her last year's song, the "Seaside Sultan." It is a good song. Then she sang her old song, "Following in Father's Footsteps." She was better than ever in this—young and active, a schoolboy. She had yet to sing one of her first favourites, "Algy." Although this is an old song, the people love it, and it is always asked for. Dressed in a brown frock suit, a fancy vest, and patent leather boots, she was a picture. After this she could sing no more. The audience cheered and wanted more. If they had had their way Miss Tilley would have been there yet. She advanced to the footlights, and, in a few chosen words, she told them how tired she was and asked to be allowed to retire. She thanked them again and again, and although the audience did not like it, they allowed her to go. But when one sees "Tilley" one is not surprised at her success. She is perfection, and she does draw. To attract ten thousand is something to be proud of, and no one but Miss Tilley could do it.—Isle of Man Daily Times, Aug. 20, 1907.

THE DUKE AND DUCHESS OF DEVONSHIRE were present on Tuesday afternoon last at Murray King and Clark's "Dutch Dolls" Concert party, in the Devonshire Park Gardens, Eastbourne.

MR. EDITOR.—SIR,—In your report of Chappell's Concerts, Great Yarmouth, in last Saturday's Era, you mention us as Clgo and Rochelle; it should have been—Yours faithfully, CLYO AND ROCHELLE, Chappell's Concerts, Great Yarmouth, second season.

AT Wolverhampton recently Edward Harris, of Great Brickkiln-street, in that town, was charged with having in his possession for sale seventy-two copies of pirated music. The evidence showed that he was apprehended with the pirated music in his possession when leaving a railway station. The defendant was convicted of a similar offence last November, and he was now fined £5, or one month's hard labour. The Bench acceded to a request for the music to be sent to the Music Publishers' Association with the wrappers, in order that the sender might be traced.

SONGS, WRITERS, AND SINGERS.

YET another song, the sterling merit of the words of which has been enhanced by Herman R. Darewski, jun.'s fecund gift of melody, has been accepted for publication by Messrs. Francis and Day. It is entitled "It was only in fun that we met, little one," the words being by R. P. Westbarr.

AT noontide and in the glory of early morn all the world and his wife at Brighton have talked of little else during the current week but the "Twi-twi-light." Mr. George Lashwood, who opened at the Alhambra there on Monday last, after an enjoyable holiday on the Continent, has never had a great winner than the coming rage of the pantomimes, a "winner" written by Charles Wilmott, the writer whom Rider Haggard would probably name "The Man-who-Knows-How." Mr. Wilmott has been splendidly aided and abetted by H. E. Darewski, jun., whose flowing cadences everywhere with the "man in the street" are as "familiar in the mouth as household bread," as Mrs. Malaprop would say.

MISS MINNIE MACK, a charming young artist who is forging ahead, and who will be seen—and heard of—in a great London "annual" this coming Christmas, will shortly essay, it is probable, a coon song by the composer of "In the Valleys of Switzerland."

MANY of Mr. David Day's staff are holiday making just now. It is popularly believed, and is true, that Mr. Lester Barrett, of the cheery smile and the imperturbable temper, has gone to see if the glorious Roses of Lancaster still rear their proud heads on his native heath; that Mr. Fred Leigh is hob-nobbing with "the men who never turn back" at Caister; and that Leonard Bellamy, to whom Paul Cinquevalli is as a helpless infant when it comes to balancing accounts, is weighing up the beauties of Weymouth.

SARGA'S song, "Home, how it thrills!" which was sung at his concert at Queen's Hall by Mme. Ada Crossley with such great success, was played last Sunday at Hyde Park by the magnificent band of H.M. Irish Guards, and received a spontaneous encore. It will be also played by this band at Southend and Bournemouth during next week, and on Sept. 3 at Earl's Court Exhibition.

PANTOMIME producers with a view to songs capable of picturesque settings have long had an eye on Messrs. Francis and Day's "Pansy," and Miss Isabel Dillon's delightful rendering of the number at the South London during the week has clinched what the finale shall be of many a gorgeous scene next Boxing Night.

MR. CHARLES KAY'S successful song, "A Muddled Melody," written and composed by himself, has just been purchased by B. Feldmann and Co., 3 and 4, Arthur Street, Oxford Street, W. It has been a big success everywhere in London and on the Stoll tour.

MESSRS. PRICE AND REYNOLDS have recently purchased a song entitled "I don't think it would be possible to find a nicer little girl than you." The words are by A. E. Sidney Davis, author of "Au Revoir, My Little Hyacinth," and the melody by John Neat. Mr. Walter Reynolds anticipates this being one of the big principal boy and girl songs of the year, as it is suitable for solo or duet.

GEORGE LASHWOOD, who has had a holiday, returned on Monday to the Brighton Alhambra, where he was accorded a very enthusiastic reception. His new song, "Oh! the Merry Widow," caught on at once, the bright rhythm, catchy chorus, and witty dialogue keeping the large audience on the "qui vive" from start to finish. The modern Beau Brummel has scored another great success. Pantomime-singing comedians should secure this number early from the Star Music Co.

HOWARD HARTMAN has written four Japanese numbers, "The Nightingale," "Simple John Chinaman," "Fantanee," and "Mimosa San," which are being featured by Miss May Clifton and company at the Middlesex next week. Mr. Hartman is appearing as "Simple John Chinaman."

A CONTINUED and steady increase in the popularity—and sales—of Mills and Scott's "Sailing in my Balloon" is reported from the New York branch of Messrs. Francis and Day, who, as is well known, are the American agents of the Star Music Publishing Co. and other British firms of repute.

A NEW number of a "dame" nature, from the pen of Mr. Harry Lauder, entitled "He was very, very kind to me," which will be sung by the eminent comedian, has been secured by Mr. David Day's firm, in addition to "Rob Roy McIntosh," which has already been placed on the market by the same house.

T. W. CONNOR has disposed of to Messrs. Francis and Day two songs of which great things are expected—to wit, "He was One of the Boys," sung by Miss Carlotta Levey, and "It's a Poor Heart that never Rejoices," sung by Miss Maud Mortimer.

ONE of the daintiest artists with a distinctive style of her own opens at the Palace on Monday in the person of Miss Eileen Douglas. The lady is fortunate in possessing new numbers by Fred Leigh and Henry E. Pether, notably one entitled "The Musical Comedy Girl."

MR. HERBERT RULE has been causing the heartiest laughter from the vast audiences at the Holborn Empire during the current week with the comic song from his own pen entitled "I've been a Lodger Myself."

THE countless pedestrians in Charing Cross-road, few, if any, of whom ever pass by Messrs. Francis and Day's attractive windows without stopping to gaze therein, have during the past few days been tempted to yet further linger to admire the magnificent specimen of the limner's art on vellum now on view, a permanent record, signed by the principals of certain music-publishing firms of Great Britain, designed to express their appreciation of yeoman service done by Mr. F. H. Pedgrift in the matter of suppression of music piracy. The vellum, which is illuminated with a cunning which recalls the gorgeous ancient missals in the Bodleian Library, has been executed by Mr. Harry Leighton, the well-known song-writer.

A MATCH between the Terriers and George Gray's V.C., company was played at Freeman's Grounds, Champion Hill, on Wednesday. The Terriers, who won the toss, took first innings, and some fine cricket was witnessed. The jolly dogs were represented by Capt. Ben. Woodger, Tony Pearson (who made top score with bat, and took eight wickets), W. Watson, T. Martin, Frank Hurst, W. Norris, Langley, A. Sheers, J. Young, sen., A. Charles, and A. Chapman. For George Gray's V.C. Company, Capt. E. Beecher, R. M. Taylor (top scorer, with many boundary hits), Harry Softly, R. Purdie, Will Bayley, T. Hughes, A. Eagle, Onley, Grainger, Harold, and Gough. The scores were: Terriers, 166; George Gray's V.C. Company, 131. The return match will be played at the same grounds on Wednesday, Sept. 4.

"THE MAJOR'S MIDDY."

A New and Original Musical Comedy-Sketch, by George D. Fox, produced at the Empire, Camberwell, on Monday, Aug. 22.

Fred Harrington .....Mr. C. Le Brun
Augustus Hincks .....Mr. E. Millins
Colonel Marler .....Mr. F. Thatcher
Major Mathison .....Mr. H. Morton
Phœby .....Miss Zeta Murduch
Gladys Maitland .....Miss Lizette Kitchen

Set in two scenes, this brought and merry little musical comedy captured the "hearts" and "hands" of Messrs. Jesse Sparrow and Harry Bawn's patrons here on Monday, and throughout the week crowded houses at each performance have heartily endorsed the favourable impression then created. Miss Lizette Kitchen and her excellent company deserve warm praise for their untiring efforts, and the work of the chorus is admirable. In the first scene, at the Cherry-tree Hotel, Fred Harrington, the accepted lover of Gladys Maitland, arrives in hot haste, trying to elude the persistent attentions of a sheriff's officer. Fortunately he has provided himself with a disguise, and soon reappears as a pretty girl. Gladys Maitland has arranged to meet her lover here, but her guardian, Colonel Marler, hearing of this, follows her, and, to hide her identity, Gladys dons the uniform of a midshipman. Before the lovers can exchange confidences a Major Mathison arrives at the hotel to meet a nephew, whom he has never seen, and, seeing a young midshipman, thinks this is his relative, and carries him off home. The colonel arrives in search of his ward, and coming across Fred disguised as a girl, forcibly takes him to a room; but Fred is equal to the emergency, and escapes, locking the colonel in the apartment. Augustus Hincks, a lawyer's clerk, also puts in an appearance in search of Fred Harrington; but Fred, in his female attire, easily hoodwinks him.

In the second scene, at Major Mathison's house, all the characters turn up—Fred in search of Gladys, Hincks in search of Fred, and the colonel in search of his ward. After many complications everything is explained, and Fred finds that Hincks is the bearer of the news that his uncle has died and has left him heir to £15,000.

Most of the work falls to the share of Miss Lizette Kitchen as Gladys Maitland. Her male impersonation is smart and distinctly clever, and her mellow voice and bright and humorous style win all hearts. Mr. C. Le Brun makes a charming girl; Mr. E. Millins is decidedly funny as Augustus Hincks, and his love passages with Miss Zeta Murduch as the sprightly and pert maid, Phœby, create roars of merriment. Mr. H. Morton as the Major and Mr. F. Thatcher as the Colonel are decidedly good. The music is bright and sparkling, and The Major's Middy is a success.

In the current bill are Frank Esmond and Miss Edith Evelyn in a merry skit, entitled The Express Baby; Royston Keith and company in a waiting-room absurdity, All Change Here; the Alberto Troupe of male and female acrobats and hand-balancers; Rosa Adams, a bright soubrette; the Brothers Lawrence, good dancers; Stave, with his electrical comedy act; the Lorrisons, "crazy duo"; Bessie Lind, chic and smart; Harry Conlin, quaint and humorous; and Jeapes' splendid animated pictures.

BARNARD'S, GREENWICH.

Mr. Bert Dent must once again be congratulated on having secured a capital programme, and his patrons testified to their satisfaction by greeting the various turns with loud and prolonged applause. One of the chief items of interest is the appearance of Swan and Vesta in their musical comedy, In Nelson's Days, in the opening scene of which the artists are attired in dresses of the period. The lady afterwards appears as a comedy sailor, and still later in burlesque array. The songs, particularly "Beautiful story," "Not yet," and "Captain of the ship," are all excellent, as is the dancing, business, and dialogue of this clever couple. The Court dresses worn in the sketch are handsome and costly, and the success of the trifle is instant and complete.

The Morton Comedy company contribute a welcome turn, consisting of well-rendered songs, glees, and refined comedy. Harry Gallimore is a clever character-actor and a good vocalist, and made a hit with his songs, "You're another" and "Two Girls." Philip Levard and company appear with success in a well-acted little sketch, entitled The Cypher of Love. The Sisters Herbert, charming juvenile artists, are warmly applauded for their dances and coon songs, entitled respectively "Ashantee" and "I've got a feelin' for you"; and the D'Alvos add some novel and effective business to their singing of "Wilym Wilson," and arouse unstinted applause.

Miss Marie Blythe is the possessor of a fine contralto voice, which she uses to great advantage in "Keepsakes" and "With you"; Archy Crag makes a hit with "Happy little missis" and "Funny little face"; and Miss Jessica is another clever juvenile who sings prettily "Barney," "Only me," and "Song birds." The Morton Trio are warmly applauded in "Excelsior" and "Dear little shamrock," and some ingenious paper-tearing and well-executed dancing are an agreeable diversion in their successful entertainment. A couple of acceptable extra turns are presented in Mr. Fred Wall, who can sing a good song, and in Miss Celia Prince, with "Carolina." Ruffell's Imperial Bioscope exhibits some capital pictures, including the Launch of H.M.S. Bellerophen, The Gipsy's Bride, and Where's the Drummer?

The marvellous Brothers Howard were, at a late hour on Saturday, by the use of the telephone and kindness of the management who held contracts for them to open on Monday enabled to accept the special re-engagement offered to them by Mr. J. W. Nightingale, at the Britannia Pier, Great Yarmouth. The Howards, who had been engaged there in opposition to the Zancigs appearing in Yarmouth, achieved such an exceptional success that Mr. Nightingale, at almost double salary, secured them for one week longer. The same astonishing success has followed the re-bookings, and business has been phenomenal.

La Belle Otero has caused it to be known that she requires a monkey. She is to appear at the Folies-Marigny in a new piece by Edward Le Roy, with music by Leo Pouget, and is to play the rôle of a Bohemian. The character, according to Mme. Otero, will not be complete without a monkey.

Mr. J. Cooke Beresford has succeeded in obtaining a sensible reduction for insurance against "third party risks." He has not, however, given up the stage, as he is at present appearing every evening at the Palace Theatre with Mr. Courtice Pounds in Charles—His Friend.

The artists engaged for next week's Café Chantant in the North Tower Gardens of the Crystal Palace will include the Stavordale Quintette in their banjo and harp speciality, introducing three distinct styles of banjo playing; Ethel Hilary, American coon comedian and dancer; Stuart and Stuart, eccentric entertainers and dancers; Georgina Morris, vocalist; and Bishop and Vale, comedy acrobats and dancers.

Mary Norton, 60, charwoman, pleaded guilty at Southwark Police-court last week to stealing a quantity of clothing belonging to Kitty Bell, who described herself as an American coon artist. Miss Bell identified as hers the property produced by Detective-sergeant Gale, M Division, who had recovered it from various pawnbrokers, with whom it had been pledged by the prisoner. Mr. Rose said it was a cruel robbery of a young girl, and ordered the prisoner a month's hard labour.

THE PALACE.

The large audience at the Palace on Monday evening did not fail to show their interest in the news of Miss Denise Orme's marriage to the Hon. John Yarde-Buller, only son and heir of Lord Churston, and when she sang to her own accompaniment at the piano the words "Whatever should a bashful maiden do? Which way shall I answer, No or Yes?" a stentorian voice from the gallery shouted: "Answer Yes." The words quoted are from the song of her own composition, which is entitled "One little word," in which she displays no little gift of melody. Another favourite item in her répertoire is Edward German's "Love the pedlar," but she wins her greatest success in Braga's "Angels' Serenade," in which she plays the violin obbligato. Miss Orme's personal charm has been sufficiently commented on, and if we say she looks particularly sweet in a clinging robe of light blue satin, we shall not be accused of exaggeration in our praise of so lovely a specimen of English girlhood.

Another recruit from the musical comedy stage is Miss Violet Lloyd, who immediately precedes Miss Orme in Mr. Alfred Butt's scheme of amusement. Miss Lloyd is a bewitching comedienne, as one easily discovers in her saucy rendering of "My little Kate," a chorus girl besieged with attentions from the Johnnies at the stage-door. There is a sense of character in all that Miss Lloyd does, and she should be a distinct acquisition to the variety stage. Miss Jennie Johns, too, another vocalist who possesses the gift of comedy, is adding to the number of her admirers nightly by the chic and piquancy of her interpretation of some excellent numbers.

El Trio Tampico, talented troubadours, consist of a fiddler, a guitarist—both dressed in the costume of a Mexican caballero—and a lady pianist, who incidentally shows her versatility by an imitation of Miss Marie Lloyd in her well-known song, "Tiddly-om-pom." The violinist plays with excellent technique and tone the well-known Nocturne of Chopin; and the guitarist, playing a superior type of mouth-organ to his own accompaniment, gives a pot-pourri of airs, including excerpts from Faust and ancient and modern ballads. The reception of the trio is distinctly favourable.

Les Fleury Duo have rapidly increased in popularity with audiences here. A very striking impersonation is M. Fleury's imitation-parodie of Coquelin in his famous impersonation of Cyrano de Bergerac, the hero of Edmond Rostand's famous poetic play; and another intensely droll touch is the immediate recovery of the great Sarah—parodied by Mme. Fleury—from the fatal illness afflicting La Dame aux Camélias, at the sight of the medal of the Legion d'Honneur dangled before her eyes. Mme. Fleury is also responsible for an exceedingly clever skit on Yvette Guilbert.

The Palace Girls are here again in new frocks from Paris, and with an entirely new répertoire, and their business and dancing prove as engaging as ever. The Bioscope is responsible for a most striking series of pictures of the motor race for the Grand Prix at Dieppe, and the exclusive films taken by permission of the Duke of Richmond and Gordon are also highly appreciated. We have already noticed Charles, His Friend, which is running nightly to an accomanimpent of laughter and applause. Mr. Tatten Hall, comedian, who is fulfilling his first engagement at the Palace, does well in his songs; and Walter H. Kelly, the Virginia judge, patters very amusingly.

WOOLWICH HIPPODROME.

The leading feature in an attractive programme for the current week is Mr. Fred Ginnett's Daily Mirror Army Boys, who are all mounted on ponies and uniformed and equipped in true military fashion. Although not a particular novelty in this war-like town, where army manœuvres are of frequent occurrence, still they obtain a warm reception. Well-merited favours are bestowed upon the Stavordale Quintette in their banjo and harp speciality. In the usual style of playing they show great command of the instruments. Shirley and Ransome in a sketch, entitled 'Arf a quid, show to great advantage. A young married couple are represented in somewhat poor circumstances. The husband has lent his brother-in-law "'arf a quid," and not expecting to get it back, quarrels with his wife concerning it, but she not wishing to have a disagreement, gives up all her savings, which amount to ten shillings. The husband eventually admits that the loan had nothing to do with his wife, and makes her a present of a "quid," so all ends happily. The sketch affords an opportunity for these clever actors to distinguish themselves both in humour and pathos, and hearty applause greets their efforts. Much merriment is caused by Mr. Victor Courtney in Boots at the Piano, his playing on that instrument and mimicry being of a high order. Geoffery and Benson produce some lively moments in a comedy sketch, Spoofed, in which the husband, who is taking part in some private theatricals, complains with much heat that his wife, who is also in the cast, is totally devoid of dramatic talent. The wife, to prove her capabilities, disguises herself as an Irish maid-of-all-work, and makes love to her own husband during the supposed absence of her mistress, and not until she removes the disguise is he made aware that he has been "spoofed." The sketch is vigorously played, and is accorded a hearty welcome. Mr. George Brooks is a comedian of merit, his songs, "Down where the seaweed grows" and "There is a happy land, far far, away," are greeted with much laughter. Miss Bertha Winder is a clever exponent of clog dancing; the "clatter of her little wooden shoes," being exceptionally crisp, gains the reward that is due. Miss Ethel Sanders has a well-trained soprano voice, which she uses to the best advantage in the songs, "Green Isle of Erin" and the "Carnival," both songs being well rendered. The Imperial Bioscope, portraying "Chain Making" and the "Dieppe Circuit," brings the entertainment to a fitting conclusion.

Miss Bessie Butt, owing to prior provincial bookings, has been obliged to terminate her brief but most successful engagement at the Tivoli, where she has scored with "Cherries are blooming." Miss Butt's dancing has been quite one of the features of the entertainment at the Strand house.

Mr. Harold Montague, who has won fame through his vaudeville combination known as The Vagabonds, has suffered a severe loss in the death of his father, which took place at Malvern.

At the Halifax Borough Court on Saturday, Walter Wood, labourer, of no fixed abode, was charged with being in possession of pirated music. Detective-sergeant Moss deposed that at 8.15 that morning he was on duty near the railway station in Horton-street when he saw the prisoner with a parcel in his possession. He stopped him and wanted to know what the parcel contained, when Wood replied, "Oh! it's 'swank.'" The witness took him to the police station, and had the parcel opened in the accused's presence. It was found to contain sixty-seven copies of pirated music. The prisoner now pleaded guilty, said he was sorry, and asked to be given another chance. A fine of £5 and costs was imposed, or one month's imprisonment.

Brock's Benefit will take place at the Crystal Palace on Sept. 5. On the same day the National Dahlia Show will commence, and the Surrey Beekeepers' Annual Show.

At the Cambridge matinées are to be given on Mondays instead of Thursdays. The change will be inaugurated on Monday next.

"THE JEW REVOLUTIONIST."

A Russian Episode, written by John Jackson. music by Ferdinand Staub, produced at the Paragon on Monday, Aug. 19.

David Singer .....Mr. M. D. Waxman
Abraham Feinstein.....Mr. C. J. Forster
Capt. Marinhaff.....Mr. E. C. Courtney
Theresa.....Miss Queenie Harvey
Marian..... .....Miss Violet Nava
Bertha Feinstein.....Madame Fanny Waxman

The above new dramatic and sensational Russian episode in three scenes was produced at the fine variety theatre in the Mile End-road on Monday. It is both interesting in the matter of its story and thrilling in its incidents, and is besides finely staged. The scene opens in the drawing-room of a certain Abraham Feinstein (a wealthy merchant), it being the occasion of the betrothal of his daughter Bertha to David Singer. During the evening Abraham learns that the man who is to marry his daughter is a famous revolutionist who has murdered the previous police prefect. On the arrival of David he is taxed by his future father-in-law with the advocacy of revolutionary ideas. David is proud of his principles, and explains that he still means to continue to urge the people to revolt against the wicked laws and officials that govern his country. In the midst of a song (capitally sung by one of the visitors) the Police Prefect and men arrive with a warrant for Singer, who hides. The house is searched, and a bundle of papers brought forward. The papers are supposed to have been found in the daughter's boudoir, in which there is a letter from the revolutionist. Bertha is therefore arrested as an accomplice. The papers are false, however, having been brought by the Prefect with the object of obtaining money from the wealthy father. There is a good scene in the Prefect's quarters when he sends for the prisoner, who asks when she is to take her trial. He tells her it may be months or years, but if she is willing to live with him as his mistress he will help her. She scorns the proposal, and as a result is ordered ten lashes with the knout; but the arrival of David Singer in disguise as a special messenger from the Czar secures Bertha's release, and the Prefect is brdered to be publicly lashed. All the characters are well played, Mr. and Mrs. Waxman working admirably together.

WATER RATS' OUTING.

SUNDAY, AUG. 18.

That genial fraternity the Water Rats had their annual outing up the river on Sunday, when at 9.45 a party of about sixty entrained at Waterloo for Windsor. The rain pelted down during the journey by rail, but happier weather conditions prevailed when the rodents and their friends reached the Royal Borough. They boarded the launch His Majesty about 11 o'clock, and the journey through the beautiful reaches by Maidenhead and Cookham, including the lovely district of Cliveden, afforded glimpses of delightful riparian scenery for which our London river is famous. With the chief comedy merchants of the halls on board, fun ruled the proceedings early in the day, and was continuous; and in the pleasant promotion of hilarity the McNaughtons, Wilkie Bard, Fred Griffiths, Mr. Hal Forde, and Harry Tate were among the chief conspirators. Luncheon was taken on board, the catering being entrusted to Mr. Charles Pratt, of the Rodney, Westminster Bridge-road. The claims of charity were not forgotten, and Mrs. Fred Ginnett collected on board the sum of £2 1s. for the Music Hall Ladies' Guild. During the day Mr. Paul Cinquevalli was busy with his camera. Among the party were Mr. and Mrs. Paul Cinquevalli, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Ginnett, Mrs. F. Ginnett's mother, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Griffiths, Miss Lutie Griffiths, Mr. and Mrs. Wilkie Bard, Miss Daisy Stratton, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Reece, Mr. and Mrs. George D'Albert, Mr. and Mrs. Seth Egbert, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Maple, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Tate, Tom and Fred McNaughton, W. H. Clemart, Jack Lotto, Walter Stanton, Tom Costello, Tom Costello, jun., Albert Egbert, Miss L. Avalo, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. McCarthy, Mr. and Mrs. Hal Forde, Mr. and Mrs. Bert Gilbert, Mr. and Mrs. Will Johnson, Dave Carter, Harry Masters, Hugh J. Didcott, George Ginnett, H. Kennedy, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Levy, Mrs. Levy, sen., Mr. and Mrs. Myers, W. Talbot, Ernest Lee, Mr. Jacobus and three friends, J. C. Dillistone, C. C. Bartram, Charles Berte, Miss Ena Soutar, Miss Dora Fraser, Mrs. A. Fraser, Mr. and Mrs. Harris, Mr. and Mrs. Lees, Harry Sutch, and Mr. and Mrs. Paul Martinetti.

Mr. Tom Woottwell caught a cold and had to give up at the Oxford and Ealing last week. He thereupon jumped into his car, and, with Mrs. Woottwell, is touring the South Coast for a fortnight. They are not having the best of weather—too many showers. They arrived at Portsmouth on Sunday, and are visiting Brighton, reaching home to-morrow (Sunday).

Miss Mollie Seymour, who has been booked by her agents, Messrs. G. and F. Peel, until the end of 1908, is well endowed for a stage career, being not only a chic comedienne, but a talented violinist. Versatility and vivacity in her case are happily allied.

Miss May Clifton, who will be at the Middlesex with her company next week, has been ill for two months.

OLD ASTLEY'S.

In the year 1770, says Mr. H. Barton Baker in his "History of the London Stage," one Philip Astley, formerly a trooper, who had greatly distinguished himself in action, and who had always a great fancy for breaking in and training horses, took upon a lease a piece of waste ground near the foot of Westminster Bridge, and opened what he called a riding-school, though it was really a circus; there was a ring in the centre open to the sky, and seats all round ranged under a canvas roof; the prices of admission were threepence and sixpence. At first he performed without a licence, and proceedings were instituted against him by the Surrey magistrates. One day, however, the King happened to be passing over Westminster Bridge upon a horse that proved unmanageable; Astley, who was looking on, came forward to His Majesty's assistance, and soon rendered the beast docile, for which service he was a few days afterwards rewarded with a licence in due form.

In 1780 he erected a wooden building, with gallery, pit, and boxes, out of the old Covent Garden hustings, which has just been used for an election; this débris was the perquisite of anybody who chose to remove it, and was usually made into a bonfire by the mob to celebrate the return of the successful candidate. Astley offered gin and beer to those who would bring him the wood instead of burning it, and therewith built his new Amphitheatre. The interior being decorated so as to resemble an avenue of trees, it was called the "Royal Grove." The prices ranged from two shillings to sixpence. The entertainments consisted of performing dogs, tumbling, and feats of horsemanship. In 1787 he added burlettas and pantomime. Seven years later the building was burned to the ground. In less than seven months a new one rose in its place. In 1803 this was also destroyed by fire. Without losing a day the sturdy old trooper set about raising a successor. Morning, noon, and night, in snow and rain, drilling his workmen as though they were a troop of soldiers, he personally superintended the work, as he did later on in Wych-street, until all was completed. The new house opened on Easter Monday, 1804, with, for the first time, an equestrian spectacle, though, as will be presently shown, he was not the originator of the kind of dramatic exhibition, for which the house was thereafter to be famous.

After having erected in France, Great Britain, and Ireland no fewer than nineteen amphitheatres, Astley died in 1814. He was succeeded by his son, who had been for some years the actual manager. Young Astley was a famous rider, and created such an impression in Paris that Marie Antoinette presented him with a gold medal encrusted with diamonds, and gave him the name of the English Rose, a very high honour, as it placed him beside the greatest of male dancers, Vestris, who was called the French rose. In 1817 he relinquished his government in favour of Davis, who had been in partnership with him some years, and the theatre was rechristened "Davis's Amphitheatre." Under Davis the equestrian spectacles were produced on a more extensive scale. One, The Blood-Red Knight, brought in £18,000 to the treasury; The Battle of Waterloo, and The Burning of Moscow, in which an actor named Gomersal—the one whom Colonel Newcome was so struck with—made an immense hit by his portraiture of Napoleon, which drew all London over Westminster Bridge.

To Davis succeeded the famous Andrew Ducrow, perhaps the greatest rider that was ever seen upon the equestrian stage, as well as the most perfect of pantomimists.

Ducrow was noted for a profound contempt for the literary part of the drama. "Cut the dialect (dialogue) and come to the 'osses," was his favourite direction. During the rehearsal of an equestrian piece one morning, after listening with growing impatience to a long dialogue between the two leading actors, he at last broke in with:

"Hold hard, gentlemen; here's a deal o' cackle without any good in it. I'll show you how to cut it. You say, 'Yield thee, Englishman!' Then you (indicating the other) answer 'Never!' Then you say 'Obstinate Englishman, you die.' Then you both fights. There, that settles the matter; the audience will understand you a deal better, and the poor 'osses won't catch cold while you're jawing."

Bunn relates the following anecdote of this eccentric genius. Ducrow, loquitur: "I don't know how you find it, but as soon as I put up the last nights of the season, the beggars begin to give themselves airs. I went to the theatre the other night, and seeing a prime little roasting pig on a nice white napkin in the hall, I told someone to take it upstairs to Mrs. Ducrow. The fellow said it wasn't for me, but for Mr. Roberts. He's the chap, you know, as orders the corn for the 'osses; I'm only the chap as pays for it. Then them confounded carpenters sneak in of a morning with their hands in their pockets, doubled up as though they'd got the cramp, and at night they march out as upright as a dart. 'Cos why? Every one of 'em's got a deal plank up his back. Then the supers, every one of 'em, takes out a lump o' coal in his hat, and they all club their priggings together and sell the lot for drink. As to the riders, they come into rehearsal gallows grand, 'cos they've had all the season a precious deal better salary than they're worth; and at night they come in gallows drunk and, fogetting they may want an engagement next year, are as cheeky as a bit of Billin'sgate."

Although so illiterate that he seldom ventured upon a speaking part, however small, Ducrow's taste and talent as a stage manager in contrasting colours and arranging groups was unrivalled. Nor was his reputation confined to the Westminster Amphitheatre, it was world-famous. In Paris, while performing at Franconi's, the Duchesse d'Angoulême presented him with a gold medal; after the run of one of his pageants at Drury Lane, St. George and the Dragon, Queen Adelaide presented him with a hundred pounds, and Count D'Orsay with a pair of gilt pistols and a dirk mounted in ivory and gold.

Astley's has been imortalised by Dickens in The Old Curiosity Shop, and the name always calls up memories of the visit of Kit Nubbles, Mrs. Nubbles, Barbara, and little Jacob. And Thackeray associates it with Colonel Newcome.

In 1841 the Amphitheatre was again destroyed by fire, and his losses, amounting to £20,000, so preyed upon Ducrow's mind as to cause his death a few months afterwards. The house was rebuilt by Batty, who changed the name to Batty's Amphitheatre.

After Batty came the well-known circus manager, William Cooke. Cooke turned Macbeth and Richard III. into equestrian dramas, and made White Surrey a leading part.

In 1863, Dion Boucicault, with a loud flourish of trumpets, supposed to be a warning note of coming destruction to all West End managers, converted the famous old Amphitheatre into the Theatre Royal, Westminster, but the result was a miserable failure. His most notable production was a version of The Heart of Midlothian, which Miss Marriott played for years afterwards at Sadler's Wells and throughout the country. In the following year, under the management of the ubiquitous E. T. Smith, the old house returned to its former ways. It was in the October of 1864, the famous Ada Isaac Menken made her first appearance here as Mazeppa. For a number of nights she actually accomplished what Mr. Boucicault had threatened to do—brought fashionable London across Westminster Bridge. For many years afterwards the house was under George Sanger's management. It was closed in 1895, and a row of shops now covers the site.

FILM GOSSIP.

Charles Urban Trading Co., Ltd.

Accidents Will Happen is a rattling good comical subject just published by Messrs. Urban. It is an animated pictorial comment on the new Employers' Liability Act. Mr. Boffles, a householder, has neglected to insure his servants against accidents. Then, with all the irony of fate, every paid member of his household gets injured. The footman teases a fox-terrier, is bitten in the leg, and is taken indoors for treatment. As the gardener is nailing up the Virginia creeper the Boffles family place pillows and cushions at the base of the ladder to break any possible fall, but the gardener falls clear of the cushions and is also carried indoors for medical attention. The housemaid, in cleaning the windows, falls to the ground, is injured, and joins the other victims; Boffles, in a rage, kicks the page boy down the stairs—another patient for the doctor. Thus we see Boffles's drawing-room converted into a casualty ward, and Boffles himself ruined after compensating his domestics, and he, along with his wife, solicits the sympathy of the charitable with a notice tied round his neck which says that he has been brought to this unhappy pass by the new Act.

A particularly realistic Urban series is that entitled The Yellowstone National Park (U.S.A.) and its Geysers. In this we are shown wonderfully vivid pictures of the natural eruptions of numerous geysers, or boiling springs, which throw to a tremendous height columns of steam in fantastic and picturesque fashion. Thus we see the Minute Man, the Constant, Black Growler, Old Faithful, Fountain, and Castle geysers in grand display. Other scenes show us the great falls of the Yellowstone, herds of buffalo, close views of the bison, bears roaming in freedom, etc.

A Piece of Limburger Cheese is a production upon which the Urban company may congratulate itself. A city man unconsciously and generously distributes the odour of the Limburger luxury amongst his clients, partners, travelling companions, neighbours, and everybody he meets during his day in the city. The facial workings of the Limburger victims are comical in the extreme as the smell gradually evidences itself. Suspicion, disgust, flight, are apparent on the one hand, and a show of surprise, injury, and innocent amazement on the other. A dishevelled and marked man presents himself at the end of the day to his affectionate wife, and the cause of the trouble is suddently found in the grinning children.

Vitagraph Company.

A rollickingly humorous Vitagraph film is to be found in "The Boy, the Bust, and the Bath." The scene of this comedy is laid in a boarding-house, a millinery shop occupying the first floor. The milliner is a very pretty young widow, who is courted by all the gentlemen in the house, two of them a near-sighted parson and a stout old colonel. Both propose to her, but are rejected, and are also somewhat marred by the action of the bad boy of the house, who shoots at them with a putty-blower while they are making their declarations. In the milliner's shop is a wax bust which closely resembles the milliner herself. The bad boy has an idea. He runs away with the bust and, going up the stairs, places it in the bath tub; then retires to a near-by doorway to watch for results. In a few moments the stout old colonel emerges from his room, dressed in his bath-robe, with towels over his arm, evidently about to take a bath. He opens the door of the bath-room, and immediately beats a hasty retreat on catching a glimpse of what he supposes is the young milliner in the bath-tub. Outside the door he pauses, and then bending down, peeps through the keyhole. While in this position the bad boy sneaks up from behind and sticks the colonel with a pin. The victim jumps several feet into the air, and then, ashamed at being caught peeping through the keyhole, gives the boy a dollar to keep quiet. A few moments later the near-sighted old parson starts for the bathroom; he opens the door, enters, closes the door, hangs up his towels, and in feeling around to turn on the water suddenly touches the hair of the bust. Peering closer, he, too, discovers what is apparently a young lady, and makes a hasty and undignified exit from the bathroom. He also, like the colonel, goes outside, pauses, then realising his near-sightedness, he runs back to his room and returns with a small telescope, which he applies to the keyhole. The mischievous boy catches him in the act, and the parson also buys the boy's secrecy with a dollar. His scheme having worked so well, the boy now enters the bathroom, picks up the bust, and waiting until he hears footsteps approaching down the hall, protrudes the head of the bust out of the bathroom door. The colonel and the parson both happen to be passing; they see the blonde hair and pink cheeks of the supposed milliner, and both dodge back into their own room. The boy draws back the head of the bust and then slowly puts it out again. This game of bo-peep continues for some time; then the boy, thinking the coast is clear, emerges from the bathroom carrying the bust in his arms. The two old gentlemen perceive him, and, realising how they have been fooled, rush out, grab the boy, carry him into the bathroom, and souse him in the bath-tub, which is full of water. The plot of this very funny picture is exceedingly ingenious, and every scene is comical in the extreme. The length is 425ft.

Pathe Freres.

A Pair of Boots, Please, is an exceedingly entertaining Pathé film. A thief steals the hunting boots belonging to a guest at an hotel, and as the guest seemingly is anxious to join his friends on some sporting expedition, he sends one of the hotel servants to the local bootmakers. One of these tradesmen brings a selection of foot apparel to choose from. The customer finds that one pair is fairly suitable, but the right boot will require a slight alteration. The bootman takes the right boot away, leaving the other. Almost immediately afterwards there enters another bootmaker with his samples. A pair of boots is selected, and the left boot of a pair just wants a little stretching to render it easy of wear, so is taken away, the right boot being left behind. Having a boot for each foot which is wearable, the customer doesn't wait for the return of the bootmen, but goes off with the odd pair. When the tradesmen return an amusing scene occurs as they realise that the purchaser has not waited for them.

Another laughable Pathé picture is the Stilt Race, which depicts a crowd of men and women running through village streets, woods, fields, streams, and over stiles on stilts. There are many ludicrous "situations."

Walturdaw Company.

There is an ever-increasing demand for the now popular Walturdaw specialities. Yesterday afternoon, while on a visit to the company's premises in Dane-street, Holborn, we met Mr. R. G. Knowles, who is purchasing Walturdaw films for use in his forthcoming lecturing tour.

The Cinematograph Syndicate.

Under this title a company has been formed to carry on the sale of high-class films. The address of the Cinematograph Syndicate is, 23, Cecil-court, Charing Cross-road, W.C., and, as will be seen from our advertisement columns, the company offer several very attractive animated picture productions, including three comical subjects, Tommy's Box of Tools, serving the Summons, In Quest of Health, and a very realistic one dealing with life on a battleship.

Possible Peace at Mitcham.

WE are glad to make the welcome announcement that negotiations with a view to an amicable settlement of the Mitcham Fair question have been again opened. At the present moment we can only state that the door is still open, and that both sides can walk through it to a round table conference, where the several parties concerned may adjust their differences, and a way may be found for both sides to petition the Home Secretary, and to get the fair (with all its charter rights and securities) removed to another and more suitable part of the Common. Great credit is due to Mr. Frederick Foss, chairman of the Board of Conservators, and to the Rev. T. Horne, chaplain to the Showmen's Guild, for the present hopeful outlook. Mr. Horne, on behalf of the organised showmen, has suggested to Mr. Foss that four members of the Mitcham Parish Council should confer with four Mitcham Conservators, and, if possible, arrange a satisfactory plan for the continuance and control of the fair. This being done, then for the united local authorities (the Conservators and the Parish Council, represented by the eight gentlemen, four from each body) to meet a deputation of four representatives of the Showmen's Guild at a round table conference, and after settling all minor details make a joint application to the Home Secretary for the proper transfer of the fair and the charter rights to a new site on the Common mutually satisfactory.

THESE preliminary suggestions will be laid by Mr. Foss before the Board of Conservators, and it is sincerely to be hoped that they may pave the way to a full and frank understanding, and that the people's fair at Mitcham may be continued to them under better conditions, and with increased usefulness to Mitcham, and to that still greater constituency, London on and over the border.

Ashton Wakes.

WHEN Ashton Wakes begins we are fast reaching the high tide of Lancashire pleasure holidays. When Oldham Wakes (due next week-end) begin it is indeed high tide—flush tide. For all Lancashire then is either just finishing or just beginning its annual holiday. Ashton-under-Lyne is in the heart of the cotton manufacturing district. The workers may be counted in thousands of thousands, and it is the Wakes in each separate town or village that fixes and determines the annual holidays. Ashton begins on Aug. 16, and lasts nearly a week. Capt. Tom Payne is an immense local favourite in Ashton, where he winters mostly, and where he has his home. Payne's Bioscope is a household word amongst Ashton folk, and right well the genial captain deserves his popularity, for his show is of the best. P. Collins's superb show, the coliseum of living and talking pictures, was a big success here, as everywhere else. J. Hastings's two shows, the giant lady Miss Lambert—"the adipose mountain"—and the charming miniature marvels, "the atoms of humanity," all justified their reputation as amongst the best of their kind now travelling. Walter Shaw's fine art academy, as usual, delighted its many patrons. The machine list was a big one, and included motor-car sets by Messrs. P. Collins and J. Green, galloping horse sets by J. Collins, James Hibbert and Sons, and W. Davies. J. Collins also exhibited the razzle-dazzle and steam yachts, and Harrison had his helter skelter on the ground. The minor novelties were George Cornwell's shooting concerns, and other shooters, J. White, Thwaits, and Mrs. John Cornwell. Throwing games and varieties by Messrs. T. Ingham, Mercer, Woodman, Jennings, Selden, Taylor, Brown, Mitchell, Cornwell, Griffin, Harrison, and many local caterers.

Horsforth Feast.

HELD under Mr. Wm. Murphy's banner, the village feast was in every way a big success this year. The lessee exhibited his grand new show, the portable empire of living pictures, and the superb machine set, the Gordon Bennett motor-cars. A. Morley exhibited steam swings and high-fliers, Messrs. Gledstone and Doubtfire juvenile motor-cars and horses, W. Radcliffe had shooting ranges, Messrs. Ashcroft and Gledstone bottle batteries, and there were varieties, penalty frames, coker sheets, and "All the Fun of the Fair" by Messrs. Fisher, Stewart, Peter, Ashcroft, Illingworth, Crowther, G. Campbell and others.

Guiseley Feast,

ON the same round as Horsforth, was well maintained by most of the concerns enumerated as being at Horsforth, Wm. Murphy's big show and motor-cars being the chief attractions.

Private Business at Evesham.

A MEMORIAL from the householders and occupiers of houses on Merston Green, the Evesham Fairground, was read at a recent meeting of the Town Council. The memorialists asked that means might be taken to prevent the letting of the fairground, except at the statute fair. Their objections to the shows at other times were fully set out. After discussion, Alderman Hughes proposed and Councillor Clifford seconded: "That the Council endeavour to arrange for another suitable place, and that in the meanwhile the present arrangements be continued." Alderman Morris moved and Councillor Cox seconded an amendment: "That no shows be permitted on Merston Green except at the time of the statute fair." This amendment was lost, and Alderman Hughes's proposition was carried. We think that it will be well, in the divided opinion of the Town Council, if showmen abstain from too frequent use of Merston Green at present. Certainly the statute fairs are too valuable to be endangered by private business ventures at other times.

Barnsley Summer Fair,

UNDER the banner of Tuby and Son, the local caterers, was a big success. Tuby's coliseum (manager, G. T. Tuby, jun.) was the great draw of the fair. Professor Ruby's X-Rays illusion and the No. 2 show, the freak exhibits, were the side-shows, and did good business. Tuby's motors and galloping horses, Marshall's motors, and Bentley's, Wildin's, and Smith's highfliers and swings were the other machines. Shooters, bottle batteries, varieties, and throwing games by Messrs. Westley, Smith, Cook, Howard, Cayton, West, and others

Drypool Feast, Hull.

THE star attraction at this excellent fixture was Ben Howden and Son's magnificent show, the coliseum of animated and talking pictures. Ben Howden and Son also exhibit their superb set, the Premier motor-cars and the miniature motor-car roundabouts. Corrigan and Son's helter-skelter and their other fairground novelties. Shipley's gallopers. Shooters, swings, and throwing games in Grand display by Messrs. Doubtfire, Black, Daynes, Cooper, Hide, Burgin, Hinde, Payne, Shipley, Hardy, Richards, Walker, Jacques, and others.

Aylesbury.

THE Star Theatre, under the direction of Mrs. Victoria Poulton and family, are about to open a long season in Aylesbury. The theatre visited the town about six years ago, when the excellence of the entertainments won for themselves a well-merited reputation, with the result that the élite of the neighbourhood patronised the performances as often as their poorer brethren.

Shaw Wakes.

THE annual holidays commenced last Friday, the mills closing, as usual, for a full week, and a larger number of inhabitants took advantage of the facilities offered by the railways, with the result that the various attractions provided for the public suffered to some extent. Col. Clark's classical entertainment occupied a prominent position, and did a fair share of business. Also to be seen were John Collins's electric motor-cars, Hurst's poultry yard, Richards' steam yachts, and numerous other games and attractions.

Aberdeen Beach "Zoo."

THIS small but ever-increasing and exceedingly well-selected collection has been extremely well patronised during the season by visitors and citizens generally. The "Zoo" is owned by Mr. John Sinclair, and housed in a particularly light, airy, and commodious structure. His lion and bear specimens are always particularly admired, and he is exceptionally strong in monkeys, of which there are several cagefuls. Mr. Sinclair is ever on the look-out for fresh exhibits, and no doubt before long he will have considerably to extend his premises.

The White City, Old Trafford.

MANAGING-DIRECTOR, Mr. John Calvin Brown; Asistant-General-Manager, Mr. Arthur Ellis.—Whatever the weather the attendances at this "park of fun" keeping increasing. This week's band is that of the Royal Garrison Artillery (Portsmouth Division), under the bâton of Mr. George Miller, jun. Gilleno's American Circus gives several enjoyable performances each afternoon and evening; Simbri, the illusionist, continues to bewilder good audiences in the Doge's Palace. The water pantomime, Fun at a Riverside Inn, by J. Dymond and C. Costella and company, is very comical. The Zingari Pierrots in the Bijou Theatre include Beatrice Barton, soubrette; Ethel Ludlow and Evelyn Jones, duettists and dancers; Annie Ludlow, contralto; Ethel Collier, descriptive vocalist and dancer; Will Hardy, mimic; and Harold Ride, comedian, who draw good houses. The large roller-skating rink and the handsome ballroom seem to be just what has been wanted in the district. Professor Williams' troupe of negroes are here again this week. The electric illuminations turn night into day all over the place.

IN answer to two correspondents we have to say that Oxford St. Giles Fair opens on Sept. 9. The date Sept. 2 given in our lists is an error.

OLDHAM WAKES begins next Saturday, and is on the last possible day it can fall with the octave of the Parish Feast.

NEGOTIATIONS re Mitcham are progressing quite satisfactorily. The Mitcham tenants who have received writs may rest assured that their interests are being well attended to, and that there is no cause for undue alarm.

GIVEN a good film and suitable premises, and a good living, perhaps even a fortune, is assured. At 65, Strand, which is called the Tivoli Tourist Station, a cinematograph film is shown illustrating 6,000 miles of travel. The places visited comprise the Niagara Falls, Japan, Switzerland, Canada, South of France, Italy, &c. Needless to say that the tour is much less expensive than a real Cook's tour. Sixpence is the fee charged. An able lecturer, Mr. Bannerman, describes the various places of interest visited in the course of the tour.

SIR ROBERT FOSSETT'S Circus visited Abertillery on Tuesday, giving two well-attended performances. New features have been added in Gaumont's non-flickering Bioscope and an installation of electric light.

The frame is vibrated by means of a connecting rod, crank, and suitable driving-mechanism. The bottom part of the track is stationary, and fits telescopically into a vibrating part. If the frame is to receive a circular oscillatory motion, it is suspended by a universal joint. In the rotary form the track is connected by lateral arms to a shaft which is mounted in ball bearings. The upper and lower stationary platforms are connected by the supporting columns, and access to the platform is obtained by means of a travelling stairway and stairs The track is connected to rotating platforms; one platform is divided by railings so as to form a circuitous approach to the track, and the other is supported by rollers. The track may be decorated to represent a tower or lighthouse.

INTERESTING WEDDING IN SHOWLAND.

In strict compliance with the wishes of the happy pair, the wedding of Mr. William Ball, son of Mr. Alf. Ball, of Bioscope renown, to Miss Ellen Holmes (professionally known as Mlle. Olga), was celebrated as quietly and as simply as possible. Only the members of the family and the intimate friends of the bride and bridegroom were invited to the marriage or permitted to know where it would take place. The marriage was celebrated on Monday last, Aug. 19, at the Registry Office of the Christ Church district, Greenwich, the witnesses being Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Ball, Mrs. Lily Ball, and Mr. J. Manley. The wedding breakfast took place at Mrs. Dennis's, Tanners-hill, Deptford. The bride was accompanied by four charming maids, garbed in white silk. The bride herself was robed entirely in white. In the early evening the happy couple went to Brighton to spend a brief honeymoon. The father and mother of the bridegroom presented them with a cheque for £100; Mrs. Dawton, of Farnborough (aunt of the bridegroom), a cheque for £100. Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Ball's gifts to the bride were gold watch and chain and a diamond ring; Mrs. and Mr. Holmes (father and mother of the bride), silver teapot and copper kettle; Mr. and Mrs. Dennis, cosy armchair. There were also numerous other presents from intimate friends, and from the artists and working staff of the show.

Mr. William Ball is partner with his father in the magnificent "New Lyceum," built to their order by Gavioli et Cie, of Paris (one of the finest portable cinematograph theatres now on the road). Whilst Alf. Ball is at the front his clever son, Mr. Wm. Ball operates the Bioscope and takes complete charge of the electric light installation. Mrs. Wm. Ball (née Miss Ellen Holmes) was for some years one of the Maddrillo duo, known as "Maud and Olga," in original trapeze and high-perch acts. She toured France, Germany, Italy, Spain, and Great Britain. About three years ago, at the end of her apprenticeship with Maddrillo, she joined Mr. Alf. Ball's clever company of variety artists. Mr. Wm. Ball is an example of the younger generation of showmen who bring into the business the advantages of a thoroughly sound and practical public school education. Although born a showman, he did not follow the show until he was sixteen years of age. He speedily grasped all the possibilities of the enterprise, and is now, with his charming wife, entitled to be ranked amongst the most up-to-date entertainers on the road. We wish to join most heartily in the universal chorus of good wishes to the happy pair.

THE GLORIES OF MITCHAM FAIR.

All previous records, even that of last year's Fair, were broken at this last celebration of the old Charter Fair in "Lavender Land." Not only did Mitcham and the neighbouring villages go, as in times long past, to their own fair, but nearly all Croydon and Tooting and a multitude from great London Town went down to see the fun. It is no exaggeration to say that twice as many people as heretofore went this year to join in the local celebration on the historic Fairground, and to patronise the persistent showmen, whose business enterprise had provided two overflow fairgrounds. The Surrey County Police are worthy of all praise for their admirable arrangements, which adequately provided not only for the handling of vast crowds, but also prevented any accidents to life or limb by laborious and patient point duty where the road traffic cut through the crowds.

The Humour of the Situation.

Your so-called "stolid John Bull" is at heart a most humorous fellow. It is a huge mistake to regard him as being either heavy or dull. No crowd in the world is quicker to catch the humour of a situation than a British crowd. Other crowds may be more volatile, more fantastical in their mirth, but your Briton has a large sense of humour, and, better still, large reserves of tolerant good nature. London went out to Mitcham to enjoy itself at the fair. London also went out to Lavender Land to show by the power of numbers its admiration of the plucky stand made by the show-people for their ancient privilege of attending the fair in accordance with the charter. London also went out to Mitcham to show its fellowship with the people of Mitcham in the fight that has raged so long for the preservation of the fair, and to show that the fair still supplies a public need—that on the score of public utility alone it has a strong claim for both continuance and for betterment. The Home Secretary is reported to have said "that in any decision about abolishing the fair he had in the public interest to consider not only the people of Mitcham and neighbouring villages, but also the people of South London who, in his opinion, needed such opportunities of open-air amusement as that afforded by Mitcham Fair."

South London went out to Mitcham and joined with "Mitchamites" and "Croydonites" in "all the jolly fun."

The Shows at Mitcham.

Alf. Ball and Son's magnificent new show, "the new lyceum" of animated photography, was situated on the London-road, on a piece of private land; Thurston and Sons' superb electric coliseum was also on a private pitch, with other show novelties controlled by this up-to-date firm. Both these exhibitions were crowded with delighted audiences at every performance. Messrs. C. Bailey and Knighton, Edward Elliott and school of boxers, Sol. Elliott's similar concern, and the variety show, with the star turn of the wrestling lady, all did good business.

The Machines at Mitcham.

Swale Forrest's aggregation of novelties included the Japanese airships, the "wheely-whirly" machine, and the overboats; Tom Harniess, with the late Charles Bailey's magnificent machine, the gondola, and racing motors; Francis Bailey, jun., galloping horses; Thurston and Sons' big machines, the motor track, the galloping horses, and the helter-skelter; T. Pettigrove, steam horses, swings, and varieties; Mrs. Bird's set of galloping horses; and juvenile sets by Messrs. Lang, J. Wilson, Mayne, and Simpson; manual swings and varieties by Messrs. Stenning, Simpson, and Bird.

Shooting Ranges and Varieties.

These were provided by a big crowd of entertainers, prominent amongst them being T. Knighton, S. Mayne, the Peters Family, the Bolesworths, J. Wilson, Wm. Stenning, Stackwood, Harris Family, H. Clasper, the Bond Family, the Elliott Family, Traylen, Taylor, the Castle Family, the Bird Family, the Pettigroves, Tyler, and many others.

There were the usual attendant throng of kerbstone merchants, the peripatetic vendors of penny novelties. One smart penny "chat" vendor had on sale Japanese handkerchiefs, whereon was printed part of the Showmen's Guild manifesto in defence of the fair. This pennyworth of up-to-date literature went like the proverbial hot cakes, the literary matter on the sheet being lifted (without permission) from our own columns of the issue of the week before the fair.

We are told that never in the history of the village has such good trade all round been known. The local traders are all staunch defenders of the fair. Prominent public men who have kept out of the controversy, and have been strictly neutral hitherto, have personally satisfied themselves by visiting the fair, and witnessing the innocent enjoyment of the people, that it fulfils a most useful purpose.

These moderate-minded men, it is confidently anticipated, will greatly influence the movement for a peaceful settlement of the question at issue between the abolitionists and the defenders of the fair. Their mediation at this juncture will have the best possible effect, and we now confidently anticipate a just settlement, on the lines of removal, and not extinction of, the fair.

The Guild Service.

With the consent and blessing of the Vicar of Mitcham, the Guild Chaplain conducted the service of the Guild on the fairground. Over two thousand people were present, and the behaviour of the crowd was most attentive and devout. The sermon of the Chaplain on the parable of the "Pharisee and the Publican," taken from the Holy Gospel for the day, was preached with the well-known vigour and aptness of illustration that marks Mr. Horne's pulpit oratory. It was a memorable as well as a unique event. The show-people were there in full numbers, and the whole service was a remarkable evidence of the general appreciation of the religious and educational side of the work of the Guild.

MR. F. E. TONGE, late of Savoy and Lyric Theatres, has joined Miss May Clifton and company, who are appearing at the Middlesex next week.

THE proprietor of the Northwich Pavilion had to do the best he could for his patrons this week, and under the adverse circumstances has done well. The Russian troupe of dancers are an exceedingly clever quartette, and richly deserved the rapturous encores they gained; Mr. W. Glanmore Jones again pleased the audience with his sweet singing; genial Will Harvey is most amusing, both in his songs and jokes, and his playing on the musical glasses is really wonderful; and Mr. Frank Horton, who is a local man, met with tremendous success.

A GRAND fête de théâtre was held on Tuesday on Tagg's Island, in the place of the annual invitation regatta promoted by the Molesey Boat Club. The chief feature was a concert arranged by Mr. Henry A. Lytton, of the Savoy, in which about fifty members of the Savoy company took part. A special variety entertainment was also given by Mr. Fred Karno's well-known troupe. There were numerous outside shows, including a display with sabres and bayonets by a detachment of the 1st Dragoon Guards stationed at Hampton Court Palace, a fire brigade display by the brigades of Hampton Court and East and West Molesley, and log-rolling on the Thames. In the evening fire balloons were liberated, and the island was illuminated with electric light.

SHOWMEN'S CONCERT AT PAISLEY FAIR.

It was in the wee sma' hours of Friday morning. The Paisley show ground seemed deserted; only the flapping of canvas and creaking of wood, with the occasional song of some belated reveller, disturbed the silence; where but an hour ago all was bustle and excitement, now seemed strangely still. The laughing, hurrying, good-natured crowd of merry-makers had gone, slowly, almost reluctantly, wending their way homewards, the last naphtha lamp had been extinguished, the arc lamps had gone out with a fluttering sigh, as if glad their night's work was over, the roundabouts, helter-skelters, and shows loomed strangely large and eerie in the darkness that heralded the dawn of another day, when from living vans, from refreshment tents and booths, came the entertainers of millions of people, anxious to be entertained, in ones, in twos, in little groups—some with evidence of their day's toil clearly shown in unwashed faces and soiled clothes, others with a tired look in their eyes that bespoke a want of sleep, for, like the farmers, they, too, must make hay whilst the sun or arc lamps shine. But all faces wore a pleasant smile, cheery cries of recognition disturbed the solitude of night, as they wended their way in the direction of Mr. Henderson's show, for this was the occasion of the showmen's annual concert. Quietly, orderly, they entered and took their seats, for the showmen, in private life at least, respect themselves and those who endeavour to assist them. The concert was held under the auspices of the British Women's Temperance Association, whom the showmen are always pleased to recognise. Mr. A. Henderson kindly acted as chairman, and was supported by Mr. J. Caddick.

The chairman, in the opening speech, referred to the good work done by the B.W.T.A., and Miss Bell in particular, amongst show people, to which Miss Bell suitably responded.

The concert then proceeded with the fine rendering of the famous American song, "Take me back to the old plantation," sung by Mr. J. Styles. Miss Merrick's song, "Shela," was given in good style. Dan. Lewis amused with a coon song. George Merrick, with a quaint way of his own, gave a capital imitation of Little Tich in his great success, "We close at two on Thursday." Mrs. Roberts, the Misses Boswell, and Mrs. Carter all sang sweetly. Mr. A. Henderson obliged with a capital recitation, entitled "Ostler Joe." Messrs. Kelly, Dunn, Quinn, A. Henderson, jun., and W. Henderson all met with a good reception for their excellent singing of popular songs, making up a splendid programme, which only ended shortly before the advent of the early morning milkman.

A collection was taken for Miss Millington's paper, the Caravan.—The Paisley Daily Express, Aug. 13, 1907.

SHOW CHILDREN'S TREAT AT PAISLEY FAIR.

As many of our readers know, the British Women's Temperance Association take a special interest in those knights and ladies of the road who minister to the amusement of the citizens at fair time, and run a tent for refreshments at the show grounds. On the invitation of the ladies of the Association meetings were held on Sunday evening for the travellers and for the children, and were largely attended, and most successful.

The children were entertained to tea in the B.W.T.A. Tent, under the chairmanship of Mr. Alex. Lang, who afterwards delivered a most interesting and instructive address on Daniel. At the close of the meeting each child was presented with a lovely little bouquet of flowers, the gift of Mrs. R. K. Bell, Middlepark. An opportunity was given to take the temperance pledge, and many of the older children did so.

The meeting for the older people was held in Mr. M'Indoe's show, kindly lent, and there was a very large attendance. Mrs. Coats, the president of the Society, occupied the chair, and was accompanied to the platform by several members of the committee, the Rev. J. Porteous, Mr. John Slack, and Mr. and Mrs. Wilmot, Mr. A. Henderson, and Mr. Styles. After tea, Mrs. Coats welcomed the travellers in the name of the Association, and expressed the pleasure it gave her and the other ladies to meet them there again.

Thereafter, addresses were delivered by the Rev. Mr. Porteous and Mr. J. Slack, which were listened to with close attention and highly appreciated.

Miss Helen Wilmot stated that the amount collected at the travellers' concert, and afterwards at the show ground, together with £2 collected at Bridge-of-Allan, amounted in all to £11 4s. 0½d. Of this sum £2 2s. was to be given to the Paisley Infirmary, and the balance, £9 2s. 0½d., was to be sent to Miss Millington for the Caravan, the travellers' newspaper.

Short addresses were then given by Mr. A. Henderson and Mr. Styles, thanking the ladies for their hospitality and their constant interest in the travellers, and expressing their interest in the temperance cause.

Solos were sung during the evening by Miss L. Scott and Mr. M'Luskie, and Mrs. Pollock presided at the piano.

At the close of the meeting flowers were distributed to all those present, and the temperance pledge was taken by sixteen of the travellers, among whom there are now many pledged abstainers.

Miss Millington, of York, sent a letter of kindly greeting, the reading of which was received with great applause, referring to the work done by the temperance quarterly, the Caravan. Miss Millington said: "How I should like to tell you how much I appreciate your kind, never-failing help for the Caravan, and how much I thank you for it. I feel I can never be grateful enough for it. Now, during the hot weather keep your pledge; don't be bossed by any weak-backed friend to touch the drink at all. I am wandering in my mind amongst you at Paisley: let us grip each other's hand for auld lang syne, climbing the hill Difficulty, and the end of the journey will be eternal life."—Paisley Daily Express, Aug. 13, 1907.
